Acknowledgements

I thank those who have contributed time, expertise, patience, and hard work to this project. For their guidance in Arabic, Egyptian hieroglyphics, Persian, and Turkish, I thank Juan Campo, Stephen Humphreys, Dwight Reynolds, Colleen Manassa, Stuart Smith, and Christine Thomas. Sara Kviat Bloch corrected an early part of the manuscript and contributed wise editorial comments. Mary Leas guided me through some arcane issues of indexing format, which even she did not know existed. So too, I express special thanks to the Institute for Advanced Studies of The Hebrew University of Jerusalem. Under their auspices, Ohad Cohen chased down much bibliography, while Ofer Arbeli rescued me from the doldrums of computer illiteracy. Most of all, I thank Annette Orelle. She took the electronic template developed by J. Roof, tamed its font, suffered thousands of corrections, as well as the several versions needed to beat the manuscript into shape. Without her saintly perseverance, this Index would never have been completed.

An Explanatory Note

This Index presents every entry in JNES 1-55 (1942-1996) according to the model established by the Journal's annual indices. It is divided into two sections: an index of JNES authors, and an index of books reviewed that is alphabetized by book author(s). It covers the period before the Press' electronic index begins.

Several features have also been added to the Journal's model. Multiple authors of any particular work are cross-referenced within each section. Book reviews are cross-referenced under the name(s) of the reviewer(s). In a correlative attempt to present all useful bibliographic information, the tag phrase "et al."—used in the heading of JNES book reviews to indicate the presence of unnamed authors, editors, and the like—is replaced by the names themselves.

Since this Index is presented as a document, most vagaries and errors of the original uncorrected are left uncorrected. Where an important and unobtrusive correction or improvement could be made, I did so (principally with the use of square brackets). Likewise, where an author's name was misspelled in the Journal, I added a cross-reference with the correct spelling. The Index, then, seeks to replicate the Journal on which it is based.
