Ω

Ω, ὦ, τό, twenty-fourth and last letter of the Ionic alphabet, *ἀπὸ ἄλφα ἕως .ω. Gloss.*iii 283 (IX A.D.); thence used as a symbol of the end, the last, ἐγώ εἰμι τὸ ἄλφα καὶ τὸ ὦ (not τὸ ὦ μέγα) *Apoc.*1.8, al. :—as a numeral ω' = 800, but ,ω = 800,000. The epichoric Att. and other alphabets of the Inscrr. had used o indifferently to represent the sounds of the later o and ω : Ω is a differentiated form of o, and, though usu. = ω, was used in the Ionic islands of Paros, Thasos, and Siphnos with the value o, while O or Θ represented the sound ω. The name of the letter was τὸ ὦ (perispom. acc. to Hellad.ap.Phot.p.530 B.), cf. Achae.33.3, Pl.*Phdr.*244d, Cra. 420b, *Tht.*203c : after the loss of the distinction betw. long and short vowels, o and ω had the same pronunciation; they begin to be confused in Papyri of iii B.C. (*οἰκονόμου PRev.Laws*50.22 (iii B.C.)), but the name ω μέγα appears first in later Greek, Theognost.Can. 13; κατὰ σχῆμα διπλοῦ ω̄ ἤτοι μεγάλου Eust.869.26; οἱ δὲ περὶ Ἀρίσταρχον αὐτὸ τὸ ποτήριον ω̄ μέγα εἶναί φασιν, ὁποῖον ἴσως τὸ κατὰ δύο ῡ ἐσχηματισμένον Id.869.29; ἐν τῷ ω̄ μεγάλῳ under omega (in a lexicon), Id.1828.49 : διὰ τοῦ ω̄ μεγάλου Hdn.*Epim.*208.

A. ADVERB of Manner:

Aa. ὥς, Demonstr., = οὕτως, so, thus, freq. in Hom., Il.1.33, al.; ὣς εἰπ' Sapph.*Supp.*20*a*.11 (Epic style); in Ion. Prose, Hdt.3.13, al.; rare in Att., and almost confined to certain phrases, v. infr.2, 3; ὥς simply = οὕτως, A.*Ag.*930, Th.3.37, Pl.*Prt.*338a; ἀλλ' ὡς γενέσθω E.*Hec.*888, al. 2. καὶ ὣς even so, nevertheless, Il.1.116, al.; οὐδ' ὣς not even so, 7.263, Od.1.6, al., Hdt.6.76; οὐδέ κεν ὣς Il.9.386: the phrases καὶ ὣς, οὐδ' ὣς, μηδ' ὣς, are used in Trag. and Att., S.*Ant.*1042, Th.1.74, 7.74; also later, *PCair.Zen.*19.10 (iii B.C., unaccented), *UPZ*146.40 (ii B.C.), GDI 1832.11 (Delph., ii B.C.), *IG*2^2.850.17 (iii B.C.); *κἂν ὣς, εἴπερ μέλει σοι, ἀπόστειλόν μοί τινα POxy.*120.11 (iv A.D.); *δουλεύων καθὼς καὶ ὣς GDI*2160 (Delph., ii B.C.); Thess. *καὶ οὕς IG*9(2).234.1 (iii B.C.); for this phrase the accentuation ὣς is prescribed by Hdn.Gr.2.932, al., cf. A.D.*Synt.*307.16, and is found in good Mss. of Homer; for the remaining uses under this head (Aa. 1, 3, 4) the accentuation ὥς is prescribed by the same grammarians. 3. in Comparisons, ὥς.., ὡς.., so.. as.., etc.; and reversely ὡς.., ὣς.., as.. so, Il.1. 512, 14.265, etc.; in Att., Pl.*R.*530d; also *ὥς τε..ὣς.., as..thus.., h.Cer.*174–6, E.*Ba.*1066–8; οἷα..ὥς Id.*El.*151–5; ὥσπερ.., ὡς δὲ.. (in apodosi) Pl.*Prt.*326d. 4. thus, for instance, Od.5.129, h.Ven. 218; ὥς shd. be accented in Od.5.121,125.

Ab. ὡς, Relat., as, Hom., etc.; prop. relat. to a demonstr. Adv., which is freq. omitted, κινήθη δ' ἀγορὴ ὡς κύματα μακρὰ θαλάσσης, i.e. οὕτως, ὡς.., Il.2.144 (φὴ Zenod.): it is relat. not only to the regular demonstr. Usage: I. in similes, freq. in Hom., Il.5.161, al.; longer similes are commonly introduced by ὡς ὅτε, ὡς δ' ὅτε, ἤριπε δ', ὡς ὅτε πύργος [ἤριπε] 4.462: ἤριπε δ', ὡς ὅτε τις δρῦς ἤριπε 13.389, cf. 2.394; so later, Emp.84.1, etc.; ὡς ὅτε θαητὸν μέγαρον, πάξομεν Pi.*O.*6.2: ὡς ὅτε is rare in short similes, Od.11.368: ὡς is folld. by indic. pres., Il.9.4, 16.364: also by aor., 3.33 sq., 4.275, 16.823, al.; also by subj. pres. or aor., 5.161, 10.183, 485, 13.334 (sts. ὡς δ' ὅτ' ἄν, 11.269, 17.520); cf. ὥστε A:—the Verb is sts. omitted with ὡς, but may be supplied from the context, ἐνδούπησε πεσοῦσ', ὡς εἰναλίη κήξ (sc. πίπτει) Od.15.479, cf. 6.20; θεὸς δ' ὣς τίετο δήμῳ Il.5.78; οἱ δὲ φέβοντο.., βόες ὣς ἀγελαῖαι Od.22.299: where ὡς follows the noun to which it refers, it takes the accent; so in Com., Ἀριστόδημος ὥς Cratin.151, cf. H. Etymology: this word is in origin five distinct words:

(1) ὡς 'as' is the Adv. fr. the Relat. ὅς (I.-E. stem yo-); with ὡς βέλτιστος cf. Skt. yācchrēṣṭáḥ 'the best possible': (2) ὧς 'thus' is the Adv. of a Demonstr. stem so- found in Skt. sa, Gr. ὁ, Lat. sō-c (Gloss. = ita, cf. Umbr. esoc); (3) ὡς postpositive (ὄρνιθες ὥς, etc.) constantly makes a preceding short closed syll. long in Hom., and must therefore have been ϝως; it may perh. be related to Skt. vā, a form of va, iva (= (1) or (2) like), Lat. ve, Gr. ἦ[ϝ]ε; (4) ὡς prep. 'to' is of doubtful origin (perh. fr. *ὠς, cogn. with Lat. ōs 'face', Skt. ās: *ὥς τινα ἐλθεῖν like τί δέ σε φρένας ἵκετο πένθος;); (5) ὡς F.3 is prob. *ϝως, Adv. of ϝός the reflexive Adj., and means lit. in his (their) own way (or place); it is idiomatically placed before ἕκαστος (ἑκάτερος), cf. *ϝὸν ϝεκάτερος Leg.Gort.*1.18.

ὡς, τό, gen. ὠτός, Dor. for οὖς, Theoc.11.32; also a Hellenistic nom. analogically formed fr. ὠτός, ὠτί, etc. (v. οὖς), Inscr. Délos 1403 Bb 1.77, 1409 Aa 1.106 (both ii B.C.).

PREFACE

The Greek–English Lexicon of Liddell and Scott was first published in 1843. In the 150 years which have passed since then it has gone through nine editions, the last being augmented by a Supplement published in 1968. This Supplement incorporated a considerable amount of new material, mainly taken from inscriptions and papyri, and also 'a good deal of information pertaining to literary sources, where the systematic reading of new editions, or ordinary consultation by scholars, has revealed the lexicon to be in need of revision'.

It had fallen to Dr M. L. West to see that Supplement through the press, and after its publication he kept custody of the slips from which it was printed and a collection of material that had been excluded from it. He did not undertake any further lexicographical work, but served as a receiving-point for any new material that happened to be sent to the Press. When he left Oxford in 1974 to take up a chair in London, he passed the archive to Mr (now Prof.) M. D. Reeve, then a Fellow of Exeter College.

In January 1979 Dr West presented to the British Academy a proposal for the preparation of a new Supplement. After some discussion a committee was set up to plan and cost the project in detail. It consisted of the following members: Prof. M. L. West (chairman), Prof. R. Browning, Dr J. Chadwick, Prof. A. M. Davies, the late Prof. D. M. Lewis, and Mr (now Prof.) P. J. Parsons. Early in 1981 the Council of the Academy, having come to an agreement with Oxford University Press, accepted the proposal and adopted the Supplement as one of the Academy's Major Research Projects. It was agreed that the project would run for ten years, and that a full-time editor would be needed. The post was advertised, and Mr P. G. W. Glare, who had amply proved his lexicographical competence and stamina by his labours on the Oxford Latin Dictionary, was appointed with effect from 1 August 1981. The Project Committee continued to monitor progress throughout with its original membership unchanged, except for the addition of Mr N. G. Wilson in 1989, and with the regular attendance at its meetings of representatives of the Press and of the British Academy.

In 1988, when it became clear that the undertaking was considerably greater than had at first been supposed, Dr Anne Thompson was appointed to the project as part-time Editorial Associate. Later in the same year Dr Carolinne White also joined the staff with the special function of checking the references, and proof-reading the print-out at all stages; she also became mainly responsible for the compilation of the lists at the beginning of the Supplement. Mrs Lorna Lyons acted as Secretary/Assistant throughout and, among multifarious duties, was entirely responsible for the keying-in of the text.

Much new material has become available since the publication of the first Supplement, and the incorporation of this is again the main aim of the new Supplement. The question of revision is altogether more complicated and re-examination of the entries in the first Supplement revealed the need to redraft many of them. How far revision of the main Lexicon should proceed is a more difficult question. It was evident from an examination of them that many articles require a more drastic rewriting than can be achieved by the addition, exclusion, or alteration of individual items. Minor changes may in fact only highlight shortcomings in the original articles.

For this reason and in view of the restricted staff and time available it has proved impossible to revise many articles which can now be seen to require changes. In a few cases new articles have been substituted for those appearing in the Lexicon, but these are mostly short ones. In longer articles it has been necessary to restrict changes to those which could be made within the existing framework of the article. It must also be explained that, although electronic retrieval facilities became available soon after the commencement of work on the Supplement, a systematic use of these was not made, since it would have involved a complete change in the scale and nature of the project.

At the time of the publication of the first Supplement it was felt that the Ventris decipherment of the Linear B tablets was still too uncertain to warrant the inclusion of these texts in a standard dictionary. Ventris's interpretation is now generally accepted and the tablets can no longer be ignored in a comprehensive Greek dictionary; however, for reasons explained in a note appended to this preface, Mycenaean forms are not included in the body of the articles, but attached at the end. Words written in the Cyprian syllabary are quoted in transcription as well as in a reconstructed alphabetical form, since the latter may be misleading. References to these have also been brought up to date.

The new inscriptions include many early ones in dialect, and advances in the classification and understanding of dialects since the last edition of Liddell and Scott mean that the information given in LSJ is not always reliable. While every effort has been made to explain new dialect forms and words, on many points recourse must be made to specialist works.

Words not already in LSJ but included in A Patristic Greek Lexicon (ed. Lampe, Oxford 1961) have not normally been added unless they help to explain related words which are in LSJ/Supplement. At the same time some words noted only from patristic sources, but used in a general, i.e. non-patristic/ecclesiastical sense, have been included if they have been overlooked by Lampe.

The occasional etymological notes in LSJ are frequently out of date. No attempt has been made to bring them up to date and readers are referred to the standard etymological dictionaries of Chantraine (Dictionnaire Étymologique de la Langue Grecque, Paris 1968) and Frisk (Griechisches Etymologisches Wörterbuch, Heidelberg 1960–70).

At the time of completion of this Supplement three fascicles of a new Spanish dictionary (Diccionario griego-español Madrid, 1980–) have been published and these have been consulted with profit for those parts of the alphabet which they cover. New abbreviations in the Supplement have, where possible, been chosen to match those of the Spanish dictionary.

New words in the first Supplement were distinguished by the prefix of a cross(*); this practice has been continued, and in addition an upright cross (†) has been used to indicate those entries from the main dictionary which have been totally rewritten. A prefixed ° indicates a cross-reference to an article elsewhere in the Supplement, and ‡ means that readers should refer to the word so marked in both the Supplement and the main dictionary.

Vowel quantities are indicated on the same principles as in the main dictionary. To avoid misunderstanding all words in the new Supplement are so marked, not, as in the old Supplement, only the new entries. An exception is made in the case of late borrowings from Latin. At the time the borrowings were made the distinction of length was breaking down in both Latin and Greek, and to mark them according to classical principles would be meaningless. A number of other small changes have been made in printing conventions in line with modern practice and in the interests of greater clarity. Some of these will be found in the list of abbreviations; the rest are self-explanatory and will cause no problems.

New editions of texts are noted in the lists of Authors and Works, etc. References to them in the articles are normally indicated by the initial of the editor. No attempt has been made to update the references in the main work, except where a substantial change of text is involved, or in order to make cross-references consistent, or very occasionally where the original source of quotation is particularly difficult of access.

Thanks must go to the many scholars who have supplied material for the new Supplement. In particular, the bulk of the epigraphical material was collected by Dr Thompson. Substantial contributions in the field of papyrology were received from Dr Helen Cockle, Dr Revel Coles, and Vincent McCarren. Ivars Avotins contributed legal material, and generously made available the typescript of his book On the Greek of the Novels of Justinian in advance of publication. Prof. J. O. Urmson sent the typescript of his book The Greek Philosophical Vocabulary. Dr Elizabeth Tucker undertook the task of searching periodicals published since the last Supplement for extra material. The text has been read all or in part by Dr L. Holford-Strevens, Prof. Robert Renehan, and Dr Rudolf Wachter. Technical help with computing was given in the early stages by Dr Timothy Ashplant and since 1986 by Dr Jonathan Moffett. To all of these much gratitude is due.

The British Academy, by making annual grants from 1981 to 1992, has borne by far the largest share of the research costs of the project. Various other bodies have given single or multiple subventions, namely: Oxford University Press; the Jowett Copyright Trust; the Cambridge Classics Faculty; the Craven Committee; the Gaisford Memorial Fund; All Souls and Christ Church Colleges, Oxford; Trinity, Gonville & Caius, and St John's Colleges, Cambridge. The generosity of all these is gratefully acknowledged.

NOTE ON MYCENAEAN AND CYPRIAN ENTRIES

The inclusion in an alphabetically arranged Lexicon of words spelled in a syllabic script raises obvious problems; this note is designed to explain the principles applied. The later editions of Liddell and Scott were able to record some of the new words and forms discovered by the decipherment of the Cyprian script by the simple expedient of devising a reconstruction which could be spelt in the Greek alphabet. This method is not satisfactory owing to the difficulty in some cases of selecting from a number of possible transcriptions. It was therefore decided to revise all such entries, and to insert as well as the alphabetic reconstruction the actual syllabic spelling, transliterated by the accepted system.

The decipherment of the Linear B script presented the same problem in a more acute form, so it was decided to include only a note of the corresponding Mycenaean form, usually at the end of an article, to warn the user that the word occurred in the Linear B texts. Here too the standard transliteration of the syllabic spelling is given, together with the probable reconstruction; but here the difficulty of choice is far greater, and such forms must be treated with suitable caution.

The two scripts are, despite considerable differences in both form and usage, clearly related, so it is convenient to describe them together. Both have signs for the five simple vowels, with no means of distinguishing vowel length, and for a range of consonants followed by each of the vowels. In both scripts the three orders of stops, unvoiced unaspirated, unvoiced aspirated, and voiced, are written with one series of signs, so that the choice is left to the reader. Thus a sign transcribed ka may be found in a reconstructed word as κα, χα or γα, pa as πα, φα or βα. However, although in Cyprian ta, te, etc. stand for τα, θα, δα, τε, θε, δε and so forth, Mycenaean has two series of signs, one restricted to the unvoiced, the other to the voiced dental stop. They are therefore transcribed ta, te, etc. in one case, but da, de in the other.

The other consonant series correspond to the appropriate Greek letter, with some exceptions. Mycenaean has only one series for liquids, transcribed ra, re, etc., but equivalent to λα, λε as well as ρα, ρε. In Cyprian these two sounds are allotted separate series of signs. The semi-vowel corresponding to the Greek digamma is regularly used in both dialects, and the signs are transcribed wa, we, etc. (in older publications also va, ve in Cyprian). This can be used, like ϝ, to indicate a glide sound between υ and another vowel. Another semi-vowel, ja, je, etc. (also transcribed ya, ye) is used in both scripts to indicate the glide between ι and another vowel. But Mycenaean also uses this device to represent diphthongal ι before another vowel.

Another peculiarity of Mycenaean is the existence of a fourth series of signs for stops, which represents the inherited labio-velar sounds, which survived into Latin in the spellings qu and gu. These are conventionally transcribed qa, qe, etc. and must be understood to represent sounds such as k^wa, k^we, kh^wa, kh^we, g^wa, g^we, etc. Since there are no letters in the Greek alphabet for such sounds, reconstructed forms have been given in the spelling which such words show in classical times. Thus Mycenaean -qe will be found under τε, qa-si-re-u under βασιλεύς.

Both scripts have some additional signs with special values, some of which are disputed. Cyprian has a sign previously transcribed za, but now known to have the value ga; see γῆ, ἀγαθός. The value of zo is still unclear, but xa, xe correspond to Greek ξα, ξε. Mycenaean has many more abnormal signs: a number of doublets, probably all with special values, such as a_2 = ἁ, a_3 = αι, ra_3 = ραι, λαι. There is also a sign with the value au. The exact value of the signs transcribed ra_2, ro_2 is still uncertain, but it seems historically to continue rya, lya, ryo, lyo. The sign pu_2 usually has the value of φυ, and there is a special sign with the value pte (πτε).

Clusters of consonants in both scripts are written by adding extra vowels: Cypr. ka-si-ke-ne-to-se = κασιγνέτος, Myc. a-re-ku-tu-ru-wo = Ἀλεκτρύων. Double consonants are not written. In Cyprian a nasal is regularly omitted in writing before another consonant; in Mycenaean this principle is extended to include liquids (λ, ρ), sibilants (σ) and diphthongal ι. Thus Myc. e-ka-ra = ἐσχάρα, e-ko-si = probably ἔχονσι as in Arcadian.

The peculiarities of grammar and the scripts may be seen in specialist handbooks, such as C. D. Buck, The Greek Dialects, Chicago, 1955 for Cyprian, and M. Ventris and J. Chadwick, Documents in Mycenaean Greek, 2nd edn. Cambridge, 1973 or E. Vilborg, A Tentative Grammar of Mycenaean Greek, Göteborg, 1960. In the vocabulary there are a number of new words, mostly compounds which have no direct representative in classical Greek. These have been listed under a reconstructed form in the Greek alphabet, prefixed by an asterisk. Thus to-ko-do-mo is entered under *τοιχοδόμος, which although hitherto unattested must have existed as the noun on which the verb τοιχοδομέω is built. A new verb related to κτίζω is recorded under that form, since its 1st person singular is unknown; it does, however, explain the formation of Homeric ἐυκτίμενος. Likewise a verb meaning 'to row' is related to ἐρέσσω, but lacks the suffix -σσ-. The more speculative additions to the vocabulary have not been entered.

A fuller account of the evidence for particular Greek words in Mycenaean will be found in J. Chadwick and L. Baumbach 'The Mycenaean Greek Vocabulary', Glotta, 41 (1963) 157–271, also L. Baumbach, Glotta, 49 (1971) 151–190. For words in Mycenaean spelling there is now the Diccionario micénico (Diccionario griego-español, anejo) by F. Aura Jorro, Madrid 1985–93.
