

INDICES

Names are with few exceptions presented in a conventional transcription in which cuneiform š and h are given without diacritics and in normal alphabetical order. Where necessary, the palatal sibilant of Akkadian and Hurrian is rendered as sh. In a very few instances names have been left in italic transliteration to avoid infelicitous sequences. Hittite and Cuneiform Luwian words are usually given in the standard 'bound transcription' in italics. Since these languages do not distinguish voicing in stops, b, d, and g are as usual alphabetized as p, t, and k respectively. Double consonants are ignored in alphabetization. Hieroglyphic Luwian words for the most part appear in a phonological interpretation marked by slant bars (/ /). Only where the issue at hand is the spelling are words from cuneiform and hieroglyphic texts given in a 'narrow' sign-by-sign transliteration in italics. In the language indices Luwian comes first, followed by the other Anatolian Indo-European languages, then all other languages in alphabetical order.
