9349 bhaginī- f. 'sister' Mn., °nikā- f. Kathās. [J. Gonda AO xxi 23 supports derivation from BHAGA-[2] 'vulva' (which, if it belongs to the 'crooked' or 'defective' word-groups of BHAṄGURÁ- or VAṄKA-[2], might with a variant bhagha- account for baghinī-* ~ bhaginī-). But EWA ii 460 sees in it more prob. the feminine of bhagin- as an expression of good wish — bhuguḥ kaninām of RV. i 103, 8 — to an unwed sister (note that in NIA. bhaginī- is usu. the younger sister). The transference of aspiration from the initial to the interior presents difficulty, unless as a conscious avoidance of similarity with bhaga-[2] 'vulva'. The argument in AO xxi 30 that no baghinī-* is attested and that therefore the transference could have occurred only at the stage bhaiṅī- is not conclusive that a form baghinī-* never in fact existed between the age of Aśoka and the first emergence of Pk. bahiṇi-.
