BOOK REVIEWS***

Hethitisch-Deutsches Wörterverzeichnis mit einem semasiologischen Index. By Johann Tischler. Innsbrucker Beiträge zur Sprachwissenschaft, vol. 39. Innsbruck: Institut für Sprachwissenschaft der Universität Innsbruck, 1982. Pp. iii + 153. öS 280.

This book does not and cannot claim to be a complete Hittite-German dictionary; its size, layout, and aim do not allow it to be such a work, and thus Tischler modestly calls it "Wörterverzeichnis" (henceforth HDW). In spite of these limitations, it does fill a gap in Hittitology, since J. Friedrich's Hethitisches Wörterbuch is not only outdated but is also out of print, and also because the ongoing Dictionary Projects in Munich and Chicago are progressing slowly. It will serve as a quick reference for students in their daily class preparation without involving them in the "torment" of scholarly disputes which appear in the traditional dictionaries. To advanced Hittitologists, however, the HDW offers only limited aid, since they already have, or are expected to have, their own file system or at least to have interleaved the first edition of HW and made their own "Wörterverzeichnis," which is probably at least as comprehensive as Tischler's HDW.

* Permission to reprint a book review in this section may be obtained only from the author.

I would like to start this review with the warning to all the users of HDW that it is a tentative undertaking and has many shortcomings which can be avoided only through an awareness of their existence. Some of these shortcomings are, of course, due to the nature of the subject not the fault of the author. First, the selection of the words and their cognates with their terse, general German rendering and without any discussion of semantics or any references makes it difficult to determine who proposed a given meaning and its reliability. Second, the exclusion of verba composita, i.e., verbs with so-called preverbs and the usage of particles which not only modify the meaning of lexemes but in some cases change it totally is another weakness. The stem of the words under which Tischler places his lexical entities is also often chosen arbitrarily. To me, however, the most serious flaw of the HDW is its exclusion of the words of non-Hittite origin, i.e., Sumerian and Akkadian logograms and, with many exceptions, Akkadian, Hurrian, and Hattic words, thus giving the curious impression that Hittite had only a restricted vocabulary, devoid of many important expressions, for as we know, a great deal of Hittite vocabulary consisted of words hidden behind logograms (for example, J. A. Knudtzon, without any knowledge of Hittite, could give an approximate translation of two letters from Amarna as early as 1902). This is rather like a French dictionary without words of Latin origin or an Ottoman dictionary without Arabic and Persian words. It is possible that Tischler intended this presentation, falling under the influence of the German custom of separating vocabulary into "German words" and "foreign words"; this method occurs in major dictionaries such as Duden. I would prefer that the foreign words or logograms not be given in a separate section, as is done in the traditional dictionaries (HW, HW, CHD); instead, they might ideally be interwoven into the main body of the dictionary, as in E. H. Sturtevant's Hittite Glossary and early text editions by A. Goetze; after all, ancient speakers were not aware of the distinctions imposed by modern linguists.

A short glance into the "semasiologischer Index," the most valuable and useful part of the book, clearly reflects a rather incomplete listing of words; for example under 3.1, the reader looks in vain for the words for "cow," "sheep," "pig," "horse," etc., animals which made up the most basic element of the Hittite economy. The words given, such as hawi-"Schaf," huntari- "Schwein?," iyant- "Schaf," maya- "Pferd," and pittiyauwaš ANŠE.KUR. RA.MEŠ "Rennpferde," do not reflect the logograms UDU, ŠAH, and ANŠE.KUR.RA; in the case of sheep, the complemented form UDU-un excludes both hawi- and iyant-.

In the following I restrict my remarks to the words beginning with E, H, and I, since more Hittite words begin with these letters than with any other letters. I have checked these words in the files of the Chicago Hittite Dictionary Project,3 but, unless I indicate otherwise, the interpretations are my own. I shall note only the missing words (together with the most important textual reference) and the lexemes to which, in the meantime, a different meaning can be assigned.4 In doing so I certainly do not wish to discount the achievements of Tischler's work but merely intend to show how much lexicographic work still remains to be done and how this work is really still in a state of flux. It is certain that Tischler's HDW will serve students of Hittite as a useful tool and quick reference book. We can only wish valeat quantum valere potest.

NINDAehippin(-)-: IBoT 3.90:2

GIŠeya-, is, in my opinion, nothing other than juniper.

TÜGekul-: KBo 20.57 rev. 8.

*elaššar, beside the meaning "sign" as a time designation e-la-aš-ni meḥunni in fragmentary festritual KBo 29.92 obv! ii 6; see CHD III/3:241.

(NA<sub>4</sub>)ellue§§ar: C. Watkins, MSS 45:255 n. 11 proposes "snakepit, snake hole," or something similar.

elwatiyatis: meaning unknown, appears in connection with a billy-goat KUB 46.54 obv. 7.

enna-: a verb expressing an action which is carried out on a statue of deity: ALAM DINGIR<sup>LIM</sup> en-na-an-zi KUB 22.40 rev. iii 8. Can the adj. enant-(HW 41) "zahm(??)" be related to this verb?

ena- (Hurr.?): possibly name of an EZEN KUB 42.105 rev. iv 12.

eniššan: "so" HW 41 has been accidentally omitted.

epar-: the stem is uncertain, epar- active or ep(a)-middle, which is discussed in full by E. Neu, StBoT 5:24. The meaning given "modellieren" is based on KBo 6.11 i 20 (Laws §115) and was suggested to J. Friedrich by E. von Schuler only as a guess on the basis of the context (Friedrich, HG 63 n. 8; cf. also H. G. Güterbock, JCS 5:70); there it expresses an action which is carried out on purut-"mud, clay" and results in being an alwanzatar "sorcery." This would not result necessarily in the meaning "to shape a (piece of) clay (into a magical image)." It is therefore better not to translate the word.

epurai: the meaning is according to N. Boysan-Dietrich, THeth 12:76-79 "planieren, einebnen," used in connection with construction plots. Note also epureššar in KBo 18.54 right edge 3.

erelti- (Hurr. offering term): V. Haas and G. Wilhelm, AOAT 3:12.

eribuški: name of an eagle made of gold KBo 15.37 obv. i 21.

eriranza: VBoT 30 obv? 8.

eriš: Bo 73/323 obv. ii 25.

eruḥi-: KBo 20.8 rev? 15, according to E. Neu, StBoT 26:39 "ein Gefäß."

ešarašila:: the context in the text does not indicate the given meaning ("eine Pflanze"): zik DIŠTAR-iš ešarašilašmaš arišand[an] GIM-an duwarniškit KUB 24.7 ii 6; cf. H. G. Güterbock, JAOS 103:162 (without suggested meaning).

ešhaniya-: G. Beckman, StBoT 29 (1983): 182.

ešharwešk- (s. v. ešhar): does not mean only "blutig machen, mit Blut beschmieren," but "to become, to turn red," said of apples KUB 28.6 obv. 11b; cf. S. de Martino, AoF 13:212 f. relating it to the verb išḥarišk- "ammalarsi, contrarre la malattia di Ishara," i.e., "to be afflicted with Ishara disease."

&lt;sup>3</sup> The Hittite Dictionary Project at the Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago is partly supported by the National Endowment for the Humanities. For the kind permission to use the lexical files, I would like to express my deepest thanks to Harry A. Hoffner.

(D)etmari-: a vessel made of silver or bronze, Luw. itmari-, E. Laroche, DLL 53 "recipient cultuel"; KBo 29.4 obv. i 20; KBo 19.142 ii 13, 19, iii 28, 29, 32, cf. DItmariuš KUB 6.37 obv. 14; KUB 7.38 obv. 15.

etna: Hurr. offering term, KUB 15.65 obv. iii 21, rev. iv 7; KUB 27.48 + KUB 40.97 + rev. iv 7.

ewali-/uwala-: seems to be an epithet for Tawananna or an adj. related to her, VAT 7481 rev. iv 10, 16, 27; KBo 20.67 + KBo 17.88 iii 36. H. C. Melchert, IF 91:107 ff., takes it as an adj. to the uncertain noun uwa-, according to him, "nurse"; this view and his farfetched etymological explanations, however, are unsatisfactory and are to be rejected.

ha: Tischler does not explain why he subsumes the juridical term hanna- "to judge" under this lexeme as its causative form.

This hypothetical etymological cognition, the so-called -na- Kausativum, goes back to H. Kronasser, EHS 562; Tischler himself in his HEG 146 f. found this vague etymology problematic because "-n- in hanna- möglicherweise wurzelhaft ist." Moreover, he does not indicate this cognate sub hanna-(cf. HEG 121).

SAL hahhallalla-: KBo 20.68 i 7 with dupl. KBo 20.112 i 3; cf. F. Pecchioli Daddi, Mestieri, professioni e dignità, p. 385. hahharšanant- is evidently participle to hahharš- "to laugh" (HW 45). In erimhuš Bogh. KBo 26.20 ii 33 its Akk. equivalent is su-uh-hu, which CAD S 235 renders as "smiling, laughing." Tischler's translation "böse, Schurke," which is taken from HW 45, must be replaced in this sense.

URUDUḥaḥki-: KBo 13.58 ii 19.

EZEN ḥaḥrannaš: for its possible meaning, see below s. v. ḥaḥratar and also H. A. Hoffner. English Hitt. Glossary, under "festivals."

hahratar: KUB 30.54 obv. ii 10, etc., belongs to the verb hahriya- q. v. and means "fondling, caressing, tenderness, affection, compassion."

hahriya-: does not only mean "kratzen, scharren, harken" (cf. in the sense of "to comb" KUB 24.11 rev. iii 9 with dupl. KUB 24.9 iii 18) but also "to touch affectionately, to stroke, to caress, to fondle," according to KUB 24.7 iii (61), iv 29–31 (obj. the exposed child); KUB 24.8 i 14 (obj. panku huitar); 1703/c + 2256/c + 1700/c obv. 18b, and consequently "to tickle, to incite" and then "to annoy, to provoke" (also in a sexual sense in the dreams of Puduhepa?), according to KUB 31.71 obv. iii 6; KUB 48.118 i 14.

[LÚha]hriatalla-: KBo 11.48 obv. 9.

NINDAhahhumeni-: KBo 20.94:3; H. Otten and C. Rüster, KBo 20 p. ix, read LÚ.MEŠ URUHahhumeneš "men of Hahha," although the copy does clearly show NINDA.

hahhuwai-: verb of unknown meaning KUB 36.89 obv. 30, cf. V. Haas, KN 167.

NA<sub>4</sub>haya-: KBo 30 12 obv. i 10 and passim, I. Singer, StBoT 27:79, n. 62, with its reduplicated variant haiyahaiya- 428/s obv. i 4.

<sup>GIS</sup>ḥaiša-: KBo 2.12 ii 19, cf. H. Ertem, Flora 156. <sup>LÚ</sup>ḥaggazuel-: KBo 5.11 + KUB 26.23 i 14.

hakkitiuwa: Hattic exclamation in the ritual IBoT 1.29, obv. 30.

DUGḥaktu[(-): KBo 25.79 rev? iv 10, E. Neu, StBoT 26:42.

halahihi: V. Haas and G. Wilhelm, AOAT 3 106. SISKUR halalaza: O. Carruba, StBoT 2:10; possibly belongs to halai- "rein" (H. A. Hoffner).

hallanniya: it is difficult to see any reason why Tischler takes this verb as causative of halai-q. v. halanza(i)-: "to threaten, to menace" H. A. Hoffner, RHA 76:8, n. 17.

<ḥallapa-: KUB 16.2:9, Laroche, DLL 38. halapšiḥi: Haas and Wilhelm, AOAT 3:120.

<hallow shall shal

hallašša-: KBo 11.40 i 22; KUB 2. 1 ii 7; the same word in KBo 8.73 obv. ii 5?

halehare (Hattic?): KBo 20.3 rev. 2, Neu, StBoT 26.42.

haleššiyar: KBo 1.53:11 halhalwališ: KBo 1.44 + i 39, H. Otten and W. von Soden, StBoT 7:10, 12.

hali-: add O. Carruba, StBoT 2:24, "portion."

hali(ya)-: for both of the lexemes "Hürde, Viehhof" and "Wache, Nachtwache," F. Pecchioli Daddi, OA 14:110 ff.; and A. Süel, Direktif Metni, pp. 134 ff. propose to take it as a single word with the meaning "watch, night-watch." The texts cited by Süel I. c. indeed only confirm this meaning.

halli-: add "Tag(?)" HW 2. Erg. 10. halliyara- (presumably an oracular bird): KUB 50.1 rev. iii 7.

SISKUR haliyatt-: DDL 39.

halištarni (epithet of Ištar?): KUB 27.1 ii 62.

haliwara- (adj. characterizing a sheep): KBo 11.72 + iii 21.

halkestaru-: KUB 36.89 rev. 55 is rather to be taken as being two different words: halki- "barley" and taru- "tree, wood" instead of the given conjectural meaning "Wohlergehen"; cf. V. Haas, KN 174, who takes it as Nominalkompositum.

NINDA haluwiya(-): KUB 53.47 obv. 6.

halupa(i)-: in appan halupanteš ("bent back"?) KUB 7.53 + KUB 12.56 i 44, Tunn 8 f.

halwatnazza- (verb): KUB 36.89 rev. 39, V. Haas, KN 167.

[ (-)]hammarai-: KBo 13.13 rev. 1, K. Riemschneider, StBoT 9:62.

hammaša-: is not "kleines Kind," but "grandchild" according to E. Laroche, OLZ 1962:29, "petits-enfants," whose French was misunderstood first by J. Friedrich and then by J. Tischler; see A. Goetze, JCS 22:18.

(É)hamri- add hamrawanni-: "habitante du hamri," E. Laroche, NH 260; Haas and Wilhelm, AOAT 3:116.

hanhanišaSAR: KUB 51.18 obv. 14.

hantantiyali-: the meaning "Handwerksmann, Kleinbürger" is based on the supposed equation with LÚGISTUKUL (F. Sommer, HAB 132 f.) and is very doubtful; cf. R. Beal, Ph.D. diss., University of Chicago, 1986, pp. 147-219, esp. 205, n. 637.

hantiyara-: a place in the riverbed where the fish can live, therefore possibly "backwater" KBo 3.8 rev. iii 2, 19, 21; cf. h]antiyaraeš in KBo 12.101:9 and hantiyarahha- as a designation of gold in KUB 40.102 obv. i 18.

LÜ hantipšuwa: F. Pecchioli Daddi, Mestieri, p. 65. hanteura(i)- (verb): "to copy (a tablet), abschreiben"?: DUB.22.KAM kuit URU Sapinuwaz ute[r] [n]ašta ke DUB.BA.HI.A<sup>TIM</sup> apizza [arh]a ha-ante-u-ra-u-en KBo 21.44 rev. 12–14; KBo 21..43 rev. iv 5–7; cf. KBo 22.84:9.

hantezummar/hantezumna-: H. Otten and V. Souček, StBoT 8:95; H. A. Hoffner, BiOr 38:650.

GIShanza(n): the context is very difficult and fragmentary; thus it is hardly possible to assign the meaning "Schneidewerkzeug"; see N. Boysan-Dietrich, THeth 12:125.

(*hapallaš) "skull": H. A. Hoffner, RHA 72:34 f.; JAOS 87:184.

hapalliš: KBo 20.107 + obv. i. 6.

hapalliyant-: KUB 31.100 obv. 20.

hapalliyatar: KUB. 7.16 rev. 5, 7, 19; HT 44 obv. 10; 771/t:6.

hapanuša (Hattic exclamation): KUB 25.37 obv. i 5, iii 30.

hapa-/hapanzi-: E. Laroche, Fs. Otten, p. 183, n. 12.

TU7hapanziri: KUB 53.17 obv. ii 19, H. A. Hoffner, Fs. Güterbock, p. 118, n. 22.

hapanzuwar: "reliability, dependability," KBo 1.42 i 43, MSL 13:133.

GIShap?-par?-za: KUB 46.39 iii 11 with par. KUB 46.42 iv 12.

 $^{(GIS)}$ hapšalli-, haššalli-: does not only mean "Schemel" but also in accordance with its Akkadian equivalent  $^{GIS}K/GANNU$ , H. Otten and C. Rüster, KBo 30 p. V ad no. 147, "wooden rack for storing earthen containers; potstand . . . ," etc., CAD K, p. 154.

hapkiri (pair of draft animals?): 1BoT 1.29 obv. 37 with dupl. 141/s, A. Unal, Or. n.s. 54:426, n. 33. H. A. Hoffner prefers to read as ha-pu-ut-ri and connects it with (KUS)happutri- "a team (of animals)." haptan[u-: KUB 31.76 obv. 14; KUB 33.119: 10, 12.

hapušeššar: "(arrow) shaft" C. Watkins, Fs. Neumann, p. 456.

happuwalašha-: KBo 1.42 obv. 39, lexical text, Sum. and Akk. section broken.

harauni-: var. of harnau-"birth-stool," G. Beckman StBoT 29:268.

Classical Arab Islam: The Culture and Heritage of the Golden Age. By TARIF KHALIDI. Princeton: The Darwin Press, 1985. Pp. 158.

The "golden age" of Islam (first/seventh-sixth/thirteenth centuries) is the theme of Tarif Khalidi's work. It provides a framework that will enable the reader to understand the significance of contemporary Arab Islamic life and thought, the roots of which go back more than a thousand years.

The book is based on a series of lectures delivered at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, in 1978, and is aimed at the more advanced students of classical Islam. There are eleven chapters: (1) "The Foundations" (pp. 13-20), (2) "God and His Message" (pp. 21-34), (3) "Muhammad and His Community" (pp. 35-50), (4) "Islamic Paideia" (pp. 51-58), (5) "Attitudes Towards the Past" (pp. 59-66), (6) "The Mystic Quest" (pp. 67-78), (7) "The Place of Reason" (pp. 79-92), (8) "The World of Nature" (pp. 93-102), (9) "The Governance of the Umman" (p. 103-16), (10) "Ibn Khaldun-The Great Synthesis" (pp. 117-26), (11) "Past and Present in Contemporary Arabic Thought" (pp. 127-34).

These chapters reflect the four basic themes Khalidi discusses:

- (1) personality: examining Arab Islamic cultural circuity in terms of the historical whole;
- (2) relationship: Arab Islamic culture and the historic societies which produced it (i.e., the sociology of Islamic culture);
- (3) emphasis: the "moral challenge" (Marshall Hodgson's terminology) facing Arab Islamic culture;
- (4) terminology: the use of proper terms to describe the historical perspective of Arab Islamic culture in human history.

In his early chapters, Khalidi discusses the foundations of Islam on four different levels:
