ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

It was Prof. Dr. Ph.H.J. Houwink ten Cate who first suggested in the seventies to take Hittite votive texts as the subject for my PhD dissertation. The dissertation was finished and the Dutch version of the votive texts was published in 1984. A few months earlier Prof. Dr. H. Klengel very kindly sent me his hand-copies of texts he would later publish as KUB 56. These texts were originally not included in my Dutch PhD dissertation, but they have been included in the present publication.

While preparing this English edition, more and more votive texts became available. In 1994 Prof. Dr. H. Otten sent me his hand-copies of 18 fragments of votive texts with permission to include them. I am very grateful to him for this permission. Two of these fragments have since been published in KBo volumes; the unpublished fragments (transliterations and translations in the present volume) are: 181/u, 183/u, 367/u, 410/u, 543/u, 1309/u, 1506/u, 366/v, 941/v, 1111/v, 1147/z, 1159/z, 1333/u, "Touristik" and Bo 69/522.

The Dutch manuscript was meticulously translated into English by Mrs. A.M. de Bruin-Cousins M.A. In the meantime I was appointed Director of the Netherlands Institute for the Near East, a time-consuming job which caused a longer than expected delay in the publication of this work. It is very sad that Dr. Jin Jie, who did the greater part of all the typing work, cannot see the final publication because of her untimely and deeply regretted death in 2005. From 2006 onwards my quickly diminishing eyesight prevented me from updating the original text and from making the final corrections to the manuscript before publication.

In August 2007 Dr. Alice Mouton (CNRS Strasbourg) came to Leiden for her yearly visit to the NINO library. She took an overall view of the situation and immediately took action to speed along the publication. She updated and re-arranging the bibliographical data and did all the necessary page-setting. In all this she showed a hundred percent dedication to getting the manuscript organized and ready for publication within a matter of weeks. Alice, thank you very much. I can honestly say that without your endeavours the work would not have appeared now, for I could never have brought it to completion by myself.

Thanks as well to Carolien van Zoest for her encouragement and assistance. I am grateful to the NINO and its director Dr. J.J. Roodenberg for offering me work facilities.

During the last ten years I occasionally asked colleagues to collate texts from the original tablets or photographs. I would like to thank Prof. Dr. C. Karasu (Ankara), Prof. Dr. H. Klengel (Berlin) and Dr. S. Košak (Mainz) for so kindly responding to my requests.

To all mentioned above and to my wife Jenny I dedicate this book.

INTRODUCTION

The Hittite votive texts belong to the genre of religious texts and are closely related to the prayers, the dreams and oracles. The category of texts classified by E. Laroche in the Catalogue des textes hittites (CTH) as "administration religieuse", which includes the cult inventories and the so-called Bildbeschreibungen, is also related to the votive texts as far as contents are concerned. In the CTH the combining of votive texts and dream texts to form a separate chapter with, as regards the fragments, one and the same CTH number (CTH 590) undoubtedly places a proper emphasis on the relation between the said texts. Nevertheless a different classification is conceivable in the future.

The essence of the votive texts is the vow, whether or not made in or because of a dream, but not the dream as such¹. The dream texts, without vow, could be placed in other categories determined by the reason why a description is given of the dream of the king, queen, palace official or some other person. The classification in the diverse categories should always take account of the fact that vows were also made in prayers, that often, for example, an oracle pronouncement was requested on the grounds of dreams and that some vows imply that a prayer will be addressed to the deity.

In 1926, J. Schiele published in transcription the first votive texts², but apart from KUB 15.11, 17+, 23 and 28+ and a few separate passages, no transcription plus translation of these texts has been published³. The first synoptic monograph on the religion of the Hittites, written by G. Furlani, likewise devotes only a few lines to vows: "In lingua hittita si hanno dei testi votivi caratterizzati dalla formola

² KUB 15.1 to 30. In his review of KUB 14 to 17, F. Sommer remarked in OLZ 30, 1927, 481-483 (p. 483): "Heft 15 Nr. 1-30 Gelübde Inschriften (Formel IK.RU.UB = vovit), deren Typus wie Ehelolf bemerkt hat, auch H.T. 33 und Liverpool Annals 3 (1910) Pl. 26 Nr. 2 vertreten ist." In 1929 in a detailed review of KUB 14-17, F. Sommer spoke of the vows as: "... ein in den bisherigen Publikationen nur spärlich bezeugtes Gebiet": K1. F. 1, 335-349 (p. 339).

2 Introduction

IK.RU.UB, che è un ideogramma accado e ha il senso di "dedicò". Di questi testi se ne conoscono parecchi"⁴.

In the survey of the cultural history of Asia Minor published shortly prior to the latter by A. Goetze, all votive texts are listed under the dreams, but in a second edition a distinction is rightly drawn between the votive texts and the vows occurring in prayers⁵. In 1949, E. Laroche published the first transcription plus translation of the only votive text of which various duplicates are known, KUB 15.17+⁶, after an essential join with KUB 31.61 had been discovered by A. Goetze⁷. This long text differs from the other votive texts in other respects as well⁸ and since an increasing number of text fragments proved to belong to it, the complication of a new text edition was already expedient in 1965⁹.

In the course of time the vows of KUB 15 have been followed by the publication of many new text fragments from both the earliest and most recently found tablets¹⁰.

For the sake of convenience, the CTH sequence¹¹ has been followed in this text edition and to it are appended those texts which have appeared in transcription after the publication of the last supplement and which could perhaps appropriately be classified with numbers CTH 583-590, namely certain texts from KUB 48.

The present publication is an extended and translated version of my 1984 dissertation, which was written in Dutch. The votive texts that have since been published elsewhere are for the greater part included in this new edition. Though the present text has been updated, traces of the 1984 manuscript are of course still visible, e.g. some "old style" Sumerogram writings and old discussions. Nevertheless, the transliterations and translations have not suffered much from the twenty-year silence. The material has now been made available because I believe it will be of use to our colleagues hittitologists.

PART ONE: PRESENTATION OF THE HITTITE VOTIVE TEXTS

1. The votive texts

The distinguishing feature of all vows is the promise to a deity of certain performances or of objects, persons or animals if, in exchange, the deity fulfills the wish expressed by the person making the vow. For example: "if you do..., then to you, O god, I will give..." Any uncertainty about what was promised being adequate to propitiate the deity could be avoided by making an oracular inquiry, which then determined what best to promise¹.

The Hittites, believed by many to have been rationalistically and materialistically minded and precise in their administration² were not always confident that the god would, indeed, grant what was asked. They did not gladly risk giving in vain what was often a precious gift, as appears from a passage from the oracle text KUB 5.6 i 31-33 (CTH 570)³: (31) "The proprietatory offering which the king must make for the god was determined: it was determined as 1 fat ox and 6 sheep. (32) He has already made the promise, but (only) when the king is healed, (33) shall he give them⁴."

The people manifest a similar uncertainty regarding the acts of the gods in the oracle text KUB 6.3:6 ff. (CTH 572), where the promise that the king will live for years made by the gods in an oracle

³ (31) A-NA DINGIR-LIM ma-al-du-wa-ar ŠA ^DUTU-ŠI SI x SÁ-at nu 1 GUD ŠE 6 UDU-ya SI x SÁ-at (32) nu-za-kán ka-ru-ú ma-al-ta-aš ma-ah-ha-an-ma ^DUTU-ŠI SIG₃-ri (33) na-at pí-i-ya-an-zi. Cf. E. Laroche, "Le vœu...", RA 43, 66 and Prière hittite, 12 f.

evidently does not inspire real confidence: (6) "O god, in which omen (?) you see life, (7) shall he (= the king) (during) the years that are already promised him by the oracle, (8) further remain alive (during) those years? The fate oracle must be favourable⁵."

But the gods also take risks: will one actually give what is promised once the wish has been fulfilled? Apart from the gods themselves, who naturally see to it that the "reward" owing them is in fact given, the priests of the temple of the god invoked are also directly interested in the actual fulfillment of the vow made. Any shortcoming with respect to the gods is immediately punished by them by calling down disaster on those involved. It is possible to deduce from the oracular inquiries made in order to ascertain the cause of the gods' wrath that, in addition to the understandable indignation of the gods because of neglect, for example of their dwelling (the temple) or themselves (the statues of the gods), or of their immediate care (the offerings of food, the festivals and the clothing of the statues of the gods), their wrath could also be incurred by a failure to fulfill, or to fulfill completely a vow made in any of these matters.

In the oracle text KUB 22.70 (CTH 566)⁷, for instance, an oracular inquiry was made on the occasion of the king's illness. From the answer it appears that the reason for the wrath of the god of Arušna was that the queen had hidden one or two golden wreaths in an official's house and had given two inferior ones to the god. The wreaths had been promised in a vow made by the queen and when they had not been received, the god "claimed" them from the queen in a dream. The close relationship between vow and oracle is also clearly attested by KBo 16.98 (CTH 577)⁸ in which a vow is described in an oracle text.

Apart from whether or not the vow was fulfilled, the failure to pronounce it was evidently enough to arouse the wrath of the gods, as can be inferred from the introduction to an aldanni oracle⁹ in KUB 22.38 i 1 ff. (CTH 575)¹⁰: "... regarding the fact that the great god is angry: [be]cause I (2) have pronounced [m]any vows, (3) that can be left out of consideration (as cause of the anger), but if by another nothing is left undone for you, O god (5) the eel(?) oracle must be favourable".

To return to the characteristics of the votive texts dealt with here, the following basic scheme can be discerned. In the most complete vows successive mention is made of the following: the name of the god to whom the vow pertains – the circumstances in which the vow is made, the person who makes it and the god to whom it is made – the condition(s) imposed on the god by the person – the reward which the god will receive after the vow is fulfilled – the conclusion of the vow.

Naturally the vows differ widely and elements of the scheme may be lacking. In principle the constants are simply the person who makes the vow, the condition and the reward. It is therefore all the more remarkable that in one single votive text the condition, in the form of a sentence beginning with ma-a-an = "if", is lacking: KUB 15.1 ii 5-10 and 37-41¹¹. The translation runs: "Šarruma of Urikina. When in a dream some young men intended to seize the queen at the back of the bathhouse in Iyamma, the queen promised in her dream 1 bathhouse of gold to Šarruma of Urikina". Since there is no conditional clause, it is not clear why the queen made the vow. Did she want the god's protection against a band of assaulters, or was she thanking the god for the pleasant company of a group of young Hittites behind (or in) the bathhouse? If the former is the case, then the condition could certainly have been laid down in the text. No, it is undoubtedly one of the rare sexually-tinted dreams which, as Oppenheim says¹², has not been banned to the anomymity of the category of evil dreams, but, having escaped censure, is very open to a psycho-analytical explanation. The reason why the text, and hence the queen's dream, has been preserved could well lie in the valuable object promised. Indeed, in the extant texts the objects of the vow are most likely the central theme and therefore the vows are cited in direct speech. Their literal reproduction would make it more difficult for the persons who made these vows to renege. This sort of reasoning presumes that the king, queen or other persons are often negligent in fulfilling their vows, whether or not made in a dream. Are there, however, sufficient indications of such negligence?

It is difficult to determine whether the vows which were repeatedly forgotten were especially those made in dreams (H. Otten, "Das Hethiterreich", in: H. Schmökel, Kulturgeschichte des alten Orient, 1961, 313-446 (p. 436)), even if we assume that only those vows have been preserved which were not fulfilled.

Up to now it has always been assumed that the texts were written by temple officials who, after checking their inventory, discovered that certain promised objects had not been received by the temple from the palace¹³. It is not implausible, however, that the palace itself checked which vows had been fulfilled and which not. The palace where the tablets were found could perhaps provide important information on this point. Unfortunately it is not known whether the large majority of the tablets published in the KUB series, many of them among the earliest finds by H. Winckler from 1906 onwards, came from the Büyükkale palace citadel or from the large temple complex.

There is some degree of certainty about where only a few dream or votive texts were found¹⁴: KBo 8.62 (a tablet with dreams): Büyükkale building D.

KBo 8.63 (not a standard votive text?): Büyükkale.

KBo 9.96 (votive text of Hattušili III (?)): Büyükkale, gatehouse. This text could possibly form a whole with KBo 8.63.

KBo 13.72 (exceptional votive text): in the rubble of earlier excavations near Haus am Hang. KBo 13.80 (fragment of a vow): in the rubble of earlier excavations near Haus am Hang. KUB 15.17+ (great vow of Puduhepa): large temple complex.

The last-mentioned text occupies a special place within the whole collection of votive texts. It is the only text which contains only one single vow and hence is certainly not a composite tablet. Moreover various duplicates of this text has been determined, which is not the case with any other votive text. In many other respects, too, the text is anomalous, one being the exordium with the name of the queen who announces in the first person that she has made a vow. It is unfortunately not known whether Puduhepa's promise to provide regularly over the years many people for the diverse temple services, dozens of them mentioned by name in the text, was the reason for the duplicates which were used by various "departments" of the temple to keep the accounts of the personnel.

Of the other texts mentioned here, only KBo 9.96 merits further study in this respect because in it the comment nawi = "not yet" twice occurs at the end of a section. The counterpart of this is $kar\bar{u} =$ "already". In nine of the texts treated in this work either $kar\bar{u}$ or nawi occurs, in two both occur. In KBo 9.96 the promise to invoke Ištar and honour her with festivals ends with: "not yet (done)". A few lines below it is said that a (probably golden) object "has not yet been made (?)". This text was found in the palace citadel and does not seem to be an extract from more detailed vows recorded earlier. Could not these, and other comparable texts, be memory-aids drawn up by the religious officials of the palace for the use of the royal family? Another argument in favour of the monitoring from the palace itself of vows yet to be fulfilled is the occurrence in KUB 15.11 iii 7' of the personal name "Kata[paili] as last word of a paragraph, after "already (given)". Obviously this was the name of the official who was charged with confirming the fulfillment of vows and, since Katapaili was more likely to have been employed in the palace than in the temple²⁰, monitoring was very likely done from the palace itself, particularly since Katapaili is called the man who knew about the matter of giving in KBo 2.2 iv 23 ff. and 27 ff. (CTH 577).

The main argument against a reminder about objects issuing from temple functionaries is the fact that vows made to different gods of different cities are mentioned on one and the same tablet²¹. Probably the offerings were tendered in the different cities to the temples of the different gods, so that a centrally issued reprimand is infeasible.

¹³ F. Sommer, review of KUB 14-17, Kl. F. I, 1929, 335-349 (p. 340): "Mit diesem System ergibt sich wohl, dass die Aufzeichnungen nicht auf Befehl der Allerhöchsten Herrschaften als Dokumente ihrer Frömmigkeit angefertigt sind, sondern von der Priesterschaft, die stark daran interessiert war, dass nichts in Vergessenheit geriet". Dreams, 193: "Among these texts ... written ... most likely by the officials of the temple which was to receive these donations ..." and 227: "'Memorandum' of the temple". H. Otten/V. Souček, Das Gelübde ..., StBoT 1, 1: "Alle diese Tafeln stellen spätere Zusammenfassungen dar, indem immer mehrere Gelübde nacheinander aufgezählt werden, und wohl die noch ausstehende Erfüllung der angegebenen Versprechungen in Erinnerung gebracht werden soll. Das ist besonders verständlich in den zahlreichen Fällen, wo ein im Traum abgelegtes Gelübde dann in Vergessenheit geraten ist." A. Kammenhuber, Orakelpraxis ..., TdH 7, 26 does not state clearly whether it was the palace or the temple that listed the vows made in dreams: "Niedergeschrieben wurden diese Traumsammlungen sicherlich als Gedächtnisstütze für die Unmenge von Versprechen, die dies Herrscherpaar gemacht hatte".

²⁰ Cf. KBo 18.146:1 and 20 and KBo 2.24:23 ff.

Of the two texts in which "already" and "not yet" are mentioned, KUB 31.69 Rev. 6'-9' is particularly interesting, because in it almost certainly three objects are promised, one said to be already given, two not as yet. Unless we assume that all the vows were recorded because of the negligence²² of the king, queen and others in fulfilling promises, the comments in the literature on that negligence insofar as dreams and votive texts are concerned can only be based on KUB 15.5+, a text that does not fit into the ordinary category of votive texts. The term wekuwar = "demand", "request" is written as a sort of colophon under this long, composite text. The whole text contains dreams of a king or of palace officials in which various persons or gods announce that certain objects must be given or in which a deity requests a certain object, but nothing indicates that, in general, there is any question of negligence.

In diverse other texts as well there occurs this same manner of a request being made of a king or queen by a deity in a dream and there, too, the same verb IR (= wek-) is used. What markedly distinguishes KUB 15.5+ from the other texts is that in it a sort of dream-interpretess or priestess²⁴ called Hepapiya is mentioned at the end of each section. In all cases her advice is to give "the great god" what is requested. Sometimes this means taking the object away from another god ²⁵. Administrative monitoring can also be inferred from the occasional addition of $kar\bar{u}$ or nawi in this text, and likewise from $punu\check{s}\check{s}anzi$ (= they shall instigate an inquiry) in column iv line 39. The dating of this text is discussed in the relevant section. An unsolved and intriguing problem is the identity of "the great god", since this appelation occurs in no other dream or votive text apart from this one. Furthermore it occurs only relatively seldom in the texts²⁶.

In this text the only allusion to negligence or shortcoming is to be found in the dream of the king in column iii lines 4 ff., where a certain Danuhepa criticises the quality of a golden rhyton given by the king. Moreover the king of Hakpišša asks the king why he has not yet given certain gifts. Indeed, the appearance in this text of a woman who advised the court on dreams prompts the question of the manner of recording and dealing with dreams, especially since frequent mention is made of dreams of persons other than the king.

The same applies to the dreams of the queen, probably Puduhepa, which can be dated later than KUB 15.5+, from which later period a single dream of her husband Hattušili III has been preserved in this sort of text, with or without vow²⁷. Perhaps what happened was that the person who had the dream in the palace of Hattuša or elsewhere in the kingdom summoned immediately on awaking a clerk and a dream-interpreter in order to dictate it while still filled with the message from the gods, who used the dream as one of their ways of communicating with mortals, and to ask advice about the content of that dream and the fulfillment of the request made in it. In this respect it would definitely be wrong to think that the couple Hattušili-Puduhepa would treat the content of dreams lightly²⁸.

Any such idea fails to appreciate the religious aspect of dreams. They would have been treated with circumspection, certainly by Hattušili, who when a weak youth was given to Ištar by his father after a dream vision, and by Puduhepa, daughter of a priest²⁹.

Lack of an exact knowledge of the palace and temple administration of the Hittites makes it difficult to say whether, after the dream had been recorded, the (wooden) tablet or a copy of it was passed on to the administration office or the storeroom where the monitoring of the fulfillment of vows and the handling of requests of the gods took place³⁰. Moreover it is not clear to what extent the king and queen separated their supervision of the temple gifts and temple treasures from their supervision of

²³ Wekuwar is dealt with in Prière hittite, 6 ff.

²⁸ "Schliesslich seien noch die Träume Hattušiliš-Puduhepas genannt die zur Rechtfertigung ihrer eigenen Haltung dienen sollen ..., die ohne weiteres manipuliert werden konnten da niemand ihre Authentizität nachkontrollieren konnte, ..." (A. Ünal, Ein Orakeltext..., TdH 6, 50).

their property in the various palaces and storage buildings. Data providing some slight insight into the way such matters were dealt with can only be obtained indirectly from oracle texts³¹, protocol texts³², inventory texts³³, and letters³⁴.

What is needed is a comprehensive study of many categories of texts in order to define more clearly the problems pertaining to the respective duties of palace and temple in the preparation and execution of all sorts of religious activities and in the organisation of the numerous religious festivals³⁵, of the administration of valuable metals and objects received or issued and of repaired and replaced cult objects. On these matters only a few incidental remarks can be made.

Oracle consultation fell under the competencye of the palace which consequently was able to ascertain the wrath of the gods about irregularities in the temple. This in turn enabled the palace repeatedly to trace those responsible for losses by interrogating the priests and the other members of the staff. In this way, too, it was possible to detect any negligence in making the obligatory offerings during a festival, in celebrating a festival at its proper time, in the care of the clothing and jewels of the statue of a deity³⁶. The administration of incoming gifts from all parts of the realm (mainly exacted by the palace) and the distribution of objects from the central storehouse of the palace or of the great temple for use in the cult elsewhere in the kingdom was probably completely under palace supervision³⁷, even though most often a priest would have selected the objects and passed them on to other temple officials. KBo 16.83+, one of the texts listing cult objects in store, received and distributed, is especially instructive, because it would seem that in it mention is made of the name, sometimes also of the function, of the inspectors, who could thus be held responsible for missing objects, etc.³⁸ But this text does not reveal clearly the procedure concerning votive gifts, because in that case the palace, specifically the queen, both issued the orders and supervised the stores. Another complicating factor is that there were stores in both the palace citadel Büyükkale and the temple, where palace or state property was probably stored as well³⁹.

In any case it appears from the inventory list IBoT 1.31 (CTH 241) that the queen was in charge of the administration of gifts exacted partly as tribute⁴⁰: the very diverse materials, sometimes in baskets and sometimes in chests decorated with lion's paws, are bundled together by the queen and recorded on wooden tablets by clerks and the queen says that, when she puts them in the É NA4KIŠIB (= storehouse for sealed objects)⁴¹, they shall be recorded on a clay tablet⁴². The text gives the impression of recording the inventory of consignments already present, some already provided with labels in the form of wooden tablets, an inventory made by the queen before those objects were definitely consigned to the storehouse.

The reverse of tablet IBoT 1.31 is of direct relevance to the question whence the palace obtained the objects promised in our votive texts. In it, after an interruption, certain amounts of gold are said to have been handed over to the guardians of the states or to the goldsmiths for making certain cult objects⁴³ and certain garments are said to have been given to someone to be washed. Unfortunately the place where the inventory was made is not mentioned⁴⁴.

Rules governing the removal of objects from the É NA4KIŠIB are given in KUB 31.111 (CTH 275). A text wholly comparable to IBoT 1.31 Rev. was found in the palace citadel, i.e. KBo 18.153 (dupl.

³¹ For example KUB 22.70.

³² For example KUB 13.35+.

³³ For example IBoT 1.31.

³⁴ For example KBo 18.153.

³⁵ It can, for example, be inferred from KUB 15.11 ii 10 f. that possibly someone from either the palace or the temple will open the stores.

⁴² The best way to prevent falsifications and unauthorised alterations.

⁴³ Rev. 1 f.: "From 9 šekels a pin shall be made; placed in the hands of (or: the hand of) Zuzuli. From 1 mina of gold a goblet shall be made. Placed in the hands (or: the hand of) of "Ehli-D[SIN], etc." In one of the storage rooms in the great temple, clay bullae were found bearing the names of this same Zuzuli, his colleague Pupuli and of Kaššu (possible a gold- and silversmith): Cf. H.G. Güterbock, "Hieroglyphensiegel aus dem Tempelbezirk", in: K. Bittel, Boğazköy V, 1975, 47-75 (p. 56 no. 13). These clay bullae were attached to certain consignments as seals, but here for example they could have been used to place the name of the recipient where the gold had lain, gold which then must have been stored in the temple. For texts in which various persons called Kaššu occur, see F. Pecchioli Daddi, "Kaššu, un antroponimo ittita", Mesopotamia 13-14, 1978-79, 201-212.

⁴⁴ I think it not unlikely that this took place in the É duppaš whereas we know from KUB 30.32 (dupl. KBo 18.190) (CTH 241), gold and silver, in addition to other metals and garments used for cult purposes, were stored.

12 PART ONE

KUB 26.66) (CTH 242) in which a certain amount of silver is placed by the aforementioned Ehli-^DSIN at the disposal of the likewise aforementioned Kaššu for the making of a silver solar disc⁴⁵. In Obv. 9 ff.: "2 minas of silver, the weight of 1 eagle, have UR.MAH-ziti and Pupuli (in their possession) and that the queen has already taken up⁴⁶ and Lullu, the patili-priest had brought 1 mina of silver to the midwife and they will mount (in metal) 1 mina of silver for the gods of Urikina. Later they sent (or gave) it". It is possible that this gold and silver was nevertheless stored in the temple. In any case the queen could use it to have objects made which she could have given to various gods subsequent to making a vow. KBo 18.173 (with dupl. KUB 42.11) clearly attests that baskets containing gold received as gift or tribute from diverse cities and countries were also stored. This text was also found in the palace⁴⁷. There is no direct reason for assuming that prior to Puduhepa the queen had no possibility of disposing of state and temple treasures, so that S. R. Bin-Nun's question⁴⁸ as to where the queen obtained the gold for golden gifts is answered by the above mentioned texts⁴⁹.

2. Gods and mortals

The obvious conclusion from the votive as from other texts is that the Hittites were realistically-minded, and the equally obvious assumption is that the gods shared the opinion of mortals about their presentation of festivals and gifts. Justification of this assumption is to be found in many texts in which the anthropomorphic character of the gods clearly emerges from the many human traits ascribed to them. The character of the gods is the subject of the first section of this chapter. The second section deals with the contracts between gods and mortals and the ways in which the latter could gain the favour of the former.

⁴⁵ KBo 18.153 Obv. 2.

PRESENTATION OF THE HITTITE VOTIVE TEXTS

A. The character of the gods

Like the ritual texts, the descriptions of festivals and the so-called Dienstanweisungen, the prayers constitute a source of information on the character of the gods of the Hittites. A great many texts make it abundantly clear that the gods were expected to be satisfied and hence in their actions to be favourably inclined towards mortals, provided all their material desires were regularly fulfilled. Negligence or remissness in this respect on the part of mortals is the cause of all the misery and misfortune on earth. Since there are no differences regarding this between, for example, the fourteenth and the twelfth century, a precise dating of the texts cited here is not of great importance. It should be noted at the outset that the king and queen, but especially the king, are given the country of the Stormgod to rule well over it on behalf of the latter and consequently they are positioned between the mortals and the gods, charged with all the resultant responsibilities, but also protected against all who threaten their position⁵⁰.

A heavy burden must be borne by the king and queen, for regularly in prayers, which resemble a plea for the defence, they must defend their behaviour before the gods and thus ensure that the country can exist in prosperity. Little is known of the attitude of private individuals toward the gods, because the only extant sources of a religious nature are exclusively state documents containing prayers of princes, kings and queens⁵¹. We do know from the Plague Prayers of Muršili II that man is considered a sinner who, by confessing he has sinned, can restore peace to the hearts of the gods, just as a servant can make reparation to his master by confessing. Precisely because of the anthropomorphic character of the gods, the comparison servant – master and king – god can be carried very far.

⁴⁶ I am unable to specify the exact meaning of this šara dā-.

⁴⁷ See introduction to KBo 18, VII.

⁴⁸ S.R. Bin-Nun, The Tawananna in the Hittite Kingdom, TdH 5, 1975, 183: "Who supplied the queen with the gold and the precious materials that were needed for these donations? Building a statue must have incurred huge expenses. So far, no text has given us any information about this most important point." Incidentally it is questionable whether the text KUB 22.70, referred to by this passage, should be dated prior to Puduhepa.

⁴⁹ Probably larger amounts of nuggets or ingots of precious metals known from such temple inventory texts as KBo 2.1 (CTH 509), in which mention is also made of people responsible for guarding them, could have come from war booty and tributes which, for example, were agreed on by treaty. KBo 2.1 i 26 f. ... A-NA KÙ.BABBAR-kán GUŠKIN (27) e-eš-zi = "at the head of the silver (and) gold stands Iyarapiya."

⁵⁰ IBoT 1.30 first translated by A. Goetze, review of IBoT, JCS 1, 1947, 87-92 (p. 90f.). For further literature see Ph.H.J. Houwink ten Cate, "Hittite Royal Prayers", Numen 16, 91. "May the Labarna-king be loved by the gods! The country belongs to the Stormgod, heaven and earth and the people belong to the Stormgod. He made the Labarna-king custodian and gave him all of the land of Hatti. May the Labarna-king rule the entire country with his hand. Let the Stormgod crush those who should harm the person of the Labarna-king and his territory". In the old ritual text KUB 57.63+ ii 6 ff. preserved in young Hittite script (cited by F. Starke, Die Funktionen der dimensionalen Kasus und Adverbien im Althethitischen, StBoT 23, 1977, 62 and 102, mentioned earlier by E. Neu, Interpretation der hethitischen mediopassiven Verbalformen, StBoT 5, 1968, 48, 134 and 201), we see a similar conception of the duty of the king (and the queen): "May the neighbouring hostile countries be destroyed by the hand of the Labarna ... Let, however, the country of Hatti prosper (lit. 'graze') in the hand of the Labarna and the Tawananna ... and let it become wide".

Just how anthropomorphic the gods are is illustrated by the human traits they reveal and by the belief that the characters of gods and mortals are exactly identical⁵². Their end, however, is different: "Life is linked with death and death with life. A man cannot live forever; the days of his life are numbered⁵³." Naturally the mythological texts are the best source for getting to know the human nature of the gods. because myths try to explain the earth as it is. In them the gods act just like ordinary people and are beset with all the earthly problems such as family quarrels and intrigues.

The limited scope of this chapter does not admit of a discussion of all the similarities between mortals and gods⁵⁴. But the numerous details known about the care of the gods in the temples where they lived can help us gain some insight into daily life of the Hittites, for it is plausible to assume that the gods were cared for according to the pattern also observed by the mortals. This is attested by a combination of two texts⁵⁵: "And they let these gods drink from a large goblet and they make libation from a large goblet. And when they (the gods) have satisfied their thirst, they go to bed". The second text relates what happens in the morning: "When it grows light on the second day, they wash the Stormgod", whereafter the anointing with fine oils certainly follows, as, inter alia, in KUB 9.28 iv 7 f. Finally the god is clad in a fine garment and then he can be diverted with music and dance while partaking royally of food and drink.

It is difficult to trace whether the character of the gods tended to become more anthropomorphic with the passage of time because of the almost total lack of any relevant texts, other than mythological ones, from the Old and Middle Hittite periods which would make possible a comparison with the much more numerous texts from the New Hittite period. Specifically the vows and prayers in which the relationship between mortals and gods is so intensely manifest date mainly from later periods of Hittite history. The way in which the gods are represented in concrete form can hardly answer any question as to possible developments in the direction of more anthropomorphic gods. No chronological order can be established in the manner of representing a god as fetish, as animal⁵⁶, and as human being⁵⁷. These three forms of expression continued to exist alongside each other. We must bear in mind that on the earliest Kültepe seals the gods are already portraved as humans, while the most impersonal huwašistone even as late as Tuthaliva IV could occur as statue of a god, even though during cult reforms under this king alterations to the existing "statues of gods" were made whereby an iron bull was placed next to a huwaši-stone in the temples for various Stormgods and three solar discs representing the Sungoddess of Šanativa we replaced by a statue of a sitting woman. Since at the same time, and conversely, a huwaši-stone (and?) a man (as statue) representing the Stormgod of Wattarwa were replaced by an iron bull, we must assume that the reason for the replacement was other than a development from fetish via zoomorphic to an anthropomorphic object. The popularity of a certain god, the state of repair of the "cult statue" or the financial means of a given temple are more plausible reasons for replacement.

The replacement of mountain, river and source gods, on the contrary, does reveal a trend toward a more anthropomorphic representation, e.g. male statues for mountain and river gods and female statues for source goddesses. Naturally the site of the cult statue influenced its outward appearance and the material of which it was made. For instance the mountain Malimaliya (KUB 7.24 Oby. 1 ff. 58) was represented inside a temple by an iron statue of a man with eyes of gold and standing on an iron lion. but outside on a rock by a huwaši-stone⁵⁹. L. Rost⁶⁰ likewise concludes that no temporal distinction can be made between the various ways of representing a deity, even though she is of the opinion that such a trend would accord with the changing religious-historical conceptions in general. A development from ⁵² KUB 13.4 i 21 f. (CTH 264); "Is the nature of men and gods perhaps different? No. Especially in this respect (i.e. cleanliness) different? No. Their nature are exactly alike." (Cf. E.H. Sturtevant/G. Bechtel, A Hittite Chrestomathy, 1935, 148 f.). This text containing instructions for the temple staff probably dates from roughly the same time as the votive texts.

⁵³ Prayer of Kantuzzili KUB 30.10 Obv. 20 f. It should be borne in mind that the king who dies as reigning monarch and the queen are said to "become god". Although offerings were made to them, inter alia during the AN.TAH.ŠUM festival and the nuntarrivašha festival (see H.G. Güterbock, "Religion und Kultus der Hethiter", in: G. Walser, Neuere Hethiterforschung, 1964, 54-73 (p. 67⁺⁵⁹)), they were looked upon as very important forebears rather than as really having divine power.

⁵⁴ For information on this point, see, inter alia, A. Goetze, *Kleinasien*², 130 ff. and G. Steiner, RlA 3, 1957-1971, ⁵⁶ O. Carruba ("Rhyta in den hethitischen Texten", Kadmos 6, 1967, 88-97, cf. also K. Tuchelt, Tiergefässe in Kopf- und Protomengestalt. Untersuchungen zur Formgeschichte tierförmiger Giessgefässe, IF 22, 1962, 49-55) has pointed out that not all vases formed in the shape of animals were necessarily representations of gods or cult objects, but could also have been non-religious, imaginative creations. The animal-shaped vases made of precious metals were undoubtedly used purely for cult purposes.

⁵⁷ First placed in this sequence by H.G. Güterbock, review of Bildbeschreibungen, Or. 15, 1946, 482-496. The following could occur fetish: huwaši-stones (NA4ZI.KIN), wakšur-vases, clubs or weapons in general, horns and solar discs. As appears from, for example, KUB 38.37 iii? 9 f. (R. Werner, Hethitische Gerichtsprotokolle, StBoT 4, 56 f.) the latter could represent the Sun-goddess of Arinna when made of gold and the goddess Mezzulla when made of silver. The text states that offerings were made to these in the temple.

"holy stone" to statue of a god would, for that matter, accord well with the change discerned by F. Starke, namely a god – mortal relationship formerly conceived of as personal tends to become a more distant, submissive attitude of mortal to god, as reflected in the oft-recurring epithets for the gods, "my lord" (EN-YA) or "my lady" (GAŠAN-YA)⁶¹.

A complicating factor in the assessment of statues of gods lies in the circumstance that really our only basis for it is the cult inventory texts which mark the said changes. And since the majority of these texts must be dated to the reign of Tuthaliya IV at the end of Hittite history, they probably do not reflect the actual situation in the preceding centuries. Admittedly there are enough descriptions of festivals and ritual texts written in the old ductus, but they provide no data for a delineation of the god – mortal relationship in the Old Hittite age.

The major difference between the gods and the mortals is revealed specifically in certain mental qualities which render the gods superior. This mental superiority manifests itself in (parā) handandatar, "the divine rule" which the gods can display. Through this quality, already treated in detail by, inter alia, F. Sommer/H. Ehelolf⁶², A. Goetze⁶³ and O.R. Gurney⁶⁴, the mortal can become entirely subservient to the god. In exceptional cases the mortal can also, if he is parā handant-, be led by the god in such way that he does not deviate from the right path and knows how to avoid the mistakes normally made by mortals, as Hattušili III writes of himself⁶⁵. A terrifying, blinding divine appearance is called hatugatar, which G. Furlani terms an important distinction between god and mortal⁶⁶.

The anthropomorphic conception which mortals have of the gods understandably leads to the belief that the gods speak a language of their own which differs from the ordinary everyday language of the Hittites. Unfortunately, unlike in the Greek texts in which the gods have a different word for a certain bird than the mortals⁶⁷ or in which mention is made of the gods' word for a herb⁶⁸, this special language can only be deduced from other names and/or epithets of the gods in the Hittite and proto-Hattian languages.

In KUB 8.41 ii 2 f. for example: "For mankind you (are) Tahattanuiti, among [the gods] the mother of the source, the queen", and in 5 f.: "For mankind you (are) Wašezzili, among the gods the lion, the king⁶⁹". At the beginning of the year the gods of heaven and earth assemble in the house of the Stormgod to determine the events of the newly-born year⁷⁰. Nevertheless mortals consider them dependent on the care taken of them by humans. In a desparate attempt to avert the ruin of the Hittite people, Muršili II warns the gods in one of his Plague Prayers⁷¹ that if they continue to allow people to die, then presently there will be no one left to take care of the gods and thus they will create problems for themselves. The Telipinu myth shows how hunger can be a concrete problem for the gods, for in it the disappearance of the god Telipinu resulted in both mortals and gods starving to death⁷².

⁶¹ F. Starke, "Halmašuit im Anitta-Text und die hethitische Ideologie vom Königtum", ZA 69, 1979, 64⁺³³. in my view it is questionable whether such a theological change can be inferred from the texts. In any case the so-called 'old gods' were not represented differently than the 'new gods'.

⁶² F. Sommer/H. Ehelolf, Das hethitische Ritual des Papanikri von Komana, Boghazköi-Studien 10, 1924, 30 f. where the meaning is compared circumspectly with the Latin 'numen'.

⁶⁴ O.R. Gurney, Hittite Prayers of Mursili II, AAA 27, 1940, 3-163 (p. 76 f.).

⁶⁵ The most instructive passage pertaining to handandatar etc. is Hatt. i 36-50. Gurney's (O.R. Gurney, Hittite Prayers..., AAA 27, 76f.) explanation for the problem that a god could likewise be parā handant- is that both humans and gods can be inspired by divine power.

⁷¹ First prayer, KUB 14.14+ ii 24 ff. Cf. A. Götze, "Die Pestgebete des Muršiliš", Kl. F. 1, 1929, 161-251 (p. 174 f.).

In this context it is understandable that the gods were also subject to fear (KUB 28.4 ii 21). In general, for that matter, both gods and mortals were subject to the same limitations issuing from their dependence on 'nature', which could become temporarily disorganised by the incapacitation of a god operating in a sub-area. This incapacitation could be caused by physical mutilation, defilement or witchcraft. The magical manipulation needed to effectuate recovery is the same for the (statue of the) god and for mortals (cf. V. Haas, Magie und Mythen im Reich der Hethiter, 1977, 136 ff.). Evidence of the enchantment, bewitchment of a god is contained in KUB 5.6+ iii 18ff., an oracle text from the time of Muršili III or Hattušili III, in which two women perform rites to protect the gods against bewitchment (A. Ünal, Hattušili III, TdH 3, 1974, 168 f.).

B. The contacts between gods and humans

In addition to the assembly of the gods⁷³ noted above, other gatherings were regularly held to discuss requests made by human beings. Many prayers make mention of such meetings⁷⁴, usually in connexion with a request of the person who addresses the prayer to a certain deity, asking him to broach the subject in the assembly of the gods.

In the prayer of Muwatalli to the Stormgod pihaššašši, mention is made of a *tuliya*⁷⁵, with as explanation "place of the meeting, at which place the gods assemble". Tuliya probably also occurred in a damaged passage in a prayer of Puduhepa to the Sun-goddess of Arinna⁷⁶: "Will you ask the life [of Hattušili your servant, in the meeting] of all the gods. May your reque[st] be received [fa]vourably". The clearest passage about the function of the tuliya occurs in the prayer of Hattušili and Puduhepa to the Sun-goddess of Arinna⁷⁷: "and (if) some god or other is called upon to concern himself with that evil matter, then the Stormgod and the (other) gods will assemble at a certain moment and if someone speaks of that evil matter in the assembly the Sun-goddess of Arinna must ..., etc."

The prayer is the most direct and most discrete line of approach from a mortal to a god. But if someone cannot, or dare not, ask one of the upper gods to argue his case in the assembly of the gods, he can ask another god to intermediate and to pass on his message⁷⁸. This occurs only twice in the votive texts, i.e. in KBo 13.72 Rev. 9 f.: "If you mount Tapašunuwa, [intervene] for me with the Stormgod of Heaven, (and) I shall defeat ... (and) for the mountain I ... then to the mountain will I 1000 [...]".

A very manifest request for the intervention of the bull Šeri with all the gods is to be found in the aforementioned prayer of Muwatalli to the Stormgod *pihaššašši*⁷⁹ "Šeri, my lord, bull, appointed⁸⁰ by the Stormgod of Hatti, proclaim to the gods these words which I utter as prayer and may the lord gods hear these words as prayer, the lord gods of heaven and earth".

The second example from the votive texts is KUB 15.1 ii 28 ff.: "And if for me you, O 2 Šarrumanni-s and 1 Allanzunni, you who from the womb of the god are sprung, if for me you listen to this matter and tell (it) further to Šarruma, etc⁸¹."

Finally, in her prayer to the Sun-goddess of Arinna (KUB 21.27+, CTH 384) Puduhepa makes an emphatic call on lower-ranking gods to carry her plea to the Sun-goddess of Arinna and also to her spouse, the Stormgod of Nerik. In succession the goddesses Lelwani, Zintuhi and Mezzulla are invoked and finally the Stormgod of Zippalanda, son of the Sun-goddess and the Stormgod, literally to put in a good word for her with them.

There is no mention in the Hittite texts of the gods having fulfilled a vow or heard a prayer. Only indirectly can, for example, the passing of an illness, a victory over the enemy and the continued existence of the king indicate that the gods approve of the gifts and the religious actions promised in the vows. The feature of the prayers is the desire of the mortals to hear from the gods just how they have sinned and transgressed the rules agreed upon, thus bringing down misfortune on themselves. Often, moreover, it must first be made known to which god in which place can be ascribed the cause of the misery. Both questions can be answered by making (often many) oracular inquiries⁸². The gods can reveal their opinion both at request and unsolicited⁸³. In addition mortals can try to provoke a god into making a pronouncement⁸⁴.

The most direct line of approach between gods and mortals is revelation through a dream in which the god makes known his will without the intervention of a third party⁸⁵. From various prayers in which

⁷⁴ Not in the earliest known prayer, that of Kantuzzili (KUB 30.10). The quotations from the prayers cited here, all from the so-called Empire period, are a selection.

⁷⁹ KUB 6.45+ i 33/36 f.

⁸⁰ Meaning of piran tivant- uncertain.

⁸¹ The request to be heard occurs in both vows and prayers. In the votive texts, a valuable ear is sometimes promised to the god for hearing.

⁸³ Unsolicited, the gods express themselves specifically through omens. When so requested, they express their opinion through oracles.

⁸⁴ Incubation in a temple was a means of contacting the gods in dreams.

the gods are asked to open their hearts and souls and to reveal their opinions we know that third parties acted as intermediaries between the gods and mortals. In the prayer of Kantuzzili⁸⁶: "Would that my god might now freely open his heart (and) soul to me and [tell] me my fault so that I might learn about it! Either let my god speak to me in a dream! Would that my god would open his heart to me and tell [me] my [fau]lt so that I might learn about it! Or let the sibyl⁸⁷ tell me, [or] let the Sun-god's seer⁸⁸ tell [me] from the liver (of a sheep)".

Comparable to this is KUB 24.3+ ii 19-22, a prayer of Muršili Π^{89} : "Now, O Gods, whatever sin you see, either [let] a man of god^{90} come and declare it or [let] the old women⁹¹, the seers⁹², [(or) the augurs⁹³ determine it] or let men see it in a dream".

The same three possibilities but in roughly the opposite order are mentioned in the second Plague Prayer of Muršili II (KUB 14.8+ Rev. 41 ff.)⁹⁴: "... wenn auch aus irgendeinem anderen Grund das Sterben herrscht, so möchte ich ihn entweder im Träume schauen, oder er soll durch ein Orakel festgestellt werden, oder ein Gott begeisterter⁹⁵ (7) soll ihn nennen, oder was ich allen Priestern⁹⁶ auftrug, da sollen sie sich auf reinem (Bette) erschlafen". The prophetic value of dreams and omens is of great importance, as is attested by KUB 15.2 Rev. 5ff.⁹⁷: "Wenn dem König Sterben vorausbestimmt ist (?), ob er es im Traum schaut oder es ihm aus den Fleischorakeln [ode]r Vogelorakeln angezeigt wird, oder ob ihm (sonst) irgend ein böses Omen für Tod vorher geschieht, [so] (ist) dies das Ritual da[für]".

Only MUNUSENSI and LÚSANGA, not the other religious officials LÚAZU, LÚDINGIR-LIM-niyant, MUNUSŠU.GI, and LÚMUŠEN.DÙ occur a few times in the vows where they connote "explainer of dreams" and "priest" This is further evidence that the votive texts do not constitute a genre wherein occurs the divine reaction to what is promised, which then has to be interpreted by functionaries.

Sometimes in dreams mortals are plainly told that they are expected to give something, or they do so of their own free will in order to propitiate the gods. The dissatisfaction of the gods because of an unfulfilled vow can be expressed later, when an oracular inquiry reveals such as the reason for the gods' anger. It appears from KBo 2.2 iii 10 ff. 99 that the "Sun-goddess of Arinna of the youth" is angry "because of the vows promised objects". An accommodation proposed by means of an oracular inquiry, which suggests a penalty and a supplementary offering, is not deemed satisfactory. Unfortunately the rest of the text has not been preserved.

Comparable attempts to persuade the gods to be content with a promise to do what is asked, though some time will pass before this occurs, are also known from the prayers and the votive texts. In the second Plague Prayer of Muršili II¹⁰⁰ the king requests permission to postpone (or cancel) the offerings to the Mala river because he is still on his way to it: "(As for) the offerings to the river Mala that were established (as a cause) in connection with the plague – since I am now on my way to the river Mala, acquit me¹⁰¹ of that offering to the river Mala, O Hattian Storm-god my lord, and you gods, my lords! The offering to the river Mala I promise to make, I promise to complete it properly" etc.

⁸⁹ Translation of O.R. Gurney, Hittite Prayers..., AAA 27, 27.

⁹⁰ DINGIR MEŠ-ni-ya-an-za, here without determinative. The person connoted by the Sumerogram L^ÚDINGIR-LIM-niant or DINGIR.MEŠ-niant (Hitt. *siuniant) is translated as "Enthusiasmierte" by A. Goetze (Kleinasien, 147): "someone who becomes one with the god to such a degree that he feels him within himself and consequently can reproduce the opinion of the god". Earlier A. Götze ("Die Pestgebete...", Kl. F. 1, 233) had suggested "Gottbegeisteter(?)" as translation. In O.R. Gurney (Hittite Prayers..., AAA 27, 89 and 154): "man of god", "ecstatic(?)" with as commentary: "There is no further evidence for the activity of this person". Evidently Goetze's opinion is that anyone can at a certain moment attain the necessary level of ecstasy and consequently reproduce the opinion of the gods, whereas O.R. Gurney would seem to favour a professional medium. Neither author, however, has taken into consideration the passage from the Telipinu text (KBo 3.1+ ii 32-33) cited earlier by H. Ehelolf, "Hethitisch-akkadische Wortgleichungen", ZA 43, 1936, 170-195 (p. 177) in which šiunan antuhšeš gives warning of the murders in the royal family, literally "people of the gods", "sachlich gewiss identisch mit dem L^ÚDINGIR-LIM-ni-an-za," etc. H.A. Hoffner, "An English-Hittite Glossary", RHA 25, 1967, 7-99 (n. 71) translates šiunan antuhšaš and LÚ DINGIR-LIM as "prophet". Unfortunately this single passage does not suffice to further delineate the role played by these possible prophets among the Hittites and to compare them, for instance, with prophets in Mari and Israel (for litterature see F. Ellermeier, Prophetie in Mari und Israel, 1977, 224 ff.). In any case, the qualification added to šiuniyant by A. Kammenhuber (Orakelpraxis..., TdH 7, 197). namely "nur bei Muršiliš II", (with on p. 24 the comment that the šalliš LÚŠU.GI under Muwatalli can be identified with the šiunivant under Muršili and the Munus ENSI under Kantuzzili) would not seem to be completely correct. In the above, account has not been taken of the fact that the MUNUS DINGIR-LIM also occurs twice in Hittite texts. Hence a prophetess is possibly also attested. 91 MUNUS.MESŠU.GI.

¹⁰¹ The verb appan tarna- can equally well mean 'postpone', 'defer' (HE Erg. 2, 1961, 25).

Somewhat comparable to this is the votive text KUB 15.1 ii 13-17 in which the queen asks Šarruma to ward off evil from the king as long as she is engaged in making the offerings and until such time as she shall have completed making the offerings which she swore under oath to make because of an oracle. The queen does not specify the span of time and one cannot avoid the impression that she is deliberately procrastinating. This may also be the case in the same column of the same text (lines 32-34) where the queen asks that no evil word may reach her husband as long as he is engaged in making the promised offerings. This element of bargaining with the gods is most marked in the oracular inquiries, but a description of them falls outside the scope of this chapter.

3. The places where the vow or dream occur

Damages to the text often render it impossible to deduce where the dream or vow described took place. Nevertheless it is striking that only once¹⁰² is mention made of a dream or vow of the queen in Hattuša as compared with once or more often in the following cities: Alalah, Haša[...], Hurma, Iyamma, Katapa, Laiuna, Manayara, Mušunipa, Šamuha, Uda, Urikina, Ušša, Utruna, Zithara. In the texts discussed here, therefore, the place where the king dreams or makes a vow is never mentioned, which is remarkable in view of the fact that in the texts of other genres¹⁰³ dreams of the king are mentioned, for example in Ankuwa¹⁰⁴, Kienta¹⁰⁵ and Tiliura¹⁰⁶. If no city is named, we may probably assume that the dream or the vow of the king or queen occurred in Hattuša¹⁰⁷.

With the exception of Alalah, Haša[...], Hurma, Mušunipa and Uda, the queen spent the night in a palace or temple in all the other above-mentioned places, since she had a dream there ¹⁰⁸. In view of the publications of descriptive geographical inventories ¹⁰⁹ only marginal notes are given for the cities in question. The text passages which speak of "the god of ..." are not listed, since probably the god referred to often had a temple in cities other than the one specified.

Iyamma (KUB 15.1 ii 6):

It is possible that the queen did not have the dream in Iyamma, but in Urikina where, perhaps the queen recalled in a dream the impressive event which took place in Iyamma. The parallel with Laiuna in 37 ff. could indicate this. In any case one may assume that Iyamma, where there was at least an \pm NA4KIŠIB in the time of Telepinu and a \pm tarnu in the time of Hattušili III, was located in the vicinity of Šamuha¹¹⁰.

Katapa (KUB 15.6 ii 10 (fr.), KUB 15.12 i 7' and 11'):

This cultic center, famous in both the Old and New Hittite periods, was located a day's journey probably to the east of Hattuša. It had in any case a winter palace of Muršili II (KUB 19.37 ii 38 and KUB 5.4 iii 3) and also a palace of the queen, a palace of the forefathers, a storage house and a building where tablets were inscribed (KBo 9.72). I have found no evidence to attest the view that from the votive texts it can be inferred that there was a winter residence of the royal family in Katapa¹¹¹. Indeed the vows could very well have been made during one of the many religious festivals celebrated in Katapa, e.g. the nuntarriyašha festival in the autumn when the king returned from his campaigns (KUB 9.16 i 1 ff. and KUB 10.48 ii 11 ff.), the regular festivals and the thunder festival (KUB 5.4 iii 4), the AN.TAH.ŠUM festival (Katapa is mentioned, inter alia, in KBo 10.20 i 13) and an unspecified festival (KBo 2.12), etc¹¹².

Under Muršili II Katapa took the place of Nerik, lost to the Gašga, during the nuntarriyašha festival. There are indications that the vows, whether or not made in dreams, were most often made in Hattuša or elsewhere during religious festival journeys, namely:

- 1. Explicitly the statement that a vow was made (to Šaumatari) during the torch festival is to be found in KUB 15.19 Obv. 11 ff., with in line 14, in a severely damaged passage, the statement that during the f[estiv]als in Mušunipa the queen probably made a vow or addressed a prayer, to a deity on behalf of the king. Likewise in KUB 15.1 ii 45 it is said that in the days of the torch festival the queen in a dream addressed a prayer and made a vow to the "queen of Tarhuntašša".
- 2. Indirect indications are to be found in KUB 15.24 i 1 ff. where mention is made of the regular festivals and where, on the day (?) that there was a šalli aššeššar, a great meeting, the queen made a vow to the Stormgod of Hatti. KUB 15.28+ ii 14 also contains mention of a šalli aššeššar. In column iii of this same text it is possible that protection for the king is requested "until I shall have ended the autumn festivals." Since in principle the šalli aššeššar took place in the halentuwa-house in one of the cities visited during the celebration of the AN.TAH.ŠUM festival and the nuntarriyašha festival, this indicates a vow made during a festival (journey). In the fourth column of KUB 15.24 mention is made of the Lord of the KI.LAM festival, in what for the rest is an obscure text¹¹³. The fact that the promise to initiate festivals is made in some texts, for example KUB 15.14 and 15.21, says nothing about the moment when the vow was made, nor does the vow to celebrate the purulli festival in Hakmiš and/or Nerik¹¹⁴.

Laiuna (KUB 15.1 ii 38):

This city, so far mentioned only in this text, with also the mention of the gods Šarruma of Laiuna (in 37 and 41) and [Š]anda of Laiuna (in iii 4'), must have been located in Kizzuwatna according to E. Laroche¹¹⁵. The text mentions a Étarnu where the queen saw the event take place in a dream, hence it is plausible to assume there were lodgings in Laiuna where the queen could spend the night and have this dream. In any case there was a Šarruma sanctuary, as in Uda and Urikina.

Manayara (KUB 48.123 iv 13 (fr.), 14)116:

This city, mentioned only in this text, lays at a relatively short distance from Kudupšašši, which likewise is not mentioned in any other text. The queen had a bad dream in Manayara, where she therefore very probably spent the night. She made a vow there to Ištar of Lawazantiya for the sake of the protection of the king and his armies during a campaign.

Samuha (KUB 15.28+ iii 2' (fr.), KUB 15.30 iii 8', KUB 48.126:29' (fr.)):

For this famous cult city, see inter alia the publication of R. Lebrun, Šamuha... Despite its great importance as cultic center, Šamuha occurs relatively seldom in the votive texts. That the queen spent the night there is highly likely, since diverse festival ceremonies were held there and, moreover, there were several palaces. The well-known dream of Gaššuliyawiya¹¹⁷ in which she saw Lelwani also occurred in Šamuha. In the oracle text KBo 16.97 Rev. 15, mention is made of the possibility that the god of Šamuha tells the queen to go to Šamuha.

Urikina (KUB 15.3 i 15; KUB 48.117:4; KUB 48.125 ii? 2'):

Only in the last of these texts is there a probable mention of a dream of the queen in Urikina, a city in the vicinity of Kummanni¹¹⁸. In Urikina Hattušili III had temples built in honour of Ištar¹¹⁹. Further, the city is known because of the renewal (there?) of the treaty between Ulmi-Tešup and Tuthaliya IV(?).

Ušša (KUB 48.118:1):

This city was located in the Lower Land and one of its princes is mentioned in a text of the Old Hittite period¹²⁰. The queen is said to have had a dream there and Ušša is twice mentioned (lines 7 and 17) in the votive text. In KUB 54.70¹²¹ Ušša is mentioned in connexion with a vow made by Urhi-Tešup. It was also in Ušša that Tuthaliya IV placed his high officials under oath¹²².

Utruna (KUB 48.119 Obv.? 9'; KUB 48.121:1)¹²³:

In addition to the above-mentioned texts, this city also occurs in the oracle text KUB 6.15 ii 3 (CTH 582) and in the votive text KBo 27.60, in which vows on behalf of the king are said to have been made to Šaumatari and Ištar in consequence of what was most likely a dream of the queen in Utruna. In each of the first three texts¹²⁴ mention is made of an illness of the king in KUB 48.119 explicitly called the ¹¹³ It is more or less to be expected that the gifts for the goddess Lelwani, as named in Puduhepa's vow (KUB 15.17+) were presented while the king and the queen celebrated the "festivals of the third year" (H. Otten/V. Souček, Das Gelübde..., StBoT 1, 25 and 40⁺¹⁸) and the other annual gifts at the end of the old, or beginning of the new, year. This knowledge does not help solve the question whether the vows were made during the festivals in Hattuša or elsewhere in the country.

In RGTC 6, 238 only Šarruma is mentioned as god in Laiuna. The Cilician god Šanda is mentioned by E. Laroche, "Le dieu anatolien Šarruma", Syria 40, 1963, 277-302 (p. 293⁺²). For proper names with Šanta see LPG, 136 f.

eye-disease cataract, probably of Hattušili's right eye¹²⁵. Reference could possibly be made in KUB 6.15 ii 1' to the same disease with thereafter in line 3 mention of a dream of the queen in Utruna, though in a new section. Further research could possibly establish a relationship between the four texts. Since Utruna was only temporarily an important cultic center where, inter alia, the purulli festival for the Stormgod of Nerik was celebrated¹²⁶ we may assume that all texts in which a dream or an oracle occurs in Utruna and an illness of the king is mentioned date from the reign of Hattušili III and Puduhepa (for KUB 48.119, there is other proof as well). It is not certain, however, that the cult of Ištar of Šamuha and of Ištar of Lawazantiya (in KUB 6.15) disappeared from Utruna, as suggested by del Monte on the basis of the fact that Utruna does not recur in the Hittite texts¹²⁷.

Zithara (KUB 15.28+ ii 2'; KUB 31.77 i 5; KUB 48.123 i 8'):

In this city, possibly located more southernly than the bend of the Halys river but not too far from Hattuša, there was in any event a palace where the king could spend the winter, as in Hattuša, Katapa and Ankuwa¹²⁸. At any rate the queen spent a night there, as can be inferred from the second text: "... and the queen saw in the night of the offering of tears the following dream ..." It is likely that the other two texts speak of the same illness involving an auli of the king since, in both, Zithara is the place where a yow is made with a request that all may go well.

¹²⁶ Muršili II appointed Katapa to replace Nerik which was captured by the Gašga. Later, Muwatalli appointed Utruna to replace Nerik. This list of gods and goddesses, whose assistance was invoked in the votive texts by the king queen or others, clearly demonstrates the complexity of the pantheon as revealed in all Hittite texts. Even in this limited genre of texts from a closely demarcated late period in Hittite history (approx. 1300-1200) the eclectic character of the Hittite pantheon emerges in full breadth. Moreover account must be taken of the fact that an Akkadogram or Sumerogram often covers a name with a Hittite pronunciation. The origins of the gods and goddesses can, in a number of cases, be deduced from linguistic evidence. Hattian: Kattahha; Hurrian: Allani, Allanzuni, Hepat, Išhara, Pirinkir, Šaumatari, Šeri; Originally Asian: Kunniyawanni, Zawalli; Hittite/Luwian: Gurwašu, Kuškurša.

Here we can bear in mind the postulation of E. Laroche: "On peut poser que toute figure du panthéon hittite sans attache locale à une montagne donnée est d'importation orientale¹³⁰."

Most of the cities in the above list, where the gods had their temple(s), are located in eastern Anatolia (Urikina, Kummanni, Uda, Lawazantiya, Laiuna) in Kizzuwatna-Hurrian territory, which is to be expected in view of the dating of most of the texts to the reign of Hattušili and Puduhepa. The influence of Puduhepa, herself born in Kizzuwatna is obvious.

It is quite evident from the diverse subjects of the vows that a certain god did not concern himself with a specific subject, but that the person who made the vow had his or her own reason for addressing a particular god, sometimes one of a particular place, and that often this depended on the place where the person was and possibly on the festival during which the vow was made. This conclusion is all the more remarkable if taken in conjunction with the fact that most of the extant vows were made by the same persons, one royal couple. The goddess invoked in the majority of the vows is Ištar of Lawazantiya, whose servant Puduhepa was prior to her marriage with Hattušili III¹³¹. Almost all the vows addressed to Ištar of Lawazantiya and Ištar of Šamuha are concerned with the life of the king, though vows are also made to other deities for the sake of the king's life.

The different place names associated with the same god indicate local variants of that god who, however, certainly must be deemed specific independent gods who were venerated as such. Moreover the independence of the larger or religiously more important cities within the Hittite realm meant that there was no question of a centrally-organised state religion¹³². For the faithful it must have been a real problem to ascertain which guise of a certain god must be approached in order to render possible the restoration of an originally good situation. In KBo 2.2 diverse oracular inquiries are answered in the negative before the exact identity of the wrathful god is discerned¹³³. Naturally enough this problem is not stated explicitly in the votive texts, since vows were possibly addressed directly to the proper god after oracular inquiries had been made.

5. The dating of the votive texts

The votive texts date from the period from Muwatalli up to and including Tuthaliya IV. In dating texts it must ever be borne in mind that the number of texts preserved from the Muwatalli and Urhi-Tešup reigns is relatively smaller than those of Muršili II and Hattušili III¹³⁴. Hence this factor weighs heavy in assessing the occurrence of certain genres and in determining, for example, the influence of the Hurrian religion on the Hittites. Nevertheless it would seem that the vows in the stricter sense, that is those in which the gift is made only after a clearly stated condition, were recorded under Hattušili III in particular, with some under his son Tuthaliya IV^{135} .

A few important aids to the correct dating are 136:

- 1. the occurrence in a text of persons who can definitely be dated, albeit approximately:
- 2. historical and geographical data which can pertain to a specific period of time¹³⁷;
- 3. linguistic data¹³⁸:
- 4. the ductus of the texts and the forms of the signs ¹³⁹.

In addition the texts dealt with here yield assistance in the form of passages which point to a certain king or queen. The reason why a vow is made is also a useful indication. In the following, criteria 3 and 4 are not taken into consideration.

The chronological sequence of the texts dealt with is as follows:

- 1. KBo 9.96, possibly (+) KBo 8.63: This text dates from the time when, under king Muwatalli, Hattušili went on a military expedition to Amurru and Egypt and when he was king of Hakpiš(ša). The mention of the campaign against the countries of Amurru and Egypt removes any doubt on this point. Precisely who, however, promised to invoke Ištar and perform other acts of respects, Muwatalli or Hattušili, is difficult to say. Depending on the interpretation of GIN-ri in line 7, the following translations are possible:
- a) "If you gods on that military expedition on which I My Majesty go forth lend me support and I conquer the country of Amurru ... then I will ... Ištar Hepat, etc."
- b) "If you gods on that military expedition on which His Majesty goes forth lend me support ... etc."
- In a) GIN-ri would be written for the first person iyahhari which occurs only three times in Hittite texts¹⁴⁰. Hence it is likely that GIN-ri = iyattari (3rd. pers.), which often occurs. The translation is in ¹³¹ H. Otten, Puduhepa, Eine hethitische Königin in ihren Textzeugnissen, 1975, 133.

¹³² Cf. H. Otten, in: Religionsgeschichte..., 106.

¹³³ In ii 23 is established that the Sun-goddess of Arinna is the cause of the king's illness. Various questions are asked and then from line 50 on an attempt is made to discover which Sun-goddess of Arinna is angry. It appears not to be the Sun-goddess of Arinna "who has her altar in Arinna", nor the Sun-goddess of Arinna "who is venerated in Hattuša", but "the Sun-goddess of Arinna of the youth".

¹³⁴ One probable reason for this is the removal by Muwatalli of the royal residence from Hattuša to Tarhuntašša. That there are few texts of king Urhi-Tešup is understandable, since he reigned only about five years.

¹³⁵ See PART ONE Chapter 6.

¹³⁶ A detailed treatment of the problems of dating and relevant data is to be found in: S. Heinhold-Krahmer et al., Probleme der Textdatierung in der Hethitologie, TdH 9, 1979.

¹³⁷ For example the occurrence of Išuwa, Amurru, Egypt, Tarhuntašša, etc.

¹³⁸ For example certain descriptions, the occurrence of glosswords and certain ideograms, grammatical peculiarities. For the problems involved in dating based on ideograms and gloss sign words, see inter alia C. Kühne, "Bemerkungen zu kürzlich edierten hethitischen Texten", ZA 62, 1972, 236-261 (p. 239).

¹³⁹ This criterion is only effective for texts which were written in periods widely separated and/or were frequently copied.

¹⁴⁰ E. Neu, Interpretation..., StBoT 5, 62. Moreover a Sumerogram with a Hittite complement in the first person does not occur in any text whatsoever.

that case b). One may then assume that the king makes the vow and the person is alternatively in the third and first form¹⁴¹.

But we can also take the words spoken in the first person to be those of Hattušili who refers to his brother, king Muwatalli, as ^DUTU-ŠI. It is well enough known from the Apology of Hattušili that he led troops from the land Hatti on a campaign against Egypt¹⁴².

Unlike what has hitherto been assumed it would now appear that, as second-in-command, Hattušili wishes to personally undertake the conquest of Amurru, which joined forces with Egypt shortly before the battle of Kadeš¹⁴³. This would accord excellently with the political ambitions of Hattušili, as evidenced by his remarkably amicable treatment of the deposed king of Amurru. Bentešina, after his capture¹⁴⁴ and his restoration to the throne immediately following on the death of Muwatalli shortly after that same campaign instead of Muwatalli's protégé Šapili. This interpretation is not, in my opinion, incompatible with the fact that, inter alia, the Šaušgamuwa treaty states that Muwatalli defeated Amurru, since he was reigning monarch¹⁴⁵.

What in KBo 9.96 Hattušili (or Muwatalli) did for or promised in Irqata¹⁴⁶ to Ištar of Nineveh is unfortunately not clear because of textual damage. There are no indications that here Ištar ordered him in a dream to go to Lawazantiya and fetch Puduhepa¹⁴⁷. In any case KBo 9.96 can be dated in the year before the battle of Kadeš, or in the same year 1274 B.C. according to the latest chronological data¹⁴⁸. There is nothing in the contents of the text which absolutely excludes KBo 8.63 from belonging to the same text. The god of Aruš[na] in column iv line 5' is also mentioned by Muwatalli in his prayer KBo 11.1 Rev. 13'. According to the criteria applied by H. Otten (Puduhepa 1975, 13), namely that all texts mentioning Ištar of Lawaz[antiya] probably date from the period after Hattušili succeeded to the throne, the only problem that arises is her mention here.

Nevertheless, having regard to the comments of R. Lebrun on Lawazantiya¹⁴⁹, I believe it possible that the goddess also occurs in a vow made by Hattušili before his succession to the throne. In my view evidence of KBo 8.63 also having been recorded by Hattušili is the formulation of 1-9'/11', where "you" means Muwatalli and "I" means Hattušili. It seems to me less plausible that this is a votive text of Puduhepa, as argued by A. Ünal (TdH 6, 1978, 47) especially on the grounds of the occurrence of the god of Arušna.

2. KUB 15.5+: The second text which probably dates from the time when Hattušili was king of Hakpiš, and hence can be dated under Muwatalli or Urhi-Tešup, is KUB 15.5+. The most salient features are the absence of any mald-, malteššar or *KARĀBU*¹⁵⁰ and, except for one one MUNUS.LUGAL as in most votive texts. Hence the dreams here are exclusively of the king and his staff and have to be interpreted by Hepapiya.

The personal names which occur both in this and other texts¹⁵² also suggest a dating in the period Muwatalli to Hattušili III. Other factors of importance for dating are the mention of a journey to Araūnna and the Gašga region, the fact that the Stormgod is angry with the king of the country of Hakpiš and with the king of the country of Išuwa. The discontented grandmother of whom Arumura enquires could also help set the date. It is also remarkable, for that matter, that Hepapiya designates all gifts for DINGIR.GAL only. The occurrences of this god in other, possibly datable texts, should therefore be investigated.

The fact that Danuhepa is mentioned in iii 4 ff. led F. Imparati to date this text to the reign of Muršili II, Muwatalli or Urhi-Tešup¹⁵³. If here the king of Hakpiš is a reference to Hattušili¹⁵⁴, the obvious dating is under Muwatalli or Urhi-Tešup¹⁵⁵, since Danuhepa died during the reign of Urhi-

¹⁴² Hatt. § 9 (in the translation of H. Otten, Die Apologie Hattušiliš III, StBoT 24, 1981, 17): "Als es aber geschah, wie mein Bruder gegen das Land Ägypten zog, da führte ich die (Fuss-)Truppen und Wagenkämpfer dieser Länder (!), welche ich wieder besiedelt hatte, hinab zu meinem Bruder zum Feldzug gegen Ägypten. Und welche (Fuss-)Truppen und Wagenkämpfer vom Lande Hatti vor meinem Bruder in meiner Hand waren, die befehligte ich."

¹⁴⁵ KUB 23.1+ i 36 ff. (C. Kühne/H. Otten, Der Šaušgamuwa-Vertrag, StBoT 16, 1971, 8 f.). Muwatalli is also connected with the victory over Amurru in KUB 21.17 i 16-17: A. Goetze, ANET³, 319 and A. Ünal, Hattušili III, TdH 3, 80 ff. The country of Amurru is not mentioned in the Apology.

¹⁴⁶ This is the only occurrence of Irqata in Hittite texts (see GS III, 11 f. On p. 12 mention is erroneously made of [Istar] of Irqata instead of [Istar] of Nineveh).

Tešup. Hence ^DUTU-ŠI would not, in any case, refer to Hattušili. We must remember, however, that Tuthaliya was also probably king of Hakpiš¹⁵⁶ so that consequently ^DUTU-ŠI could refer to Hattušili. However, this would then be the only text in which Tuthaliya occurs as king of Hakpiš, which renders the identification less likely.

Precisely who Danuhepa was, first or second spouse of Muršili or wife of Šarri-Kušuh, the brother of Muršili who became king of Karkemiš, is less important for a dating than the fact that she was (?) removed¹⁵⁷ before Hattušili became king. There is no need whatsoever to proclaim applicable to KUB 15.5 the observation of F. Sommer¹⁵⁸ that a king reigning at the time the text was recorded could designate himself ^DUTU-ŠI in a text that was set in a time when the person in question was not yet ^DUTU-ŠI¹⁵⁹. In view of the fact, moreover, that there is not a single indication that Danuhepa appeared as dead to the king in a dream, warning the king against negligence because she considered inadequate the golden rhyton which the king had made for the Stormgod, only Muwatalli and Urhi-Tešup qualify as ^DUTU-ŠI¹⁶⁰. Of these Urhi-Tešup is more likely, because Hattušili asks why the king has not given certain gifts to the Stormgod and because his attitude towards Urhi-Tešup is critical. The wrath of the Stormgod with Hattušili as king of Hakpiš and with the king of Išuwa¹⁶¹ could be prompted by the behaviour of Hattušili's father Muršili toward Danuhepa. Hattušili's fear of this wrath appears from his last prayer to the Sun-goddess of Arinna¹⁶².

Why the king of Išuwa (Ari-Šarruma?) also had to fear the wrath of the Stormgod is not known. The mention of two journeys, to Arawana 163 and Gašga territory, provides no direct assistance in attaining a more precise dating, because it would appear from ii 32'-36' that the reigning monarch provided gifts for the journey and moreover directly after his succession Muwatalli appointed Hattušili commander of the army (EN KARAŠ) and governor of the northern part of the realm (KUR UGU) bordering on the Gašga territory ¹⁶⁴. Since Hattušili retained these offices under Urhi-Tešup, the inevitable assumption is that Hattušili led the military operations against Gašga under Muwatalli and Urhi-Tešup as ^DUTU-ŠI¹⁶⁵. However it seems also plausible to me that Muwatalli or Urhi-Tešup must give the gifts as the ultimately responsible king.

The occurrence of UR.MAH-ziti in a dream of the king (ii 52' f.) could also argue for a dating under Urhi-Tešup as king, because Hattušili appointed this son of the Stadtholder of Hattuša, Mittannamuwa, great scribe(?) during his illness when Urhi-Tešup was on the throne 166. The other personal names, which also occur elsewhere, make no contribution to a more exact dating. The fact that Hepapiya, evidently an important woman in matters concerning dreams, occurs perhaps in only one(?) other text (KUB 52.15 iii 1'), although Hattušili was intensely involved with dreams, suggests that she could have disappeared from the scene with Urhi-Tešup(?), from whom she received her orders.

It is difficult to explain iv 34' -39'. There mention is made of the father of the king from whom or for whom something is requested through a dream. Since, in any case, the father is dead (otherwise he would have been reigning monarch), is for whom the only possible translation. If ^DUTU-ŠI refers to Muwatalli or Hattušili, the father is Muršili II. If Urhi-Tešup is the king, he is Muwatalli.

Lines 36' ff. mention gifts from a queen and for the oppressed(?) spirits of the dead. In this context a natural assumption is that this queen is one of the dead, but this is in no way necessary. Who is thus designated? The last queen before Puduhepa was probably Danuhepa, who is still called MUNUS.LUGAL under Urhi-Tešup ¹⁶⁷. Hence she is really the only one who qualifies for consideration here as MUNUS.LUGAL, because Hattušili is not yet on the throne ¹⁶⁸. Why, in the same text, she is three times designated ^fDanuhepa (i 7, iii 4 and 9) and once MUNUS.LUGAL is difficult to explain. It is possible that in this text she appears in dreams as a living Danuhepa, but after her death

⁽p. 136) speaks, however, possibly of the period of Puduhepa. Under Urhi-Tešup, Hattušili remained king of Hakpiš.

¹⁵⁸ AU, 91 (in: A. Ünal, Hattušili III, TdH 3, 134). The postulation of F. Sommer pertains to KUB 21.17 where ^DUTU-5*I* means Hattušili.

¹⁵⁹ A. Ünal, Hattušili III, TdH 3, 37 does. For that matter it is the king, not UR.MAH-ziti who dreams.

¹⁶⁰ I consider it highly unlikely that ^DUTU-ŠI in KUB 15.5 refers to different kings, as assumed by A. Kammenhuber (Orakelpraxis..., TdH 7, 27), i. e. Muršili II and Hattušili III. The expression "now that the Stormgod comes in heaven" could indicate a tuliya of the gods, an assembly where, inter alia, justice was meted out, as attested in a ritual of a campaign against the people of Gašga (E. von Schuler, Die Kaskäer. Ein Beitrag zur Ethnographie des alten Kleinasiens, 1965, 170 f.). The term "encounter" (KAR) negligence can indicate a verdict of guilt, just as wemiya is also used in the Apology iii 18 for establishing witchcraft during a process (H. Otten, Die Apologie..., StBoT 24, 18 f.).

¹⁶⁸ A. Kammenhuber, Materialien zu einem hethitischen Thesaurus 1, 1973, 36 dates this passage under Hattušili (still during Urhi-Tešup's reign) was called MUNUS.LUGAL until Puduhepa became MUNUS.LUGAL¹⁶⁹.

The discontented grandmother who must be satisfied (i 12 f.) is Tawananna, wife of Šuppiluliuma, if Muwatalli is the grandson; if Urhi-Tešup is the grandson, the reference is again to Danuhepa. The bad relationship between the last two could well explain the discontent of the grandmother mentioned in the text. Nothing is known about a bad relationship between Muwatalli and his grandmother – if she was still alive when Muwatalli was king.

A last possibility for dating the text is the only god in it to whom gifts must be presented: DINGIR GAL = "the great god". According to H. M. Kümmel¹⁷⁰, this is always a designation for a specific, though unnamed divine figure. Of the five passages¹⁷¹ in which "great" is not opposed to "minor", only KUB 21.38 Obv. 11' can be dated with certainty, because in it Puduhepa states that Urhi-Tešup gave to the great god what remained (of the palace?). The other two (published) passages pertain to aldanni oracles¹⁷², and only in KUB 22.28 is mention made of a real god¹⁷³. In IBoT 1.33 the term "the great god" means a place where, or past which, the eel(?) swims, in the same way as mention is also made of "the good god", the life", "the gateway of the king", etc. The dating of these oracles is uncertain. Since mention is made of ^fMizzulla in IBoT 1.33:83, E. Laroche¹⁷⁴ suggests the reign of Muršili II for this text, whereas A. Kammenhuber¹⁷⁵ ascribes the facts which could render a dating possible. The only certain piece of information provided by the above texts is that Urhi-Tešup presents gifts to the great god, which could also be the case in KUB 15.5+, though with Hepapiya as intermediary.

Taking all the above data into consideration, the most plausible dating of KUB 15.5+ is the reign of Urhi-Tešup.

3. KUB 31.67 and 77: It is difficult to say whether the two texts discussed here, in which Puduhepa occurs as personal name and she is not designated as MUNUS.LUGAL, perhaps date from the time when Hattušili was, inter alia, king of Hakpiš under Muwatalli and Urhi-Tešup. In my view the most feasible interpretation is that the MUNUS.LUGAL in both texts is indeed Puduhepa, but that her personal name is used when, for example, others speak of her¹⁷⁶. H. Otten considers the identification of MUNUS.LUGAL in KUB 31.77 with Puduhepa a certainty, specifically because mention is made of the personal name Puduhepa¹⁷⁷.

4. The largest group of texts can be dated to the time when Hattušili was king and Puduhepa queen. Every time a vow is made in a text by the queen for the life or the health of the king we may assume that that text dates from the reign of this royal couple. It is true that we must not assume that Hattušili III was the only king afflicted by a disease, but Hattušili is the only king alive by becoming a young priest in the service of Ištar. Hattušili certainly was partly responsible for Puduhepa regularly making vows to ensure the protection of Ištar. Although A. Ünal believes that the illness which afflicted Hattušili in his youth lasted all his life ('keine schwerwiegende, wohl aber eine chronische"), which he considers more likely than that he suffered from a series of different ones¹⁷⁸, the votive texts alone mention various diseased parts of the body. Once a vow is made for an unknown disease¹⁷⁹.

I think it highly probable that all these 'illness-vows' (including those made by unknown persons) concern Hattušili, just like the vows for the purpose of the life, or a long life of the king. The text in question are: KUB 15.1 (life of the king), KUB 15.3 (living many years and healing a disease of the foot), KUB 15.4 (life of the king), KUB 15.6 (disease of the eye), KUB 15.8 (probably life and eyedisease), KUB 15.9 (probably eye-disease), KUB 15.11 (life of the king), KUB 15.18 (disease of the right eye), KUB 15.19 (life of the king), KUB 15.22 (health and life of the king), KUB 15.23 (life of the king), KUB 15.24 (life of the king), KUB 15.30 (life of the king), KUB 31.69 (a disease?), IBoT 3.123 (a disease), KBo 8.61 (eye-disease), KUB 48.119 (unknown disease causing blurred vision and illness of the right eye).

¹⁶⁹ My assumption here is that during a short period there need not necessarily have been a living MUNUS.LUGAL. I think it unlikely that Malnigal was MUNUS.LUGAL between Danuhepa and Puduhepa, because Hattušili would undoubtedly have mentioned her inevitable removal in his Apology or his prayers. For reasons set forth in PART ONE Chapter 9 on ^fKilušhepa, I cannot subscribe to the argument of S.R. Bin-Nun, The Tawananna..., TdH 5, 170 that there could not have been two queens at the same time because then the latter would have been called DUMU.MUNUS GAL.

Also for other, internal reasons this text can be ascribed to Hattušili and Puduhepa. As explained by G.F. del Monte, "Utruna...", Or. Ant. 17, 189 ff., the events of the text took place in the period when the Stormgod of Nerik was still being venerated in Utruna and Šahurunuwa was still alive (he died at the beginning of the reign of KUB 48.123 (disease of auli, ill-health, fever), Liv. 49-47-42 (life and health). Presumably the following texts may be ascribed to Puduhepa and/or Hattušili: KUB 15.10 (dream of the queen), KUB 15.12 (dreams of the queen in Katapa; the Rev. of the tablet contains a protocol-like text strongly resembling KUB 31.67, 69, 71 and 77), KUB 15.15 (statue of "the queen, Ištar, my lady"), KUB 15.21 (mention of the city of Hatenzuwa captured by the twelve-year-old Tuthaliya for Hattušili), KUB 15.28+ (the same auli-disease in Zithara as in KUB 48.123), KUB 15.29 (queen makes a vow to Hepat of Kummanni, mention made of Šaušgaziti), VBoT 75 (vow made by the queen to the Stormgod and Hepat), KUB 48.118 (strange dream of the queen in Ušša with mention of UR.MAH-ziti as chief scribe), KUB 48.126 (dreams of the queen on behalf of the king and vow made to Ištar of Šamuha).

For various reasons the following texts cannot be dated: KUB 15.7 (too few data), KUB 15.13 (idem), KUB 15.14 (idem), KUB 15.20 (Hattušili or earlier; in any case as early signs or words: KIŠ, IDI, meman), KUB 15.25 (too few data), KUB 15.26 (possibly attributable to Puduhepa/Hattušili because Ištar of Lawazantiya is mentioned), KUB 15.27 (too few data; only clue pointing to reign of Hattušili the personal name Tuttu as supervisor of material?), HT 33 (only clue Šaušgaziti), KBo 3.51 (too few data), KBo 8.62 (idem), KBo 13.72 (vow made by a king to the mountain Tapašunawa = hapax, on behalf of a military expedition: not an oracle text as stated in the publication), KBo 13.80 (too few data), KUB 48.117 (inventory of persons donated as donation to temple?), KUB 48.120 (dream of Danuhepa), KUB 48.124 (dreams of diverse persons. The mention of the god Zawalli and city of Aššur is not enough to make a dating possible, nor are the personal names).

6. The concept maltessar in connexion with the dating of votive texts

It would seem likely that the meaning of malduwar and malteššar shifted from "offering", "ritual", to "vow". Malduwar is translated as "propiatory offering" in the passage from KUB 5.6 mentioned in PART ONE Chapter 1, but in fact it is the verbal substantive or "infinitif d'action" of mald- = "the promising of an offering", "the making of a vow" as opposed to mateššar = "the offering", "the vow".

In any case malteššar occurs in the Old Hittite ritual texts nos. 109, 110, 111 (CTH 733) and 117, 119¹⁸¹ as "ritual" in a set formula that follows the invocation of the gods.

That, as F. Starke remarks¹⁸², malteššar can be replaced in this formula by AWATUM (= "word", "matter") could be an indication that the original meaning of malteššar was "ritual accompanied by an invocation", derived from the verb mald- (without -za) in the sense of "proclaim in public", "to recite", "to speak" or "to pronounce a prayer"¹⁸³. Hence in all texts that are not New Hittite, mald- must be thus translated¹⁸⁴. In early texts occur alternating forms of mald- (+ -za) and KARĀBU and of malteššar alongside of IKRIBU = "vow" and "promised object"¹⁸⁵, but not AWATUM.

Evidence that in the fourteenth century in any case malteššar still means "ritual", "offering", is to be found in the identification SISKUR.SISKUR.HI.A-aš (KUB 17.21 i 19 (CTH 375), prayer of Amuwanda and Ašmunikal) and maltešnaš in dupl. 398/u+:5¹⁸⁶. The colophon of the cult text KUB 28.80 (CTH 737), column iv lines 8 and 10, also clearly has malteššar = "offering", "offering ritual": "(8) ... and this offering ritual was introduced (9) for them and it is (11) not made the same as/made identical to (10) the former offering rituals¹⁸⁷". C. Kühne/H. Otten date this text between Šuppiluliuma I and the end of the thirteenth century. The fact that, as well as malteššar, mukeššar (a certain ritual ceremony), can also alternate with SISKUR.SISKUR can be disregarded here¹⁸⁸. As long as it is impossible to date with precision all the texts in which mald- and its derivatives occur and in which Tuthaliya IV), hence under Hattušili III. From KUB 48.119 it appears that the statue of the Stormgod was about to be brought back home from Utruna to Nerik. This proves that under Hattušili the veneration of the Stormgod of Nerik took place again in Nerik, as did the celebration of the purulli festival.

Otten, "Zu den Anfängen der hethitischen Geschichte", MDOG 83, 1951, 33-45 (p. 43), and not "I pronounced a vow", as in E. Neu, Der Anitta-Text, StBoT 18, 1974, 15. Prière hittite, 10 also interprets mald- in the first sense: "On doit s'imaginer une inauguration solennelle suivie d'imprécation, dans le style banal des fondations de sanctuaires hittites". The comment of F. Starke, "Halmašuit...", ZA 69, 79⁺⁶¹, that the content of the vow in this Anitta passage could perhaps be compared with IBoT 1.30 (A. Kammenhuber, "Die hethitische Vorstellungen von Seele und Leib, Herz und Leibesinnerem, Kopf und Person II", ZA 57, 1965, 177-222 (p. 195)) in which "the IM.ME priest speaks a vow for the king (maldi)", must likewise be revised on this point. In IBoT 1.30 there is no question of a vow, the priest expresses a prayer for a happy administration of the country. The Old Hittite texts in which mald- occurs (always in the third person singular) are: nos. 25, 59, 112, 113, 120, 121 and 129 (cited after E. Neu, Althethitische Ritualtexte..., StBoT 25).

there is certainty about a vow being made, it would seem difficult to say definitely when making vows became a custom with the Hittites.

According to H. Otten/V. Souček, the votive texts would seem to be restricted to the reigns of Muwatalli and Hattušili III¹⁸⁹. In 1962, however, H. Otten mentioned a tablet found in 1952 containing a vow made by Tuthaliya IV who promised gifts to diverse gods if he should conquer the king of Aššur, Tukulti-Ninurta¹⁹⁰. A. Kammenhuber contends that it was Puduhepa who brought the custom of making vows from Kizzuwatna to Hattuša and thus by promising gifts to the gods "bought their indulgence and covered a certain amount of injustice in a rather cheap manner¹⁹¹". This would imply that mald- etc. cannot mean "to make a vow" prior to Puduhepa.

The abovementioned description of a festival KUB 27.1+ (CTH 712) merits further study in this connexion. In it Hattušili III describes, partially altered to a festival in honour of his own tutelary goddess, Ištar of the field of Šamuha, a festival which his father Muršili II used to celebrate in honour of his tutelary goddess on campaigns, IŠTAR LÍL walliwalli, "the mighty Ištar of the field" "Muršili had acted thus: for the campaigns which the king undertook in the years since the goddess was last venerated, for all those campaigns oracular inquiries were made about the ambašši and keldi offerings and about the malteššar. As was determined by the oracle, thus did he make the ambašši and keldi offerings. Thereafter he ordered pure raw meat to be set down for the deity "3". This text would seem to support the conclusion that here malteššar means the meat-offering and that an offering of thanks for former campaigns was made.

Malteššar occurs a further three times in this text: in line 24 ff. Hattušili states that, in the year he goes on campaign he makes an ambašši offering, a keldi offering and a malteššar to Ištar of the field of Šamuha, as determined by oracle. There is no offering whatsoever for the past years in which he did not go on campaign. In lines 29-31 is stated that for "the mighty Ištar of the field of Muršili" there is an ambašši and a keldi offering after an oracle pronouncement but no malteššar. Finally, in lines 31-34 it is stated that there is no ambašši offering, no keldi offering and also no malteššar for Ištar of the field of Šamuha in the year in which the king does not go on campaign.

If conclusions may be drawn from this text, they are the following:

- 1. The malteššar offering, like the two other offerings, is made only in the year in which the king goes on campaign.
- 2. Here a malteššar is given afterwards, after the campaigns, and hence cannot mean "vow"¹⁹⁴, but rather an offering of thanks. The festival in question was probably celebrated in the autumn or winter, even so many years.
- 3. The old goddess of Muršili, the mighty Ištar of the field, does not receive a malteššar, though she does receive the other two offerings. The reason for this can only be surmised. Is it because the old goddess does not have to support Hattušili on his future campaigns? In this specific case has malteššar something to do with that?
- 4. Evidently malteššar still designates a sort of offering during (the early years of?) the reign of Hattušili III.

The dating of the votive texts was dealt with in greater detail in the last chapter. Here it must be emphasized that, of the only two texts dealt with which date from before the reign of Hattušili III/Puduhepa, namely KUB 15.5+ and KBo 9.96, the former contains no vows with the characteristic noted above, but rather explanation of dreams and the latter is a vow made by Hattušili on behalf of a campaign against Egypt led by his brother, king Muwatalli. Both texts date from the period when Hattušili was king of Hakpiš and Urhi-Tešup and Muwatalli respectively were on the Hittite throne. Hence there would seem to be convincing ground for the conclusion that Hattušili introduced the custom of making vows in the narrower sense of the term and that the vow evolved out of an offering of thanks made on the conclusion of a campaign.

¹⁸⁹ H. Otten/V. Souček, Das Gelübde..., StBoT 1, 1⁺³. This dating is taken from Dreams, 193. It pertained only to KUB 15.1 to 30.

The vow in KUB 15.23 which she ascribes to Tuthaliya must be a vow made by Puduhepa for the young general Tuthaliya, under king Hattušili III.

¹⁹⁴ R. Lebrun, Šamuha... consistently translates malteššar as 'vœu'. I. Wegner, Gestalt..., AOAT 36 leaves it untranslated. Prière hittite, 13 is undecided about the character of malteššar here "... mais la nature de malteššar reste problématique".

7. Weights and measures of the promised objects

The aim of this discussion on the weights and measures of the promised objects is to investigate whether there was a fixed standard for the weight (and/or dimensions) of the various objects related to the donor and the purpose of the gift. It must be borne in mind that offerings are also mentioned in the prayers and that the same applies to them as to the promised objects. As genre, the prayers are not mentioned again. In the first place it is striking that the votive texts nowhere mention the dimensions of objects, whereas this repeatedly occurs in the cult-inventory texts (inter alia in the so-called Bildbeschreibungen), especially in the case of statues of gods and people.

Vice versa, weights are seldom given in the cult-inventory texts¹⁹⁵, whereas in the votive texts regularly mention is made of the weight of the metal of which the object is made or is to be made. In most texts, however, the donor mentions neither dimensions nor weight.

There are three categories of descriptions of objects:

- 1. dimensions, but no weight (cult-inventory texts);
- 2. weight but no dimensions (votive texts);
- 3. neither weight nor dimensions (both genres of texts).

This fact could perhaps be explained as follows. The cult-inventory texts deal with objects already used in the cult and as such can be measured: the weight, which is mainly an indication of the value of the object, is not an important factor in its identification. The main factor in the second category is the amount of metal; the weight determines the value of the offering. The third category comprises offerings promised in the votive text by someone who does not wish to specify the size of his donation.

It is remarkable that only twice does the person making the vow state explicity: "I will determine the weight thereof according to my own judgment (KI.LÁ.BI ZI-za dahhi); that in fifteen instances the object promised is qualified as being of unspecified weight" (KI.LÁ.BI NU.GÁL) and that 56 offerings are not further specified.

On closer perusal of the second category (only the weight of the objects is given), it appears that the weights given for gold or silver objects in out texts are 3, 6, 10, 16, 20 šekels and 1, 2 and 100 minas¹⁹⁶. 1 mina equals 40 šekels¹⁹⁷. The actual weight of a Hittite mina is not known. If we assume its weight to be the same as that of the Babylonian mina, i. e. ca. 470 grammes¹⁹⁸, then 1 šekel would weight 11.75 grammes¹⁹⁹.

Can a correlation be established between the size of the promised object and the assistance requested of the god? Naturally one's first assumption tends to be that the greater the need for divine assistance (therefore the greater the urgency), the greater will be the value of the promised object. This prompted H. Otten's²⁰⁰ conclusion that the kammara-eye-disease of the king (nowadays 'cataract') could not have been a serious illness because of the slight value of the promised 1 fat ox and 4 sheep in Bo 2002a (= KUB 48.119). A. Kammenhuber believes that Puduhepa's promises made in dreams were a rather cheap way of buying the indulgence of the gods²⁰¹. Such an opinion perhaps underrates the possibility that, as daughter of a priest, Puduhepa was guided by a deep religious feeling and was not mainly concerned with the cheapest solution. Apart from that, it is difficult to determine what is of little or great value to a person at a certain moment. Are there any text passages which attest that yows ¹⁹⁵ The following dimensions occur: 1 iron bull with support (cult-stand?): 2 šekans (1 šekan is ca. 50 cm.); statue of a man: 1 1/2 šekans; 1 statue of a man, ... 1 šekan; 1 statue of a woman ... 1 šekan. This is probably why L. Rost's tabulated survey in "Zu den hethitischen Bildbeschreibungen II. Teil", MIO 9, 1963, 175-239 classifies the materials and the dimensions but not the weights. Objects with a specified weight are, inter alia, 2 wakšur casks of silver, their weight is 2 minas of silver, 1 GEŠPU (fist) of silver of 20 šekels and 1 silver goblet of 8 šekels.

¹⁹⁷ See H. Otten, "Zum hethitischen Gewichtssystem", AfO 17, 1954-56, 128, 131 and Th.P.J. van den Hout, RIA sub Masse. An instructive passage in this connexion is KBo 17.74+ i 48 f. (Old Hittite: E. Neu, Ein althethitisches Gewitterritual, StBoT 12, 1970, 16 f.), where 5 minas of silver are given to 20 bearers of bronze spears with as a result 10 šekels of silver for each. We also know the correlation between the weights, because the Laws mention halved fines and their former amounts. For example a fine of 30 minas is reduced to 1 mina and 20 šekels. In KUB 30.15 Obv. 3 the reading "a half mina and 20" probably cannot mean 20 šekels (Cf. HTR, 66 and 142). L. Christmann-Franck, "Le rituel des funérailles royales hittites", RHA 29, 1971, 61-111 (p. 65) does give as translation: "Une fiole d'argent d'une demi-mine et vingt sicles...".

¹⁹⁸ The absolute weight of a Babylonian mina had once more been confirmed by the finding of a stone weight bearing the inscription "1 mina" and having a true weight of ca. 473 grammes (see T.A. Holland, "An inscribed weight from Tell Sweyhat", Iraq 37, 1975, 75-76).

²⁰¹ A. Kammenhuber, Orakelpraxis..., TdH 7, 25. Likewise on p. 27 f. Puduhepa is accused of trying to bribe the gods with vota, unlike Muršili II who looked on the oracles as an objective means of learning the truth from the gods.

have been fulfilled in too cheap a manner and that consequently the god (or another being) admonishes the donor in a dream to give a more valuable offering, as remarked by A. Kammenhuber²⁰²? It does indeed (repeatedly) happen that the vow is not fulfilled or that what is promised is found to be inadequate²⁰³.

In a great many of the vows, no direct correlation can be established between the seriousness of the situation and the size of the promised object, while the type of object correlates to the goal aimed at to only a limited degree. Examples of text passages in which a large offering (in our eyes) is promised for something weighty²⁰⁴ are:

KUB 15.1 i 1-11: a golden statue with a golden rosette for the life of the king and protection against evil.

KUB 15.1 iii 32-38; a golden statue of Ištar and silver weapons for the life of the king²⁰⁵.

KUB 15.23 Rev. 17'-21': the invocation of the god and a [golden] image of the king for the king continuing to live for many years.

KUB 15.24 i 1-6: a halentuwa house and a gateway²⁰⁶ for the life (of the king?).

KUB 15.28+ ii 6'-10': silver images of the king and the queen if they both continue to live.

The god's reward would seem relatively small in the following instances: three storage vessels (with oil, honey and fruit) if the king lives one hundred years (KUB 15.1 iii 7'-16') and a (silver?) shield and a silver gateway if the enemy does not penetrate into Hatti, if the matter of the king's dying goes no further and if the inhabitants of the countries of Hatti, the court and the king shall remain healthy(?) (KUB 15.22:1'-11'). But in this case perhaps all the goddess needed to do was to hold aloft her shield to provide protection against evil influences, so that a whole list of evils could be averted by one act.

²⁰² A. Kammenhuber, Orakelpraxis..., TdH 7, 25 f.: "Solche Vota werden, wenn sie noch nicht oder nur in ungenügender oder zu billiger Weise erfüllt sind, in den Träumen angemahnt".

Sometimes there is an obvious correlation between the promised object and the desired goal: a shield for averting evil²⁰⁷, an ear for listening to the person making the vow²⁰⁸, a silver city if the city of Ankuwa is preserved²⁰⁹, a golden soul for the life of the king²¹⁰, etc. In most cases there is no direct correlation the offering simply consists of an action or an object that will please the god. Our assessment of the value of what is promised is also often hindered by the lack of any specification of the material (sometimes because of textual damage) and of the weight. Moreover we cannot tell how the value of the objects relates to the property of the person making the yow.

The weights given for objects in the votive texts:

3 šekels: A golden soul²¹¹ and a golden earpendant²¹² of this weight are promised. They probably weigh 35 grammes.

6 šekels: 1 pair of silver eyes²¹³, ca. 70 grammes altogether.

10 šekels: 1 silver soul²¹⁴, 1 golden ear²¹⁵ and two other objects unidentifiable because of textual damage²¹⁶. They weigh ca. 117 grammes.

16 šekels: 1 golden solar disc²¹⁷, ca. 188 grammes.

20 šekels: 1 golden soul²¹⁸, 1 silver statue of a lion²¹⁹, 1 golden Ištar²²⁰. Ca. 235 grammes.

1 mina: 1 silver ear²²¹, 1 golden soul²²², 1 silver statue of a lion²²³, 1 silver rhyton²²⁴, 1 silver Ištar²²⁵. Ca. 470 grammes.

2 minas: 1 pair of silver eyes²²⁶. Ca. 940 grammes.

²⁰³ An example of the latter is KUB 15.5+ iii 9 where Danuhepa points out to the king in a dream that the golden rhyton which the king commissioned for the Stormgod in order to propitiate him was not adequate. Danuhepa says to the king: "Take care that, now the Stormgod will come into heaven, he finds no negligence in you!" From the oracle text KUB 22.70, too, it appears that a queen deposited golden necklaces, requested by the god of Arušna in a dream, in the house of an official and in their stead had two less valuable silver ornaments made (Obv. 13-15). The dating of this text is not, however, absolutely certain: it dates either from the reign of Muršili II or the reign of Tuthaliya IV – Puduhepa.

²⁰⁵ But 1 pair of golden woman breasts is promised for the life of the king in KUB 15.11 ii 1/4!

²⁰⁶ Provided, at least, that small models are not intended. In a number of cases the objects could be life-sized and in others valuable small models made of solid gold or silver.

100 minas: 1 statue of the king²²⁷, two objects unidentifiable because of textual damage²²⁸. Ca. 41 kilogrammes.

On the whole, royal diplomatic gifts to foreign princes are considerably heavier than the object promised to the gods²²⁹. For instance Šuppiluliuma I sent a stag rhyton of 5 minas of silver and a ram rhyton of 3 minas of silver to Akhenaten on the occasion of his accession to the throne²³⁰. Vice versa, the Egyptian crown prince Šutahapšap sent Hattušili III a golden goblet of first quality gold with incrustation, embossed with the face of a bull with horns of white stone and eyes of black stone. The weight of first quality gold, which was worth almost twice as much as ordinary gold²³¹, was 93 šekels, ca. 846 grammes²³².

Ramses II also sent precious gifts to Hittite connexions: according to KBo 28.44 a Hittite prince received a goblet of 49 šekels of first quality gold and according to KBo 28.4+ a high-ranking Hittite official received a goblet of 48 šekels of first quality gold, hence approximately half of the weight of the gold received by the king²³³. A necklace of 88 šekels of first quality gold was sent to Puduhepa by the Egyptian queen Naptera, which was, as E. Edel remarks "für eine Halskette gewiss ein stattlicher Betrag²³⁴".

In conclusion, the most salient point is that in the votive texts a certain object is not characterised by a fixed weight. For instance a golden soul varies from 3 šekels to 1 mina. A comparison between the weights with those of Hittite objects which have been published and of which the weight and dimensions are mentioned in the literature, could perhaps help us to estimate the size of the promised objects. Unfortunately both weights and measures are mentioned only in the catalogue of the Schimmel collection²³⁵. The famous silver stag rhyton (Sch. no. 123) is 17 x 18 cm and weighs 322.5 grammes = ca. 28 šekels²³⁶. The silver rhyton of 1 mina in KBo 8.63 i 7', where the animal is not mentioned, is therefore heavier by 12 šekels. The golden statuette of a sitting goddess (Sch. no. 125) is 4.3 cm high and weighs only 23.2 grammes = 2 šekels, and Sch. no. 131, a silver sitting goddess weighs 21.9 grammes = also roughly 2 šekels. The aforesaid statues of Ištar, a golden one of 20 šekels and a silver one of 1 mina, therefore must have been very much larger and/or more solid. Sch. no 129, a golden solar disc, weighs 9.3 grammes = ca. 1 šekel. Here again the comparable object of 16 šekels (KUB 15.5+ iv 5) promised in the texts must have been a great deal heavier²³⁷.

The other objects in the Schimmel collection which could possibly be used for the purpose of comparison are not mentioned with their weight in the votive texts, hence no comparison is possible. Although the number of significant objects is very small, one might circumspectly infer in consequence of an official vow made by a king or queen. They could well have been given by lower-ranking officials or private individuals, though we have no attestations for this²³⁸. Sometimes there occurs in the Bildbeschreibungen an ALAM TUR = "statuette", with no specification of weight²³⁹. A silver goblet of 8 šekels²⁴⁰ and a fist (GEŠPU) of 20 šekels²⁴¹ can hardly be reckoned lighter offerings and moreover, the goblet was an offering of a king Muršili²⁴² to the Stormgod of Lihzina.

²³⁶ Hence the silver stag rhyton mentioned previously as a gift of Šuppiluliuma I was more than six times heavier.
²³⁷ In Hittite texts the weight of a solar disc varies from 1 šekel to 5 mina: F. Sommer, "Aus Hans Ehelolf's Nachlass", ZA 46, 1940, 5-52 (p. 33).

²³⁸ One of the rare occasions when a rhyton plus its weight is mentioned in festival descriptions is KUB 31.76 Rev. 14' and 18' where mention is made respectively of silver neck of an ox of 20 šekels and a silver oxen rhyton of 1 mina (see O. Carruba, "Rhyta...", Kadmos 6, 92). Silver objects plus their weights are also mentioned in royal funerary rituals (HTR, 34, 66 and 68; H. Otten, "Eine Lieferungsliste zum Totenritual der hethitischen Könige", WdO 2, 1959, 477-479; L. Christmann-Franck, "Le rituel des funérailles...", RHA 29, 65, 67, 76), for example a silver boar's snout of 10 šekels, a silver well or basin of 10 šekels, a lamp of [?] šekels and a silver axe of 20 šekels. In each case, with the exception of the axe, all objects can be filled with water or oil, therefore the weight was possibly used as an indicator of capacity. Similarly, the functional indication of the weight of an axe is understandable. In any case the valuable objects were not intended as burial gifts: the said objects must, however, be classified among the minutely prescribed cult objects and consequently do not fit into the category in question here.

²⁴² Since the object could have been in the temple for some time and the text which mentions the offering (KUB 38.3 i 5) can probably be dated later than the last Muršili (III), it is difficult to determine which Muršili was the donor.

The only really light objects mentioned in the texts are the golden lion of 1 šekel, iron bulls each of 1 šekel, a silver hearth of 1 šekel, etc., which were foundation-offerings²⁴³. The few, golden statuettes of gods found in various places are of a size comparable to those of the Schimmel collection²⁴⁴. Consequently all the objects were relatively small, were perhaps designated ALAM TUR and were probably small portable copies of the large statues of the gods.

On the grounds of the whole body of the votive texts, no definite standard can be established for the weight of an offering in correlation to the donor and the purpose of the donation.

8. Votive texts elsewhere in the ancient Near East

A. Mesopotamia

In discussing vows elsewhere in the Near East a distinction must be drawn between texts describing the giving of (votive) offerings and texts in which, in a conditional or temporal clause, a clear condition is laid down in a prayer or elsewhere on which the offering will be made. It is only with the latter category that the Hittite votive texts can be cognate²⁴⁵.

Sumerian texts:

In Sumerian texts, apart from votive texts, the giving of an offering with a description of its purpose does not occur. Perhaps this is because the Sumerian type of prayer (ŠUD, SISKUR and NAM.ŠITA) is more an expression of adoration and reverence than a direct request for a favour, as can occur in the Akkadian prayers²⁴⁶. The Sumerian SISKUR, for example, implies an offering which accompanies a spoken homage.

Old Babylonian texts:

Old Babylonian texts²⁴⁷ contain vows made by persons who promise to give (back) to the god in question precious metals or objects and some of them have the formula (or a comparable one²⁴⁸): INA (INŪMA) BALŢU U ŠALMU, up to now translated as "when he is in full health" or "when he is completely healthy and physically able" The oldest text of this sort dates from the first year of Šamšuiluna (1749 B.C.)²⁵¹.

P. Koschaker interprets these texts as vows²⁵² containing the promise of a gift or a sum of 'money' if the party in question is healed of his illness through the agency of the god. If the sum of money is characterised as a loan granted by the god which must be paid back, then according to Koschaker the loan is a fictitious one to which a row is coupled. In the same year that Koschaker put forward this interpretation, B. Landsberger opposed the view that vows were involved. He posited that it was more likely that the temple actually paid the debts of a subject in need in order to prevent the loss of his property and independence and that the debt could be paid back if the subject once more became solvent. In 1960, R. Harris argued, like P. Koschaker, but on the grounds of many other so-called ŠALMU BALŢU texts published in the meantime, that the loans in these texts are not real loans of gold (which Harris says was not lent by a god), silver or grain. A different transaction takes place: a vow is made, but it is coupled to a condition which the god must fulfill in order to receive 'the amount owing'.

According to Harris the basis of all vows is a loan which is paid back along with an extra gift made by the person who is sick, lacks support of the god or is harrassed by other problems. She bases this conclusion partly on texts in which the debt that must be paid to the god includes objects of precious metal with a religious significance, such as a golden solar disc. In her opinion these objects could never have formed part of the original loan²⁵³.

²⁴⁵ Consequently the discussion disregards votive inscriptions such as those translated and published by E. Sollberger and J.R. Kupper, Inscriptions royales sumériennes et akkadiennes, 1971.

²⁴⁶ See CAD I/J, 66: IKRIBU= 1) blessing; 2) money or objects promised to a god in a vow; 3) prayer. Only the third connotation has Sumerian equivalents. The first two are therefore manifestly of Akkadian origin.

A possible example of such a 'vow' coupled to an outstanding debt(?) is a text from Larsa dating from the third year of Šamšuiluna (= 1747 B.C.)²⁵⁴, in which neither IKRIBU nor the ŠALMU BALŢU clause occurs²⁵⁵: "1/3 mina, 5 šekels of silver ...²⁵⁶ Iddin-Ištar²⁵⁷ owes to Šamaš. When Šamaš will have had mercy upon him and he will have experienced the turning back of Šamaš, (and thus) money will have become available to him, he will pay Šamaš, his Lord". Harris contents that in this 'vow' Šamaš is forced to lend active assistance if he wishes to recover the sum owing him²⁵⁸. Depending on the meaning of MITHĀRUM, the sum of money here could be a fine for too late payment of a real loan, a fine of the same amount as the original debt imposed after the non-fulfillment of a vow, or with a different meaning of MITHĀRUM which enables R. Harris to designate this, too, as a vow that is merely disguised as a loan.

The group of Old Babylonian texts which contain apparently obscure financial transactions with a god are designated IKRIBU. For a good understanding of these texts and for a definition of the meaning of IKRIBU, I believe it necessary to take into account its specific meaning in the Old Assyrian trade texts from Kültepe, as described by P. Garelli²⁵⁹ and K.R. Veenhof²⁶⁰, since these works were published after the CAD I/J and the article of R. Harris. From the Kültepe texts it appears that this term was used to designate products of the temple, or commodities bought with the 'money' of the temple which merchants were allowed to put on sale, silver or gold received for them then being handed over to the temple 261 . From the derivation of IKRIBU from the verb $KAR\bar{A}BU$ = 'to pray', 'to bless', 'to consecrate', can be inferred that the word referred originally to objects given as votive offering to the temple, that its meaning then expanded to include all property of the temple and then further to include also the commodities lent out or given on consignment by the temple 263 . This renders plausible a further expansion of the meaning to 'goods still to be returned' or 'outstanding debt'.

The concept of such a development is further strengthened by another connotation of $IKRIB\bar{U}$, i. e. those valuables, usually gold or silver deposited by the merchants in sealed packages in the temple²⁶⁴, for which they were responsible or which remained their property but from which a part could on occasion be given to the god, either in payment of things bought for the temple, or as interest on the temple's financing of a business journey. In any case, the valuables termed $IKRIB\bar{U}$ were not allowed to be stored for any length of time elsewhere than in the temple. In this way the temple could keep an eye on the solvency of traders and, at the same time, it had security for its temporarily loaned capital.

In this case IKRIBU has little to do with 'vow' or 'promised object', even though the temple's 'basic capital' probably was composed of 'sacred objects'. The fact that IKRIBU in Old Babylonian texts in which the temple or god also clearly acts as financier should be interpreted as 'money lent (by the temple)', 'temple property' or 'temple funds' and not as 'promised object' or 'object to be consecrated' (not yet given) seems to me to provide the solution to many passages difficult to explain. It obviates such concepts as 'fictitious loans', 'conditions to be fulfilled before debts are redeemed' and 'extra offerings'. This solution gains even more credibility as the only correct one if we realise that precisely BALTU also can have the connotation 'financially sound'²⁶⁵, so that BALTU and ŠALMU strengthen each other and together form the easy conditions on which the temple lent money: the borrower did not have to pay back the money until he was financially able to do so²⁶⁶. Strong support for the correctness of the view that 'physical health' is not in question here is to be found in ŠALMU-BALTU texts where the loan is said to bear no interest²⁶⁷ and in a text about a temple loan to a family²⁶⁸ ²⁵³ If the person in trouble could only address a vow to a god by the roundabout means of a temple loan, this would imply that he had no other possibility of appealing directly to a god with the promise of an offering if the god relieved him of his problems. This does not seem plausible and moreover it would be diametrically opposed to the relative ease with which the Hittite royal family addressed vows to all sorts of gods in the thirteenth century. However a closer comparison cannot be made, since there are too many differences regarding time, the persons who make the vows and also such other aspects as the fact no loans by Hittite temples to private individuals are known.

²⁵⁸ R. Harris does not translate MITHĀRUM because she believes it certainly cannot be "some kind of interest" as proposed by B. Landsberger. According to CAD M II, 137 it could mean the fine for an unfulfilled vow or tardiness in paying a debt. The fine is as high as the outstanding "debt".

²⁶¹ IKRIBU is also used to designate a consignment which was temple property and for which no tax had to be paid en route.

²⁶² According to AHw I, 445, KARĀBU means "to make a vow" in only one passage, namely in ITn 40, 27 in the vow of Aššur-nadin-apli (appr. 1206-1203). CAD K, 197 f. gives a few more passages.

where two brothers promise to pay Šamaš if he makes them financially sound. It would be far-fetched to assume that both brothers were ill (M. S.).

The Old Babylonian ŠALMU-BALŢU and IKRIBU texts are of the same type as the aforementioned texts from Larsa where all that is expressed is that when money becomes available the god will receive what is owing to him. In a narrow sense these texts have nothing to do with vows. An interpretation along these lines makes sense of 'loans' to rich people and of one person 'becoming indebted' to two gods on the same day²⁶⁹.

In Hittite texts IKRIBU came to mean more specifically and more abstractly 'vow' as well, as is attested by, inter alia, KUB 15.20 ii 9', a text from the thirteenth century B.C. in which IKRIBI.HI.A are pronounced²⁷⁰.

Middle Assyrian texts:

To my mind the only manifest vow in Middle Assyrian texts occurs in ITn 40, 15-32 where Aššurnadin-apli, son of Tukulti-Ninurta I writes the following²⁷¹: "When the course of the Tigris beside my city Aššur was altered, it cut through 600 (IKU) of field and (so) created a (new) bed for itself; I prayed to the gods Aššur and Šamaš to return the course of the Tigris to its (former) position. I entreated (them) to make my royal statue (and) to erect (it) at the threshold of my city, the desired object of the gods, in the presence of the gods Aššur and Šamaš. At that time, I made the 'house of my royal statue' on the bank of the Tigris at the threshold of my city, the city (which is) the desired object of the gods. I deposited my steles and clay inscriptions therein."

Evidently the king fulfilled this vow when the Tigris returned to its old bedding at some unspecified time after the flood. Although the making of the vow is accompanied by an attitude of prayer, it would seem to be a true vow, possibly incorporated in a prayer.

B. Ugaritic and Canaanite texts

The legend of the Ugaritic king Keret dates from approximately the same period as the vow of Aššurnadin-apli. In it the god El summons the king to march with his army to Udumu where he must capture Hurriya, a princess of Udumu, and carry her off as his wife. Three days after setting forth he arrives at Tyrus(?) and in the sanctuary of the goddesses Ashirat and Elath he makes a vow promising that if he succeeds in taking Hurriya to his house and in leading her into his court he will offer double her weight in silver and triple in gold. For seven years after he succeeds in marrying Hurriya, Keret forgets to fulfill his yow and the goddesses then remind him of his negligence²⁷².

S.B. Parker²⁷³, like L.R. Fisher before him²⁷⁴, compares this vow with the diverse vows in the Old Testament and refers, inter alia, to A. Wendel's work on vows²⁷⁵. The vows which occur in prayers are not here distinguished from 'independent' yows.

In the Old Testament, particularly in Genesis 28:20-22 (Jacob), 1 Samuel 1:11 (Hannah), 2 Samuel 15:8 (Absalom), and Judges 11:30f. (Jephthah) approach relatively closely the Hittite vows as regards their construction, especially in the mention of the name of the deity followed by "if you ... then I will", the vow being fulfilled after the god has done his work²⁷⁶, and occasionally in the introductory phrase "and PN made a yow to GN as follows: ..."²⁷⁷.

²⁶⁹ R. Harris, "Old Babylonian...", JCS 14, 136 uses these two cases to prove why there can be no question of a real loan.

²⁷² Possibly H. Ginsberg correctly assumes in ANET³, 1969, 145 that Keret did fulfill this vow, but that he made new ones which he was negligent in fulfilling, with the result that he fell ill. In iii 23 ff., reference is made to more vows and votive [offerings] than to the single vow concerning Hurriya (differently interpreted by W. Röllig, Neues Handbuch der Literaturwissenschaft I, 1978, 266 ff.).

Matter, Die Bedeutung der Hethiter für das Alte Testament (Eine religions-, rechtsgeschichtliche und ethnologische Studie), 1933.

²⁷⁶ Deuteronomy 23:32, for that matter, contains a warning against postponing the fulfillment of a vow.

²⁷⁷ The contents of the Hittite and the Old Testament vows differ widely, however. There are three types in the Old Testament: 1. for the sake of a safe return, 2. for the sake of a military victory, 3. in order to acquire a wife and progeny. The first two types also occur in Hittite texts, but the Hittites had innumerable other reasons for making a vow and, unlike in the Old Testament, in theirs there is not always a specific relation between the condition and what is promised.

A parallel to Keret's vow is to be found in the much later Mishna²⁷⁸, in which a woman promises her daughter's weight in gold if she is cured of her disease. Parker also compares Keret's vow with the Hittite prayer KUB 21.27 in which queen Puduhepa promises a silver statue of king Hattušili, life-sized, with head, hands and feet of gold.

The conclusion drawn from these Hittite and Ugaritic texts that the object promised is a replacement for the (possibly) sick person who would otherwise be given to the god is prompted by the vow of Hannah, but is not attested by many other Hittite texts in which a statue is promised and in which there can be no question of replacement. The promise of a statue must be seen as the promise of a statue of a god and therefore a valuable cult object. Hence it is not correct to compare the vows of Jephthah and Hannah in which persons are promised with the vows of Keret and Puduhepa in which a substitute is said to be promised. What Parker²⁷⁹ considered a logical inference, namely that the custom in the more developed trading community in Late Bronze Age Syria and Anatolia the offering the image of a person was thereafter further rationalised in Israel, likewise cannot be correct.

Moreover the paucity of Ugaritic material, consisting (only) of the Keret vow, enjoins circumspection in drawing conclusions about the relation between vows in Ugarit and Israel²⁸⁰. It is however remarkable that, given the direct written contact between the Hittites and Ugarit and a 'geographical' contact between Ugarit and Israel, from about the beginning of the thirteenth century B.C. in Anatolia, at the end of the century in Ugarit and possibly a few centuries later in Israel vows are encountered which, despite all the divergencies, reveal an outward likeness not found in the texts from Mesopotamia. The only comparable vow is, as described above, the vow of the Assyrian king Aššur-nadin-apli which also dates from the thirteenth century.

9. Comments on persons mentioned in the texts

^{\text{m}}AMAR^{\text{MUŠEN}}-i^{281} (NH 1734 + suppl.):

Texts:

1: KBo 4.10 Rev. 29 (CTH 106);

2: KBo 16.83 ii 10 (CTH 242);

3: KUB 13.35 ii 43 (CTH 293):

5: KUB 30.38 + KBo 23.1 1. s. 2 (CTH 472);

6: KUB 31.61+ ii 9 (CTH 585).

Although bundled together, these texts usually mention different persons with a different ending to their names: "AMAR MUŠEN-i and "AMAR MUŠEN-na. This can be explained by assuming that MUŠEN covers two different Hittite words, possibly wattai- for the first group and a word ending in -anna for the second for which, however, I can make no suggestion 282. The texts 3, 4 and 6 and probably text 1283 contain the first name, texts 2 and 5 the second.

A number of persons are easily distinguished since their professions are given: a carpenter in text 2 and a scribe in text 5 are clearly different from the persons in the first group. In text 1, ^mAMAR^{MUŠEN}-i is an *urayanni*²⁸⁴, in text 3 a *KARTAPPU*²⁸⁵, in text 4 no profession is mentioned and in text 6 he is again urayanni. It is possible that the KARTAPPU was promoted to urayanni and that the same person is therefore involved in all these cases²⁸⁶.

This would mean that KUB 13.35 is older than the vow of Puduhepa and KBo 4.10²⁸⁷, which is very plausible. If KUB 15.5+ can indeed be dated to Urhi-Tešup, and provided only one person is Kümmel, Ersatzrituale..., StBoT 3. In these rituals there is a ruler whose kingship is threatened by evil omens and for whom the other customary substitute animals are not adequate to save him. Another person or an effigy of a person is appointed to be the magic substitute to whom the impending evil is transferred. There is no offering whatsoever involved, but a magic ritual to protect the king against evil.

²⁸⁰ Parker rightly qualifies his statement (S.B. Parker, "The Vow...", UF 11) that, for example, the analogies between the Keret vow and those of the Old Testament "must be explained by similar institutional foundations in the life of the two societies" by remarking that the scarcity of Ugarit material and the differences between the vows of Keret and Hannah enjoins caution if one considers other types of vows which could have been customary in the more commercial, law-regulated society of Syria in the Late Bronze age.

 f Arum(m)ura (NH no. 155 + suppl.):

Texts:

1: KBo 16.83 iii 10' (CTH 242):

2: KUB 15.5+ i 11 (CTH 583);

3: KUB 26.43 Obv. 51 and Rev. 6 (CTH 225);

4: KUB 48.126:13'.

The only indication of the function of (an) Arumura is in text 1, where she is GAL MUNUS ŠU.GI, a very seldom²⁸⁸ mentioned leader of the old women who play an important role in oracles and during religious festivals²⁸⁹. The occurrence in text 2 of various known persons makes it possible to date it in the Muwatalli/Hattušili III period²⁹⁰. In text 3 mention is made of the sons of Arumura (possibly concubine of Šahurunuwa) who are not granted property in the Šahurunuwa agreement. If this text is dated, rightly, at the beginning of the reign of Tuthaliya IV, Arumura herself can be dated under Hattušili III (and Tuthaliya IV).

Text 4 is from the reign of Hattušili III and Puduhepa. The personal names with Arumura in text 1 are partially identical with a number of names²⁹¹ in the votive texts, but a positive identification is impossible. Each name refers to more than one person. R. Lebrun's conclusion from these texts that Arumura was a priestess, like Hepapiya known for her intervention, is too bold²⁹². There are not enough data available to state positively that the same woman occurs in all four texts. In text 2, Arumura gives advice after a dream and in text 4 she probably appears before the king in a dream. Nothing can be inferred from text 3 in this respect and, because of her function in text 1, the Arumura mentioned there could be identical with the one in texts 2 and 4²⁹³. In any case one Arumura was a very important woman during the reign of Hattušili III, being his counsellor in the explanation of dreams. The occurrence of an Arum(m)ura in various Bo. texts cannot (as yet) be explained²⁹⁴.

5: KUB 56.1:1 (fr.) (?)²⁹⁶.

The complete Hurrian name of this official who served under Hattušili III and Tuthaliya IV has been preserved only in text 3²⁹⁷. From various details it can be inferred that Ehli-Kušuh was the guardian of the palace stores of gold and silver and it is likely that all references are to one and the same person. In text 3, an inventory list, Ehli-Kušuh states that the silver for making a pectoral ornament has already been handed over to Kaššu, the gold- and silversmith²⁹⁸.

A. Kammenhuber postulates²⁹⁹ that in this text Ehli-Kušuh confirms that the god of Arušna is satisfied with the offerings promised, but I found no attestation of this in the text. It is questionable whether that accords with his function as known to us from texts mentioned above. In text 4 he is given gold to make a goblet. The same god of Arušna occurs in text 5 in connexion with an Ehli-[...], which makes the restoration SIN a possibility. In text 1 mention is made of a dream of Ehli-Kušuh in which a priestess and gold occur and, as always in this text, the final advice is given by the dream-diviner³⁰⁰ Hepapiya. It is not certain whether text 2 refers to the same person. It is a letter in which, inter alia, a Lupakki is also mentioned. UR.MAH-ziti, the well-known court scribe under Hattušili III also occurs in texts 1 and 3. Although KUB 15.5+ dates from the time when Hattušili was not yet a reigning monarch³⁰¹, it is in no way inconceivable that the same 'guardian of the treasure' is referred to in the texts where his function is clearly stated.

The postulation of A. Ünal³⁰² that no name beginning with Ehli- can be dated in the reign of Hattušili cannot be correct: A. Ünal himself dates KUB 23.45 in the reign of Hattušili III³⁰³. The proper name is also on a seal from Emar (Meskene)³⁰⁴ with the function of ^{LÚ}SAGI.A = 'pourer'.

^fHepa-SUM (^fHepapiya) (NH no. 365 + suppl.):

Texts: KUB 15.5+ passim.

This woman's name, which occurs exclusively in KUB 15.5+ in 27 passages, is always written ^fHepa-SUM (without specification of profession) and is preceded by UMMA = 'thus'. It is remarkable that she is not mentioned in any other text and that she always allots objects to "DINGIR-LIM GAL". Sometimes what is given to a certain god because of a dream is taken back and given to the great god on the advice of Hepapiya³⁰⁵. She is evidently some sort of priestess of the great god and also counsellor in the matter of dreams³⁰⁶ under Urhi-Tešup, to whose reign the text of KUB 15.5+ can probably be dated³⁰⁷.

The name Hepapiya also occurs on two seals from Tarsus³⁰⁸, which could argue for a Luwian reading of the second element of the name³⁰⁹.

"Katapa-DINGIR-LIM ("Katapaili) (NH no. 543 + suppl.):

Texts:

- 1: KBo 2.2 iv 24, 28 (CTH 577):
- 2: KBo 16.60 Obv. 5 (CTH 295):

- 4: KUB 15.11 iii 5', 7' (fr.) (CTH 584):
- 5: KUB 16.32+ ii 25 (CTH 582).

It is remarkable that the Hittites so seldom specify the profession or function of officials mentioned by name. In none of the texts in which his name occurs is Katapaili's profession specified, though he must have been an important man in vows and oracle matters. In text 1, an oracle text which could date from the reign of Tuthaliya IV, the matter of giving with which Katapaili was cognizant is twice mentioned in connexion with vows³¹⁰.

In text 4 the personal name twice occurs as last word of a paragraph even after $kar\bar{u}$ = 'already (done)', which would seem to suggest that Katapaili checked whether the vow was fulfilled. In texts 2 and 5^{311} , both texts of a protocol nature, his function is not clear. In text 5, dated under Tuthaliya IV by H.G. Güterbock and H. Otten³¹², he is possibly authorised to allot a city to the spirit of a dead man. In text 2 Katapaili possibly commands the service of a number of 'deported' for a temple. In the third text, a letter concerning an oracle, someone (in an obscure context) twice addressed the king and twice Katapaili, further attestation of the high position of this official in religious matters under Hattušili III and Tuthaliya IV.

5: KUB 56.14 iv 1;

The woman with this Hurrian, compound personal name occurs exclusively in dream and votive texts and twice in KUB 40.80, described by H.G. Güterbock as "deposition in court" In texts 1 and 2 the queen makes a vow in the preceding paragraph on behalf of the son of the king of Išuwa on condition he recovers from an illness³¹⁴. In text 3 she occurs in an unspecified connexion together with fDU-IR and mUR.MAH-ziti, the first of whom also appear in text 4 with, inter alia, Kilušhepa³¹⁵. In the text 4, fDU-IR makes statements in various paragraphs introduced by UM-MA fDU-IR (lines 11 and 16), which also could possibly have stood at the beginning of line 1. After approximately sixteen missing signs, the text continues with: [...-h]é-pa-aš e-eš-ta nu-[wa] A-NA mA-li-LUGAL-m[a] (2) [16 signs GI]M or [m]a-an-wa [fKi-lu-uš]-hé-pa-aš BA.ÚŠ (3), etc. It is highly probable that [fKi-lu-uš]-hé-pa-aš can be filled in in line 1. The translation is then: "[Kilušh]epa was [there] and [...] to Ališarruma [...]. When [Kiluš]hepa died, etc. 31644

Other names in this text are, inter alia, Lupakki and Šaušgaziti, two personal names which, like Kilušhepa, have been found on bullae in Korucutepe³¹⁷, as noted by Ph.H.J. Houwink ten Cate³¹⁸, in a region that is usually identified with Išuwa³¹⁹. Regarding Lupakki in KUB 40 and on bulla no. 6, there is a possibility that he is the same person as the chief of charioteers who is addressed in KBo 18.4 by a king of Išuwa as "my dear father" and as the Lupakki who as "servant to the queen" in KBo 18.1 writes her a number of lines³²⁰. The link between KUB 40.80 and Išuwa is based on more than just the personal names, namely the occurrence in line 9 of the city of Maltiya³²¹ which was located near or in Išuwa³²², probably near present-day Malatya. The frequent occurrence of the name Lupakki makes a certain identification impossible ³²³, although it is manifest from KUB 40.80:11 ff. that Lupakki (without specification of function) holds an important post: "... those women who were brough[t] from Ambara, these [were given] to Lupakki and Lupakki said to them 'do this', etc."

The bulla bearing the name Kilušhepa, might, perhaps, help us to identify this woman. As H.G. Güterbock has convincingly demonstrated³²⁴, she occurs together with a king³²⁵ Arišarruma on the bilingual³²⁶ bullae 2.2.A and 2.2.B with, after her name, the designation GAL DUMU.MUNUS or DUMU.MUNUS GAL, to be translated, for the meanwhile, as 'princess' (literally 'great daughter').

The strong indications that one and the same Kilušhepa is concerned in all the texts listed at the beginning of this section and on the bullae are set forth in the aforesaid articles of H.G. Güterbock³²⁷ and H. Klengel³²⁸. It must be pointed out that from the fact that in texts 1 and 2 Puduhepa makes a vow for the son of the king of Išuwa it can be inferred that her (family) relationship with the royal family of ³¹⁵ Up till now, ^{fD}U-IR has not been read as such in KUB 15.5+ ii 5' and KUB 15.30 ii 5. Only in the supplement to NH see therefore under no. 1756c with text KUB 40.80:11, 16, to which can be added line 6 and line 20 (fr.). The fact that in KUB 15.5+ ii 52 ff. UR.MAH-ziti states that the Stormgod is angry with, inter alia, the king of Išuwa could be significant.

The translation is based on the most plausible restoration GIM-an.

³¹⁷ The bullae have been published by H.G. Güterbock in: M.N. van Loon (ed.), Korucutepe 3, 1980, 127 ff. following on an earlier, preliminary publication in H.G. Güterbock, "Hittite Hieroglyphic Seal...", JNES 32.

³²⁰ Suggested for the Lupakki on the Korucutepe bulla by H.G. Güterbock, "Hittite Hieroglyphic Seal...", JNES 32, 142²⁴, one argument being the occurrence of a charioteer Lupakki in KUB 31.68:39 and the mention of Išuwa two lines further on. See, however, H. Klengel, "Nochmals zu Išuwa", Or. Ant. 15, 86 ff. and F. Pecchioli Daddi, "II ^{LÜ}KARTAPPU...", SCO 27, 169 ff. According to the latter on the analogy of RS 19.70 "my father" should not be taken to mean a family relationship.

³²³ E. Laroche (Suppl. to NH no. 708) merely calls the Lupakki of the Korucutepe bulla "contemporain de Hattušili III", whereas he classifies the Lupakki-s of KUB 40.80 and KBo 18.1 under "divers".

Išuwa was a close one. The dating of the place (Pit G) where the bullae were found is roughly 1225-1100³²⁹.

The cuneiform texts in which Arišarruma and Kilušhepa occur also date from the last part of the reign of Hattušili III or from that of his son Tuthaliya IV, as from about the middle of the thirteenth century³³⁰.

In any case text 4, which contains pronouncements made by ^{fD}U-IR after the death of Kilušhepa, is the latest of the four texts in which this occurs, somewhat later than text 3 in which ^{fD}U-IR brings objects to the king. It is not absolutely certain that Kilušhepa was the wife of Arišarruma, even though they occur together on the bullae. In this connexion H. Klengel³³¹ and K. K. Riemschneider³³² prefer Ališarruma, whose wife is said, in KUB 40.90 in an obscure context, to have died³³³. Since, as stated above, Ališarruma occurs in close relation to Kilušhepa in KUB 40.80 and, moreover, certain identical persons occur in both texts (Kili or Utli as well as Lupakki and Šaušgaziti), they combine the two statements about the dying and take Ališarruma to be the husband of Kilušhepa. So far, however, the only known kings of Išuwa are Arišarruma³³⁴ and Ehlišarruma³³⁵.

Ehlišarruma could possibly have been the last one, since there probably ceased to be an independent king of Išuwa some time during the reign of Tuthaliya IV³³⁶. The arguments in support of a marriage between Kilušhepa and Ališarruma are not, in my opinion, strong enough to refute the contention that the appearance together on the bullae of Kilušhepa and Arišarruma means they were wife and husband.

The designation DUMU.MUNUS GAL which accompanies the personal name Kilušhepa is fraught with problems. Apart from appearing in hieroglyphs on these bullae, the term DUMU.MUNUS GAL occurs in three cuneiform texts: KBo 4.6 (CTH 380), KBo 18.1 (CTH 187) and KUB 22.70 (CTH 566), which are now dealt with successively.

A. KBo 4.6: When translating this prayer for the edition of Schrijvend Verleden ("Ex Oriente Lux",1983, 220 ff.), it struck me that what we have here are, in fact, two closely parallel passages (one for the sick DUMU.MUNUS GAL and one for the sick Gaššuliyawiya) which deviate from the 'normal' major type, as given in CTH 371. Some considerations³³⁷ which led me to believe that KBo 4.6 contains two different prayers are:

- (a) Obv. 21 ff. is reminiscent of the beginning of votive texts or independent parts of votive texts after a paragraph-divider, e. g. in KUB 15.30 iii 8, KUB 48.118:1, KUB 48.121:1 and KUB 48.126:15', even though there is no question there of a subsidiary clause in the proem. The first prayer runs from Obv. x+1 to 21' and the second from Obv. 21' to Rev. 26', terminated by a double paragraph rule after which the tablet 'continues' without text. Hence this is in fact a concluding formula.
- (b) The concluding formula of Rev. 24'-26' is literally the same as that of Obv. 18'-20', with the one exception of a different person who will glorify the god after being cured: DUMU.MUNUS GAL in the first prayer, Gaššulivawiya in the second.
- (c) Two different replacement images are mentioned: for DUMU.MUNUS GAL a woman who is richly clad, magnificent, pure, splendid and shining, and for Gaššuliyawiya a woman clad in magnificent cloths. The offerings also differ: Gaššuliyawiya adds to the sacrificial animals given by DUMU.MUNUS GAL a nanny goat and bread and wine. Another striking feature is the first person uppahhun = 'I have sent' in Obv. 12', spoken by the person who had the prayer for DUMU.MUNUS GAL recorded, as compared with uppešta = 'she has sent' in Rev. 14', subject Gaššuliyawiya.
- (d) In the first prayer, in which the request is 'to remove' the illness, the disease could possibly be a different one from that in the second prayer, where the concept 'to cut away' is used in what is otherwise an identical passage. Consequently the persons mentioned in the prayers, DUMU.MUNUS GAL and Gaššuliyawiya need not necessarily be identical, as has hitherto always been assumed. Indeed it would seem highly unlikely that they are identical. Gaššuliyawiya is not, therefore, mentioned with the 'title' DUMU.MUNUS GAL, the reason for ascribing³³⁸ this text to the wife of Muršili II becomes invalid and hence also the necessity to date it to the reign of Muršili II.

³³⁸ Namely that she had the title DUMU.MUNUS GAL as queen who must wait until the death of the widow of Suppiluliuma before she may call herself MUNUS.LUGAL. Cf. H.G. Güterbock, "Hittite Hieroglyphic Seal...", JNES 32, 137 and the introduction to KBo 18 p. IV. A dating to the reign of Hattušili III is to be found in J. Friedrich. "Aus dem hethitischen Schrifttum. Übersetzungen von Keilschrifttexten aus dem Archiv von

In NH no. 539, E. Laroche distinguishes two Gaššuliyawiya-s: 1) "Princesse hittite, peut-être femme de Muršili II"; 2) "Fille de Hattušili III, femme de Bentešina". Under 1) he lists in addition to KBo 4.6 KUB 36.81 (CTH 376) which must indeed date from the reign of Muršili and to these are added in the supplement³³⁹ KBo 22.10 iii 7 (?) (CTH 214, 20) and KUB 50.103 Rev. 3³⁴⁰. Under 2) are listed KBo 1.8 Obv. 19, the text which attests that Gaššuliyawiya is a daughter of Hattušili and has become the wife of Bentešina of Amurru, and the hieroglyphic seal SBo 1.104. To these can probably be added the text mentioned by A. Kammenhuber³⁴¹, KUB 5.20+ 18.56, in which Hattušili makes oracular inquiries to enquire if his children are in danger³⁴².

As well as KBo 1.8 and the seal, KBo 22.10 could also derive from the time of Hattušili because Gaššuliy[awiya] is mentioned between Hannutti and Tuthaliya, (Prince) Hannutti's dating (NH no. 278) being known from his occurrence in KBo 4.10 and Tuthaliya being taken therefore as Tuthaliya IV³⁴³. Nothing can be deduced from KUB 50.103, a small fragment of an oracle text. In addition to the seal SBo 1.104, a personal seal of a princess on which Gašuliyawi is designated DUMU.MUNUS LUGAL (= daughter of the king, probably Hattušili III), there is another Boğazköy seal, SBo 1.37, on which Gašulawi is also mentioned, but with Muršili as ^DUTU-ŠI. Damage makes it impossible to say with certainty whether the designation DUMU.MUNUS LUGAL also occurs here³⁴⁴.

Boghazköi II", AO 25, 1925, 3-32 (p. 19) and following him, inter alia, in A. Kammenhuber, Orakelpraxis..., TdH 7, 147, 149 and A. Ünal, Hattušili III, TdH 3, 42.

In any event there is no DUMU.MUNUS GAL, which might be expected on the grounds of the (old) interpretation of KBo 4.6, because MUNUS.LUGAL (GAL) would be most unusual³⁴⁵ in the situation of a wife of Muršili II. To my mind KBo 4.6 could be ascribed to the reign of Hattušili/Puduhepa and I think it possible that Puduhepa had the prayers recorded for the sake of two of her daughters, DUMU.MUNUS GAL and Gaššuliyawiya. Clues for a dating in this period are:

- 1. The prayers are addressed to Lelwani³⁴⁶, the god(dess) to whom Puduhepa turns in prayers, in prayer-like vows, when the health of a member of her family is endangered, as in KUB 15.16 and 17+ and KUB 21.27+.
- 2. As noted above, Obv. 21 ff. resembles passages in vows of Puduhepa/Hattušili and the contents of the two prayers are closely parallel to the votive texts of the royal couple.
- 3. Of the signs which are significant for the dating, the (short) text has once a late URU (no old) and thirteen times a late LI as opposed to twice an old LI. Twice the old form of IK occurs but not the late and three times the late form of TAR but not the old. SAR and AK do not occur. The great majority of late LI-s is enough in itself to make a late dating of this tablet more plausible than an early one³⁴⁷.
- 4. The use of DINGIR-LIM as vocative is a further indication of a late dating, even though such a vocative also occurs in, for example, KBo 11.1, a prayer of Muwatalli.
- B. KBo 18.1³⁴⁸: This letter was sent by a reigning monarch to his mother. In a second letter on the same tablet, or in a P.S. to the (first) letter, Lupakki states that all goes well with the king and (the) DUMU.MUNUS GAL³⁴⁹. According to S. R. Bin-Nun³⁵⁰, H.G. Güterbock³⁵¹ and A. Kammenhuber³⁵², Tuthaliya IV wrote this letter to his mother Puduhepa and Lupakki, servant of the queen, states that all Bin-Nun, The Tawananna..., TdH 5, 254 ff. Obviously I cannot agree with her conclusions based on the old dating of KBo 4.6.

³³⁹ Suppl. of NH, Hethitica 4, 1981, 3-58 (p. 20).

³⁴⁰ Wrongly called ^fPišulawija in the index of personal names in the text edition.

³⁴¹ A. Kammenhuber, Orakelpraxis..., TdH 7, 31.

³⁴² According to A. Kammenhuber, i 36 ff. refer to Kašu!lawii[a] (= Gaššuliyawiya) and ii 19 ff. the same person, designated DUMU.MUNUS, without personal name. The reading ŠU! is less plausible than AL judging by the copy, but the original could make ŠU possible. The spelling Ka-šu etc. would, in any case, be unique for this name. NH no. 483 says the name is Kallawiya, a name which occurs nowhere else. H. Otten, "Ein weiterer Ramses-Brief aus Boğazköy", in: Fs E. Edel, 1979, 314-317 (p. 316) agrees with the identification of Tašmišarruma as son of Hattušili.

³⁴³ In suppl. to NH no. 278, E. Laroche does admit the possibility that this Hannutti refers to the same prince as the one in KBo 4.10. All three persons mentioned could possibly have been children of Hattušili and Puduhepa. Hannutti and Tuthaliya also occur together in the letter KUB 19.23 dated to the reign of Tuthaliya IV by, inter alia, Ph.H.J. Houwink ten Cate, "A new fragment of the 'Deeds of Šuppiluliuma as Told by His Son, Muršili II", JNES 25, 1966, 27-31 (p. 30). See S. Heinhold-Krahmer, Arzawa. Untersuchungen zu seiner Geschichte nach den hethitischen Quellen, TdH 8, 1977, 247 f. E. Laroche classifies KBo 22.10 under the "Textes historiques, divers" (CTH 214, 20). O.R. Gurney, "The anointing of Tudhaliya", in: Studia Mediterranea Piero Meriggi dicata I, 1979, 213-223 (p. 219²⁷) wonders whether the text could possibly belong to KUB 19.10 (Deeds of Suppiluliuma), but admits that the interpretation gives rise to problems. H.A. Hoffner, review of KBo 22, BiOr 33, 1976, 337-337 (p. 335) said that the author could have been either Hattušili III or Muršili II on the grounds of "Deeds" fragments 14 and 15.

³⁴⁴ Cf. H.G. Güterbock, "Hittite Hieroglyphic Seal...", JNES 32, 137: "On the seal SBo 1.104 (and, damaged, 37) her title is written with ... etc." Here the author refers to "Kaššul(iy)awi(ya), the wife of Muršili II". See also S.R.

The name of the god(dess) has been preserved in the second prayer only.

³⁴⁷ If we follow F. Starke, review of A. Ünal, Ein Orakeltext... (TdH 6), Or. 50, 1981, 466-471 (p. 469), the late LI is in itself an absolute criterion for dating to the thirteenth century. The character of the text renders implausible the possibility of a later copy of an older text.

goes well with Tuthaliya and (the) DUMU.MUNUS GAL. As far as dating is concerned, this DUMU.MUNUS GAL could, in any case, refer to the same person as in KBo 4.6, but she does not have to be the wife of the king, as asserted by S. R. Bin-Nun³⁵³.

C. KUB 22.70: For diverse problems posed by this text and the literature on it reference might be made to the comprehensive text edition with commentary by A. Ünal³⁵⁴ and to an article by A. Archi³⁵⁵. What is relevant here is the chapter on the dating of this text in A. Ünal's book³⁵⁶, because the DUMU.MUNUS GAL problem is discussed in it³⁵⁷. A. Ünal dates the text to the reign of Tuthaliya-Puduhepa, as did A. Kammenhuber³⁵⁸. In his article A. Archi argues for a dating in the reign of Muršili II but, in my opinion, does not give enough consideration to the arguments supporting a later dating. In two reviews G. Beckman³⁵⁹ and F. Starke³⁶⁰ endorse the late dating for diverse reasons. In his review V. Haas makes no direct statement about the dating of the text³⁶¹. In any case it is important for the Kilušhepa identification that a dating of KUB 22.70 to the time of Puduhepa is not impossible.

DUMU.MUNUS GAL = Kilušhepa?

If from the above it may be concluded that all texts in which Kilušhepa or DUMU.MUNUS GAL is mentioned could possibly date from the Hattušili III – early Tuthaliya IV period, an identification of Kilušhepa with DUMU.MUNUS GAL follows as a matter of course because of the occurrence of this title(?) alongside of the name Kilušhepa on the bullae Korucutepe 2.2.A and 2.2.B.

That could imply that this designation applies exclusively to Kilušhepa. Naturally much is still uncertain and obscure regarding the identification and it seems hardly feasible to present any certainties without new data³⁶². Nevertheless a few conclusions can be drawn from the above:

- 1. Since it is no longer necessary to identify DUMU.MUNUS GAL with Gaššuliyawiya and with the period of Muršili II, the question of the significance of this title is open to discussion again³⁶³.
- 2. There would seem to be no other possible translation of DUMU.MUNUS GAL³⁶⁴ than 'daughter of the great', 'great daughter' = 'eldest daughter' = 'crown princess', also as description for the spouse of a reigning monarch who has not yet become Tawananna. In consequence of the interpretations of KBo 4.6, everyone has hitherto assumed that the 'title' was used for different persons, first for Gaššuliyawiya and then for the unknown wife of Tuthaliya IV³⁶⁷. For the present I assume it applied to one person, but admit the possibility that this designation was also used in earlier times.
- 3. It must be assumed that under (her brother?) Tuthaliya, Kilušhepa once more played a role at the Hittite court³⁶⁸. A pointer in this direction is that in KUB 40.80 mention is made of the death of ³⁶¹ V. Haas, review of A. Ünal, Ein Orakeltext...(TdH 6), BiOr 36, 1979, 58-60. He remarks that when this text was recorded the office of Tawananna had already passed to the queen. The comments in note 346 probably apply to this text (a special sort of oracle text) as well. With regard to the statemen of A. Archi, "Le testimonianze...", SMEA 22, 21 that the title Tawananna in only one text (KUB 36.89) pertains to Puduhepa, it should be noted that in "The propaganda...", SMEA 14, 194²⁷ the same author finds reason in KUB 12.5 for Puduhepa possibly having held the office of Tawananna under her son Tuthaliya IV. In addition Tawananna in KUB 31.136 Rev. iii 2 ff. refers to Puduhepa (Cf. V. Haas, Der Kult von Nerik, 16⁴ and 196).

³⁶² An important piece of information concerning Kilušhepa emerges from KUB 56.14. Rev. iv 1 ff. runs as follows: (1) [nu] MUNUS UMMEDA ku-iš MUNUS LUGAL fKi-lu-uš-hé-pa-an-na (2) [ša]l-la-nu-uš-ki-it nu-wara-aš im-ma EGIR-va ma-a-an (3) TI-eš-ta ..., etc. (4) nu-wa-mu me-mi-iš-ki-iz-zi "And the children's nurse who reared the queen and Kilušhepa was in some way or another (3) alive again etc. (4) and she said to me: ..." The text is somewhat reminiscent of KUB 31.77, in which almost the same expression is used for Puduhepa's father who in her dream is alive again in some way or another; i 8 ff. ... nu-wa za-aš-hi-va A-BU-YA (9) ma-a-an EGIRpa TI-eš-ša-an-za-pát², etc. Technically there could possibly be a join between the two texts, although KUB 56.14 could actually be a broader tablet than KUB 31.77. The lack of any further text in column iii of KUB 31.77 whereas there is a beginning of column iv in KUB 56.14 argues against a join which is ascertained by Prof. Klengel after collation. In view of the contents of KUB 56.14, in which reference is made to the capture of Nerik by Hattušili III (although his name is not specified), a dating under Puduhepa as MUNUS LUGAL is certain. It can therefore be inferred from the text that the same children's nurse brought up both Puduhepa and Kilušhepa. The only conclusion we can safely draw from this, however, is that Kilushepa was either a daughter or sister of Puduhepa. Since the children's nurse was fully cognizant of the way Hattušili and Puduhepa made Nerik habitable, it is likely, but no more than that, that she was in Hattuša at that time and hence accompanied Puduhepa from Kizzuwatna in order to rear a child of Puduhepa.

³⁶³ For example, the discussion has not as yet taken account of the designation of the daughter of Hattušili III and Puduhepa who was given in marriage to Ramses II in 1255 and who is called in Egyptian "great daughter" (or "daughter of the great"!) on the Heiratsstele. Rendered as "älteste Tochter" by E. Edel. In the treaty with the Hittites, "the great" refers to Puduhepa. Cf. E. Edel, "Weitere Briefe aus der Heiratskorrespondenz Ramses' II: KUB III 37 + KBo I 17 und KUB III 57", in: Fs. Alt, 1953, 29-63 (p. 62⁺¹).

³⁶⁸ On the grounds of her appearance in KUB 22.70 and the letter KBo 18.1.

Kilušhepa without any indication of her position, her husband and the name Išuwa, i.e. in a text in which occur many persons who have a certain connexion with the Hittite court.

4. I cannot explain why Kilušhepa is written in one part of the texts and DUMU.MUNUS GAL in another. Since the title occurs exclusively in the period of Hattušili III/Tuthaliya IV, Puduhepa being MUNUS.LUGAL in both of them, circumstances must be sought which apply specifically to these persons: Puduhepa remains MUNUS.LUGAL after the death of Hattušili, does the eldest daughter become DUMU.MUNUS GAL as from that moment and does she retain that designation after her marriage to a 'foreign' monarch? Is this designation connected only with the daughter of Puduhepa? Does the fact that no name is known of a queen alongside of Tuthaliya IV (let alone the fact that we have no idea when he married) have anything to do with the designation³⁶⁹?

As long as the chronological sequence of the texts remains uncertain, it is difficult to answer these questions, including the question whether Kilušhepa alone bore this 'title'. The mention on one and the same tablet of DUMU.MUNUS GAL and Gaššuliyawiya, who was given in marriage to Bentešina of Amurru during Hattušili's reign (KBo 1.8), does nothing to clarify matters, especially since Puduhepa could have prayed on behalf of her daughter after their departure, just as in Išuwa she made vows on behalf of her grandson(?).

Because of the spelling Pihatarhuntašša³⁷¹ in text 8, this person with a Luwian name must be distinguished from the persons named Pihatarhunda in other texts. There are various officials thus designated and we know, in any case, two professions linked with this name which are difficult to combine in one person: a doctor (^{LÚ}A.ZU) in text 9 and the head of the material or the objects (EN UNUTI) in text 1³⁷². A third designation of profession is in text 3 where the (damaged) personal name is possibly qualified by ^{LÚ}SAG³⁷³, a palace official³⁷⁴.

We can infer from text 7 that the doctor of text 9 is the son of a doctor who previously gave Hattušili III a herb for his eye-disease. Since it is a description of an incident in the past, text 7 need not be older than text 9. Probably the same person is also responsible for the observation of bird oracles³⁷⁵ in text 2, 4, 5 and 6, although no profession is specified here. The close relationship doctor – reciter – priest – augur is also known from Assyria and Egypt³⁷⁶.

Since Zamuwatti also occurs in the texts without any specification of her profession, we can only surmise what it was. In all texts her appearance is connected with a dream. Hence we can assume that the same person is involved in all of them. In text 4 she asks for the horses present in the palace, as Puduhepa says, and receives some of them, the rest being allotted to a certain Uwa. Possibly this same Uwa occurs in an obscure context in the oracle texts KBo 24.129 and KUB 6.34. There mention is made of a dream of the queen in which someone tells the queen something about the 'house' of Uwa (line 11), someone of (the house of) Uwa who "laid" the eyes (line 12)³⁷⁷ and the house of Uwa is again mentioned in lines 15 and 17³⁷⁸. Uwa could therefore be the head of a group of temple employees. At the end of a paragraph of text 3, mention is made of the female servants (of?) (and) Zamuwatti, but no conclusions can be drawn from this regarding her position.

In text 1 queen Puduhepa could possibly make for Zamuwatti a vow to the Stormgod of heaven for the sake of the king's health³⁷⁹. Zamuwatti could have been charged with the magic cure of the king and she could have requested that the Stormgod of heaven be satisfied. That she received some of the horses she asked for could feasibly be an indication of her 'power'. The fact that in text 2 she is mentioned in conjunction with Zuzuli in a passage too fragmentary to provide definite data on her³⁸⁰ could mean that Zuzuli is the same temple official (supervisor of objects, metal founder) as the Zuzuli mentioned under 2 in NH no. 1590. To sum up, Zarnuwatti may perhaps be said to have been employed in the palace in Hattuša as adviser on dreams to the royal couple.

PART TWO: CORPUS OF TEXTS

1. CTH 583: Dreams of the king

KUB $15.5 + \text{KUB } 48.122^{1}$

Transliteration KUB 15.5 + KUB 48.122

³⁷⁸ "House" means an economic work-unit in the temple, as it frequently occurs in KUB 15.17+ (H. Otten/V. Souček, Die Gelübde..., StBoT 1).

³⁷⁹ For the restoration see the relevant text. The promise of a sign of life and a pair of silver eyes prompts the assumption that he suffered from an eye disease.

³⁸⁰ With A. Ünal, Ein Orakeltext..., TdH 6, 46.

¹⁰ Ù-TUM EGIR-an pa-ra-a da- $\begin{bmatrix} a \end{bmatrix}$ -i-iš⁶

¹For a new join of this text, see my article "A New Fragment of KUB 15.5+", in: M. Alparslan-Doğan/M. Alparslan/H. Peker (ed.), VITA. Festschrift in Honor of Belkis Dinçol and Ali Dinçol, 2007, 633-636.

² For the proper name see NH no. 1734, to which this passage must be added.

³ It is possible to read ^D after Ù-it.

⁴ Wrongly given as ^{ID}La[-...-y]a-aš-pu-un with comment: "Akk.(?)" in RGTC 6, 573. The only name suitable for restoration is ^{ID}Laršaš.

⁶ In "Sporadische Univerbierungen von Adverbien und Verba Composita", Fs. H.G. Güterbock, 151-164 (p. 154⁺¹¹), A. Kammenhuber's proposed reading is da-[m]a-i-iš. The translation "Traum, wieder ein anderer...", however, is just as odd as that with da-{a}-i-iš as reading. In my opinion it is not likely that a pronouncement

¹² It would seem that a sort of WA has been written instead of the sign UT the second time. The first UTU is correctly represented on the tablet, unlike what the copy suggests.

⁸-mi- can certainly not be read before -iš-ki-it.

⁹ Cf. NH, 218 no. 1676.

¹⁰ As from this line the text has been published as KUB 48.122, sometimes with the end of the lines in KUB

¹¹ There is not enough left of the sign to read -wa in ku-w]a-pi.

¹³ Something could formerly have been written under the present line 4'. A small 5 has been placed just under A-NA. On the photograph it seems as if the figure is scratched into the tablet.

¹⁴ The same proper name also occurs in KUB 40.80 6, 11 and 16 (cf. H. Klengel, "Nochmals zu Išuwa", Or. Ant. 15, 89) and possibly in KUB 15.30 ii 2. Not mentioned in NH.

¹⁵ A possible reading is har-n[a-u-wa-aš. Although not much of the sign can be discerned, what remains could be -n[a]. Translation: "The matter of the birth-stool".

¹⁶ In Hattušili III, TdH 3, 118 f., A. Ünal considered a restoration with -SIN impossible because of the dating of the name, but from his Ein Orakeltext..., TdH 6, 47 it appears that he now dates the texts in question (KUB 26.66 // KBo 18.153) in the reign of Hattušili III. A. Kammenhuber, Orakelpraxis..., TdH 7, 150 says they are texts from the period of Tuthaliya IV. For that matter H. Winckler (in H. Otten/V. Souček, Das Gelübde..., StBoT 1, 10² already read ^mEh-li-[^DSIN in what is now KUB 56.1, from the period of Puduhepa. KUB 15.5 ii 9' is not mentioned in NH no. 226.

¹⁸ The reading 1 MA.NA-wa etc. could be considered, but must be rejected, with CHD L-N, 162, because the particle -wa never occurs in comparable texts.

¹⁹ For the reading dam-me-la-aš see NH, 236.

^{22 D}Ya-ar-ri-is: -ri- not on copy, but present on tablet (as in HAB, 223). After collation by S. Alp, the same name with -ri- can also be read in HT 14:8 (HAB l.c). Bildbeschreibungen, 62 gives the correct spelling, whilst HE II, 47 does not give -ri-.

²³ In the original the lines of this column are written very close together.

²⁵ Cf. K.K. Riemschneider, "Hethitische Fragmente historischen Inhalts aus der Zeit Hattušiliš III.", JCS 16, 1962, 110-121 (p. 113).

²⁶ Although \acute{u} - \acute{e} -ik-ta could be a possible restoration as regards meaning and available space, IR-ta in lines 24 and 25 renders it unlikely.

²⁸ Restoration in accordance with line 21.

²⁹ Restoration in accordance with the translation of Dreams, 193. The text must have extended far beyond the edge in line 45' and 48'. The tablet itself, being convex, has more space than appears from the copy. In line 53' the text discernibly extends beyond the edge. In line 48' I have not adopted H.G. Güterbock's version i-ya-an-zi ("Ivory in Hittite Texts", Anadolu 15, 1971, 1-7 (p. 3)) because of the space available. I have also omitted the figure 1 before UR.MAH.

³² According to H. Otten ("Eine Lieferungsliste...", WdO 2, 479), the spelling pa-pár-ša-an-zi only occurs here. He thinks it conceivable that -na-aš is the ending of a word signifying a liquid.

³³ Lines 1 up to and including 9 are taken from KUB 48.122 Rev.4. The last signs of lines 6, 7 and 9 can be seen on page 10 of KUB 15. In any case the remnants of the first -zi must come from line 6, for on the copy it is drawn one line too high on page 10. KU.BABBAR corresponds with the end of line 7 and -zi with the end of line 9. The remaining lines of column 4 on page 11 are probably numbered one too high, since three lines per paragraph up to line 19 would seem likely.

³⁵ There is too little space at the beginning of the line for the expected UM-MA ^f*Hé-pa-SUM*. On the grounds of collation DINGIR-LIM GAL can be filled in before SUM-an-zi. More can be seen of LIM than is drawn on the copy. The vertical stroke drawn too close to GAL is possible not the remnant of a wedge.

³⁶ There was probably an acc. pl. before A]-NA as the dir. obj. of IR-ta. This acc. reappears in 35' as -aš. The reading A]-NA, cf. KUB 15.5+ iii 51'.

ten Cate, Muršiliš II, de bronnen voor een karakterschets, 1966, 17 ff. Also in various passages cited by A. Ünal, Hattušili III, TdH 3, 103 and 167 which refer to the angry Šaušgatti, "we shall propitiate her" is preferable to "we put her on the way". Ú-UL + (2nd sg.) daitti must represent a question here, for otherwise there would have to be $l\bar{e}$ instead of U-UL. Could U-UL have been positioned towards the end of the sentence, which is unusual in questions, because of the expected answer: "yes" (Lat. nonne)? A detailed study of interrogative sentences, with a possible distinction between "num" and "nonne" sentences is needed for the answer.

The copy has, erroneously, 40 instead of 44 after 1 ME. The translation of F. Sommer, review of KUB 14.17, Kl. F. 1, 1929, 335-349 (p. 341): "144 ZU Silber" is therefore correct.

³⁹ According to H.G. Güterbock apud Dreams, 193, the "great god" is the god of the sanctuary to which the priestess belonged. Cf. H.M. Kümmel, Ersatzrituale..., StBoT 3, 88 f. for other texts.

⁴⁰ A jasper that must be mounted in metal also occurs in column ii line 21.

⁴¹ See also note to transliteration. The meaning "to explain" for parā dai- is not supported by examples elsewhere.

⁴² Kuwat + pat is not given by H.A. Hoffner, "The Hittite Particle -PAT", in: Fs. H. Otten, 1973, 99-117. A possible alternative for "why then" is "in any respect".

⁴³ For KASKAL-ši tai- (=palši tai-) "to propitiate (the dead)", see A. Archi, "Il dio Zawalli...", AoF 6, 81. "To regulate legal proceedings" in the juridical sense of passing judgment in a lawsuit in Ph.H.J. Houwink

⁴⁴ It hardly seems likely that anda means literally "therein", i.e. in the washbowl. Medial forms of waršiya have an abl. meaning "thereby", or else it is accompanied by kata = "with it" (to be satisfied). See E. Neu, Interpretation..., StBoT 5, 191. For that matter more research on the verb is needed.

⁴⁵ M. Vieyra's translation in: "Les songes et leur interprétation chez les Hittites", in: Les songes et leur interprétation, Sources Orientales 2, 1959, 89-98 (p. 93), "Offre deux moutons de belle forme ..." is incorrect. For keldi ="health" see E. Laroche, "Glossaire... I", RHA 34, 141 f. The meaning of ambašši has not yet been determined. Cf. HW², 68 f.

^{53 &}quot;Veiled" as translation of hupiga/tawant- is uncertain. According to Th.P.J. van den Hout, "Einige luwische Neutra auf -ša/-za in überwiegend junghethitischen Texten", KZ 97, 1984, 60-80, hupigawanza could possibly be a Luwian part, sg. N. form in -an + the Luwian morpheme $\check{s}a$ (changed to za before an n). This would explain the gender of this part./adj. belonging to the neuter ALAM (Hittite N. ešri, Luwian N. taruša). Many forms ending in -anza could thus be explained as neuter forms. (For example nepiš palhamanza aušdu in KUB 35.145 Rev. 7, mentioned as problem in E. Laroche, review of KBo 13, 16 and KUB 40, OLZ 66, 1971, 147-150 (p. 149). For a possible relationship between hupigawant and TUG hubiki, see E. Laroche, "Notes de linguistique anatolienne", RHA 68, 1961, 25-37 (p. 25 f.).

⁵⁴ In his translation E. Laroche (Prière hittite, 6) has three equivalent subordinate clauses, introduced by "comment", with no differences in punctuation and conjunctive particles.

⁵⁶ The meaning of šallakartatar as in H.G. Güterbock, "Zu einigen...", in: Cor. Ling., 67: "negligence as a result of pride".

⁵⁷ The 2nd sg. praet. form memišta has already been noted by A. Götze, Madduwattaš, MVAeG 32/1, 1927. 61. where pešta is also mentioned (Cf. note on KUB 15.5+ ii 34'). A. Ünal (Hattušili III, TdH 3, 138⁺⁸⁸), who for that matter reproduces the form with "er" (3rd p.) himself, criticises SBo I, 15, because his translation is "man", but Ünal overlooks that in Dreams, 255 H.G. Güterbock rightly translates: "Why did you not give...". ⁵⁸ A ^{GIS} huhupal is a percussion instrument.

⁵⁹ Could Azzenna women originally mean perhaps women from Azzi? Cf. F. Pecchioli Daddi, Mestieri...,

⁶⁰ Here kuwapi and anda present a problem, as in KUB 15.1 i 3. anda + gen. = "they belonged to ...". I have interpreted kuwapi as the conjunction "when". Prière hittite, 7 does not translate nu in 17 and gives the sentence a somewhat anacoluthic structure: "L'affaire ... dans laquelle (=kuwapi) ..., puisque moi ... Parole $^{^{61}}$ $\dot{S}A$ + IR (26) = "to request of". IR A-NA (= Hittite wek + dat.) is much more customary.

Translation inspired by that of H.G. Güterbock apud Dreams, 193.

There is indeed some question of a person, then by means of a dream a request is expressed by someone other than a god, which is remarkable. According to Prière hittite, 8, however, here there is also some question of a god who makes a request.

⁶⁴ Šippanduwan = acc. of šippanduwa- (c).
65 Išgar- = literally "to stick".

⁶⁷ Does F. Sommer, review of KUB 14-17, Kl. F. 1, 341 suggest that this is a question because of the inquiry in line 39'?

⁶⁸ For the colophon, see F. Sommer l.c. and Prière hittite, 7 f.

⁶⁹ The reading URU U-da-a (H. Klengel, "Zur ökonomischen Funktion...", SMEA 16, 188) must be based on an error.

⁷⁰ For ^{UZU}GÚ.HAL instead of the more frequently occurring ^{UZU}GÚ.TAR (or -tar), see KBo 1.42 iii 14: E. Laroche, "Textes de Ras Shamra en langue hittite", Ugar. V, 1968, 769-784 (p. 777).

E. Laroche, Textes de Ras Shailia en langue mune, Ogai. V, 1908, 709-

⁷¹ Ma-ni-ya-[ah-ta]: most plausible restoration.

⁷² Kuwapi anda also occurs in our texts in KUB 15.13:39' and, as here before nu-za-kán, in KUB 48.126:4 (as Bo 2828 in R. Lebrun, Šamuha..., 215 ff., less aptly translated). Moreover partially restored in KUB 15.1 iii 7' and KUB 15.28 iii 16'.

⁷³ Ù.NUN mentioned by SL II/3, 880 no. 53 without further explanation. As translation: "Traum".

⁷⁴ Since there are no remnants of signs before LUGAL, a restoration to form MUNUS.LUGAL cannot be considered.

⁷⁵ The manifest traces of the sign I and the parallelism with line 17 render I-NA preferable to E. Laroche's restoration LÚ.MEŠ ("Textes de Ras Shamra...", Ugar. V, 456).

⁷⁶ In KUR ^{URU}PA-TI the Akkadian complement TI derived from HATTI in full. For HATTI = Hittite Hattuša, see H.G. Güterbock, "The Deeds of Šuppiluliuma as Told by His Son", JCS 10, 1956, 98, note o. Wherever only KUR occurs in the text as determinative with PA-TI or HATTI, I have retained Hatti as translation (cf. KUB 15.24 i 1). I have also left unaltered such generally accepted concepts as "Stormgod of Hatti".

⁷⁸ For HUL-lu (=idalu) hinkan, cf. O.R. Gurney, Hittite Prayers..., AAA 27, 32.

⁷⁹ For hinkan (=ÚŠ-an) + tarna-, cf. O.R. Gurney, Hittite Prayers..., AAA 27, 26 and 28. Why N. Br., 70 cites this passage for anda tarna- is not clear.

⁸⁰ The photograph of the tablet is insufficiently legible to justify reading $\check{S}A$ here.

⁸¹ An Akkadogram or a Sumerogram is to be expected after \check{SA} . The remains of the signs make it impossible for ID to follow ŠA A-BI is a possible reading.

⁸² The available space makes a restoration [MUNUS,LUGAL]-za-kán possible, but the objection to this is that then the queen would be asking on her own behalf that she may stay alive, which is something that does not occur in any other vow.

^{83 D}LUGAL-as, as in HAB, 163 (H. Ehelolf rightly notes that there is no space between ^D and LUGAL on the tablet though there is on the copy) would produce a unique form of Šarruma (cf. E. Laroche, "Le dieu anatolien Šarruma", Syria 40, 277-302). But it would be difficult to make two gods in succession agree with DINGIR-LUM EN-YA in line 2 and TI-nu-ši in line 3. Nevertheless the most likely text is: [MUNUS.LUGAL]-za-kán ŠÀ Ù-TI A-NA] DLUGAL-<ma>-aš DZA-BA4-BA4. URU Ú-ri-ki-na, with, perhaps, -ma missing because of lack of space in that line.

⁸⁵ A summary treatment of -kán in nominal clauses with anda as predicate as occurring in Middle Hittite texts is given by F. Josephson, The Function of Sentence Particles in Old and Middle Hittite, 1972, 397 ff.

A possible reading, as suggested by H.C. Melchert, Ablative and Instrumental in Hittite, 1977, 32, is DLUGAL-m[a-aš]. As in the text, as voc.: E. Laroche, "Vocatif et cas absolu en anatolien". Athengeum 47. 1969, 173-178 (p. 173 f.)

⁸⁷ The remnants of the signs are too illegible to be sure of [HU]L-u-i-aš the correct reading. Therefore, like E. Laroche, "Le dieu anatolien Šarruma", Syria 40, 289, I have put x in the text. With E. Laroche, 1. c. x-x-raan-tal-li-uš, since the uncertain sign KI before RA likewise does not produce a plausible word. No suitable word is to be found in either P. Reichert, "Glossaire inverse de la langue hittite", RHA 21, 1963, 61-145 or N. van Brock, "Dérivés nominaux en l du Hittite et du Louvite", RHA 20, 1962, 69-168.

⁸⁸ [GI]M-an could be considered, though no vertical stroke before -an can be discerned in the photograph. ⁸⁹ Lines 21 and 23-27. Restorations as in E. Laroche, "Le dieu anatolien Šarruma", Syria 40. The missing words could possibly be inferred from the comparable construction in line 31. However there is less space than needed by parranda mematti, which occurs in a like context in KUB 21.27 iii 28 f.

⁹⁸ za-aš-hi-ya-[za]-mu is also possible as regards space on the tablet when compared with line 45. Nevertheless -wa is preferable because of KUB 15.3 iii 17 and 5 i 8 in comparable contexts. The reading of F. Sommer/H. Ehelolf, Das heth. Ritual des Papanikri..., 31¹ za-aš-hi-[v]a²-mu is less plausible in view of the remnants of the signs and the space on the tablet.

^{91 -}naš = "uš", dat. (in)commodi with the here personally constructed verb idalaueš- (inchoativum).

⁹² KUB 15.1 iv 18' to 22' is a comparable passage.

⁹³ E. Laroche's reading ("Le dieu anatolien Šarruma", Syria 40) is KÙ.BABBAR, not GUŠKIN.

⁹⁴ E. Laroche, "Le dieu anatolien Šarruma", Syria 40, 290 erroneously does not end the line with -ni-ya.

⁹⁵ DÙ-mi is not in what is called the "provisional" transliteration of HW², 269. In the translation "<gebe>" must be altered accordingly.

⁹⁶ In line 5 of the almost identical vow KUB 15.1 ii 5 to 10 stands ^DLUGAL-ma-aš.

⁹⁷ Written -kiš- as opposed to -ki-iš in line 8.

⁹⁹ Lines 45 to 48 are almost literally the same as KUB 15.19 Obv. 11 to 13.

¹⁰⁰ The addition of A-NA in 46 is essential to the forming of a good sentence construction. The space available does not admit of the addition of ^D as well. In view of MUNUS LUGAL in 45, an omission by the scribe is very plausible. The reading of H. Otten, Materialien zum hethitischen Lexikon, StBoT 15, 1971, 93 is similarly DMUNUS.LUGAL. The reading of A. Unal, Hattušili III, TdH 3, 218 in line 46 [(6)] x MUNUS.LUGAL-ma URU is open to objection both on palaeographical (i.e. remnants of signs and available space) and on linguistic grounds (-ma is impossible in this place because of the continuing main clause).

101 The space on the tablet is rather cramped for reading MUNUS.LUGAL. Moreover the head of a vertical wedge does not indicate LUGAL. Nevertheless in view of the preceding note, A. Ünal's (Hattušili III, TdH 3) addition ^D[LUGAL-m]a is not plausible.

The end of lines 2' and 3' must have been written over the edge, as in 12' and 15', for example.

¹⁰³ See E. Laroche, "Le dieu anatolien Šarruma", Svria 40, 293² for this divine name.

104 In reality there is no space between the signs D and GUR although the copy suggests otherwise.

The gen. Gurwašu could possible be written in Akkadian. An-da is filled in on the analogy with KUB 15.1 i 3 and other places which are mentioned in the note on the translation.

¹⁰⁶ The reading ku-in-k[i] of A. Kammenhuber, "Die hethitische Vorstellungen...", ZA 56, 171 is unfounded.

¹⁰⁷ For the place of the apposition URU-aš, see F. Starke, Die Funktionen..., StBoT 23, 156. The more exact specification is necessary, for ^{URU}Ankuwaš can also mean the country surrounding the city.

¹⁰⁸ Išparzazi: for different ways of writing this 3rd sg, see C. Kühne/H. Otten, Der Šaušgamuwa-Vertrag, StBoT 16, 42.

¹⁰⁵ No text must be assumed at the end of lines 8' to 11'.

¹⁰⁹ In view of the available space and what could be alternating vows by the king and the queen, it is assumed that this is a vow made by the king, as in 17', and that here, too, -za could be missing. Perhaps because personal interests are not involved?

The remains of the sign after the break are too illegible to assume that [ku-i]t-ki can be filled in.

The instrumental case belonging to hališšiyami is to be found in line 38'. Contra E. Neu, Der Anitta-Text, StBoT 18, 86.

¹¹² In line 48' to 53', with the exception of those in line 52', all restorations are by H.G. Güterbock, "Hittite Hieroglyphic Seal...", JNES 32, 139. See also KUB 15.3 iv 5'-9'.

¹¹³ There could be space for more signs.

¹¹⁴ Many signs erased. As restoration [u-wa]-{a}-mi could be considered, but in my opinion a phraseological uwa rarely occur in the votive texts.

1	Hepat of Uda
2	Dream of the queen. [She left] the matter of the neck
3	(to the goddess) at a certain moment 118 therein and in her dream the queen made
4	the following vow to Hepat of Uda:
5	"If you, o goddess, my lady, keep His Majesty alive
6	(and) do not deliver him to Evil ¹¹⁹
7	then I will make a statue of gold for Hepat
8	and for her I will make a rosette of gold
9	and they will call it the rosette of Hepat;
10	for your breast I will make a pectoral of gold ¹²⁰
11	and they will call it the pectoral of the goddess".

¹¹⁵ BAL.TUR without the determinative GIŠ. According to H. Otten, "Ein kanaanäischer Mythus aus Boğazköy", MIO 1, 1953, 125-150 (p. 128) always with GIŠ. The slight erasure in GÚR may possibly be connected with the omission of GIŠ.

¹¹⁷ The text in lines 18' to 22' could possible be restored further with the help of KUB 15.1 ii 25-27. I have made no restoration, because of uncertainty regarding the divinity, the circumstances, the weight of the silver

That the translation of these lines poses serious problems is evidenced by the fact that none of the translators of the entire passage has included line 2. I have taken INIM up to and including anda to be the main clause and known and anda to be adverbs. E. Laroche, "Le vœu...", RA 43, 66 also begins the second part of line 3 with a main clause: "Et la reine...". See for a completely comparable passage KUB 48.126 iii 4. Katta (GAM) maniyahh- is translated as "hingeben" by HW, 135, and as "überlassen" by E. van Schuler, Hethitische Dienstanweisungen für höhere Hof- und Staatsbeamte. Ein Beitrag zum antiken Recht Kleinasiens, AfO Beiheft 10, 1957, 26. Line 15 in C. Kühne/H. Otten, Der Šaušgamuwa-Vertrag, StBoT 16, 13: (with dat. HUL-an-ni) "... schlecht macht".

HUL-u-i-: Dat. of the substantivised adjective: "to Evil". In comparable passages (with, almost synonymous, katta maniyahh-) the dative of the substantive occurs: HUL-(u)-an-ni (Cf. C. Kühne/H. Otten, Der Sausgamuwa-Vertrag, StBoT 16, l.c. and 43). Line 6 is a formula which sometimes occurs in vows and prayers and which, for instance, occurs in literally almost the same form in Muršili's Annals 19th year Oby. i 13 (AM, 148): nu-mu i-da-a-la-u-i pa-ra-a Ú-UL tar-na-a-i- ... Cf. also note to KUB 15.9 iii 1'.

¹²⁰ -ma- is rendered by an accent on breast. Here -du- is possessive because of the presence of -za-, which would not have been put there if the dative of the person in question was mentioned, as in lines 7 and 8. The meaning of TU-TI-TUM as H. Klein, "Tudittum", ZA 73, 1983, 255-284.

Because of the position of -ya, the necklace cannot have been made of lapis lazuli. However, a necklace composed of golden solar discs and pieces of lapis lazuli is possible. Different interpretation in HW², 292: "... eine Halskette und Sonnenscheiben aus Lapis-lazuli (gen. mat.)".

¹²² See notes on transliteration.

¹²³ zizzahi is a Hurrian word designating a cult object, a sort of urn that is usually made of metal and seldom of stone: E. Laroche, "Textes de Ras Shamra...", Ugar. V, 455f. and E. Laroche, "Sur le vocabulaire de l'haruspicine hittite", RA 64, 1970, 127-139 (p. 130). It is only here that the spelling is zizzahi. Elsewhere it is always zizzuhi, as appears from the passages mentioned by E. Laroche, Glossaire de la langue hourrite II, RHA 35, 1977, 306 (in the passage mentioned for KUB 15, line 7 should read line 17).

¹²⁴ It is possible that a proper name in the vocative follows "(mountain)".

speak of Hattushi as EN = 1010°, master (NB. in the same note Zert should be Tostament).

127 Hališšiya: my translation is "mount (in metal)" if the sort of metal is not mentioned (in the instrumental case). Cf. E. Neu, Der Anitta-Text, StBoT 18, 85 and 86⁺¹⁶⁸, 169.

¹²⁸ H.G. Güterbock's translation (apud Dreams, 227) is "... in the rear of the tarnu-house ..." The translation of ^Étarnu as "bathhouse" could prove to be wrong.

¹²⁹ Most probably the vow was made before the queen fell victim to the attack. Hence the imperf. de conatu. ¹³⁰ A golden soul probably means the hieroglyphic sign for soul in gold. There is still no certainty as to what the sign looks like. The other abstract qualities promised (golden dreams, golden curses, etc.) also merit further research. Gold being so costly, the queen does not as yet specify the weight of the promised object.

¹³¹ MAMETE.MEŠ (like NAM.ÉRIM.HI.A in 34) = "oaths" stands for "offers that are promised under oath".

15 – if you, Šarruma, my lord,

16 [ward off] the evil for His Majesty, as long as I am engaged in offering. 132

17 until I have finished offering, and always means "matter", "case". The Sumerogram INIM, which probably covers both words, about 28 times. An exhaustive comparison between uttar, memiya- and INIM (insofar as it is certain that this word implies uttar (n.) or memiya (c.) because of the Hittite complement or of the presence, for example, of pronomina which indicate the gender of the Hittite equivalent) could probably reveal whether any difference in use and meaning can be discerned. The meanings of HUL-lu ut-tar: "the evil course (of mankind)" given by E.H. Sturtevant/G. Bechtel, A Hittite Chrestomathy, 67 and "ill repute" (l.c.) are similar to the meaning in our passage.

¹³² The complicated structure of the sentence is possibly due to contamination of two sentences: "I cannot now fulfill the oaths that were determined by virtue of an oracle. May you therefore, as long as I am engaged in offering, ward off evil until I have finished with the offers which I promised under oath."

¹³³ E. Laroche, "Le dieu anatolien Šarruma", Syria 40, 290 begins a new main clause in 21. In my opinion the subordinate clause continues through part of line 23.

¹³⁴ MAŠ-LU with CAD M, 380: "inlaid with". In A. Goetze, "Zu einigen hethitischen Komposita", in: Cor. Ling., 63-68 (p. 63): "set with". E. Laroche, "Le dieu anatolien Šarruma", Syria 40, 290 "par moitié".

This is an example of an abridged reproduction of a vow previously recorded.

¹³⁶ The translation "lap" avoids the problem of abl. sg. or pl. ginuwaz (knee(s)).

¹³⁷ With nu-mu ma-a-an, the ma-a-an of line 28 is taken up once more after the relative subordinate clause. Different interpretation: S. Alp, "The -n(n) formations in the hittite language", Belleten 18, 1954, 449-467 (p. 450): "and when ..."

⁽p. 450): "and when ..."

138 These are two asyndetic subordinate clauses. Could J. Friedrich's "aber" in line 31, in his review of SBo II, AfO 15, 1945-51, 109-113 (p. 111) be due to DLUGAL-ma?

For the nom. of the -ant formation, see E. Laroche, "Un 'ergatif' en indo-européen d'Asie Mineure", BSL 57, 1962, 23-43 (p. 32). The same construction is to be found in KUB 15.28 iii 11'. The lines mentioned here are the only places in the votive texts where uddananza or uttar occurs. Memiya- occurs about eight times

¹⁴⁰ Anda KAR (= wemiya-) + acc. can also be said of a disease that affects someone: KUB 5.4+ i 20: ma-a-an-ma-an KALAG-ga-aš ta-pa-aš-ša-aš an-da Ú-UL KAR-ya-zi.

¹⁴¹-za arha aniya in E. Neu, Interpretation..., StBoT 5, 4+⁴: "(einen Eid) beseitigen".

¹⁴² It is not clear why a double paragraph divider sometimes occurs in the votive texts. In the Old Hittite palace chronicle, a double line marked the beginning of a new anecdote, while in rituals a double line marks a new day and/or a different ritual. Further research is needed on the way Hittite texts are divided into paragraphs.

¹⁴³ See notes on translation of line 7 to 9.

¹⁴⁴ Like AU, 61⁺⁴, I have translated "in 12 places". In RGTC 6, 238: "Oben auf dem Berg gib (mir) 12 Orte, um zu essen".

¹⁴⁵ For -za arkuwar ešša-, see Ph.H.J. Houwink ten Cate/F. Josephson, "Muwatallis' Prayer to the Storm-God of Kummanni (KBo 11.1)", RHA 81, 1967, 121 f. In our text a neutral "to pray" would seem an appropriate translation -a meaning which, according to HuH, 85, evolved under the influence of the Akkadian cult language. Cf. note to KUB 15.19 Obv. 12' and KUB 15.22:3'.

^{146 &}quot;Laiuna, site inconnu, était aussi la ville d'un Sanda, dieu cilicien" (E. Laroche, "Le dieu anatolien Sarruma", Syria 40, 293). In Hittite texts this place is mentioned only in this column and once in the following one.

¹⁴⁷ This passage proves that DGurwašu cannot be an "objet divinisé", as E. Laroche maintains in "Recherches...", RHA 46, 75.

¹⁴⁸ E. Laroche, "Le vœu...", RA 43, 66 interprets lines 9' and 10' as a question: "Is this the wish which you utter regarding your husband?" In Dreams, 254, H.G. Güterbock begins with a new sentence in line 12' and the main clause beginning with -ma, does not follow the subordinate clause with GIM-an.

¹⁴⁹ apeniššuwan is the acc. sg. N of the adj. apeniššuwant- = "such", "so much".

¹⁵⁰ For the value of an ox and a sheep, at the time the laws were recorded, see J. Friedrich, Die hethitischen Gesetze, 1959, 78 f.

¹⁵¹ There is no reason to assume that these are interrogative sentences, as does M. Vieyra, "Rites de purification hittites", RHR 119, 1939, 121-153 (p. 149).

152 These lines are almost identical with lines 17' to 21'.

153 Here the meaning of \acute{E} = "house" presents a problem. \acute{E} immediately followed by a divine name = "temple" (H.G. Güterbock, "The Hittite Temple...", 20° Rencontre Assyriologie Internationale, 125), É.GAL ="palace".

¹⁵⁴ The translation given by RGTC 6, 329: "... und ich werde Waffen, [entweder] aus Silber oder aus Gold, darin einfassen" is less apt (see also note on transription).

¹⁵⁷ The reading :kutaššu in KBo 2.2 iv 11 in A. Goetze, "Hittite šipant-", JCS 23, 1970-71, 56-94 (p. 78). 158 Restoration taken from F. Ose, Supinum und Infinitiv im Hethitischen, MVAeG 47/1, 1944, 77.

¹⁵⁹ Text according to J. Friedrich, "Zum hethitischen Lexikon", JCS 1, 1947, 275-306 (p. 297), with the exception of WA after DUTU-SI in line 8, which I have omitted since DUTU-SI exactly fills the space available.

160 Although -ši (which fits in well with daranteš) can also be discerned in erasure under -wa, I have, after collation, retained -wa, as in J. Friedrich, "Zum hethitischen Lexikon", JCS 1, 297 and E. Neu, Das hethitische Mediopassiv und seine indogermanische Grundlagen, StBoT 6, 1968, 114. O.R. Gurney also gives -wa in Hittite Prayers..., AAA 27, 63. ¹⁶¹ O.R. Gurney's (Hittite Prayers..., AAA 27, 63) restoration [ma-a-an²] would seem less apt, since there is then no subject.

162 Originally the scribe had I-NA before ^{URU} Urikina. Perhaps the idea of ^DSIN ^{URU} Urikina induced him to remove it later.

163 Collation indicates that tal-la-an with gloss sign is a better reading than 10 tal-la-an, u-tal-la-an or u-ri-la-an.

¹⁶⁴ Although a 1st sg. up-pa-ah-hi would be preferable, up-pi makes this impossible.

¹⁶⁵ The photograph of the text shows that this reading is possible, but by no means certain.

SIN entertains, according to that (wish) will I give the months of silver and gold.

¹⁶⁸ Mataššu could possibly be an adverb. Meaning unknown. Cf. CHD L-N, 211.

Appanna is perhaps an old dative ending in -a of the subst. Appatar and not an inf. as in F. Ose, Supinum..., MVAeG 47/1, 77 and 86, and in B. Rosenkranz, "Zur hethitischen Orthographie und Lautlehre", in: Fs. J. Friedrich, 417-426 (p. 421).

¹⁷¹ MU.KAM-ti, dat.loc. of wett-, is rendered as "in a year". MU.KAM-li = MU.KAM-ti-li, adv., as "yearly", cf. KUB 15.11 ii 13.

¹⁷² Strictly speaking, nuntaraš is an adjective belonging to IZI. All translators couple it with the verb: "bald", "rapidement", "quickly". Cf. CHD L-N, 52.

Here talla perhaps means a (small) model of a real talla. DLL, 89: "récipient", but qualified by "incertain" and "glose?" for this place. H.G. Güterbock apud Dreams, 255: "10(?) talla (oil flasks)".

 176 The undermost stroke of the sign -i is vaguely discernible in the photograph.

¹⁷⁴ Asant: Cf. AU, 69. I believe there are no grounds for assuming that untrue tidings were sent to Egypt on other occasions. Moreover it is not clear whether Hattušili must cancel the journey to Egypt because of his illness. See H. Otten in E. Edel, "Der geplante Besuch Hattušiliš' III in Aegypten", MDOG 92, 1960, 15-20 (p. 20).

175 Wa-aš-ši-iz-zi is probably one of the main verbs. Line 12' also contains a promise to clothe something.

¹⁷⁷ It is difficult to understand why DUTU-ŠI occurs twice so close together. The intervening space is too small to permit the restoration of [še-ir], which would be plausible on the analogy of lines 13 and 23. Even [ŠA] does not fit properly into the available space. The first DUTU-ŠI was perhaps a scribal error which should be removed, hence no restoration is needed, particularly since the first rendering is much more carelessly written than the second and the space between is less than in the copy.

¹⁷⁸ In the reading of HW², 248, there is perhaps rightly no NU in 5 (the NU here little resembles the NU in the following line) and harti, assumed to be forgotten, is filled in after a-ra-a-an. The restoration in these lines were suggested in the translation of O.R. Gurney, Hittite Prayers..., AAA 27, 1226. In the copy, the remnant of -aln in line 7 is incorrectly rendered without a vertical stroke. The too long horizontal stroke of -ŝi in the same line could be a part of NU, which should be read in any case.

¹⁷⁹ ŠA is clearly discernible in the photograph.

¹⁸⁰ At the end of this line -za could after -at. Since -za does not occur in KUB 15.3 i 13, the preference here is -at as ending. See also J. de Roos, "A Hittite Tablet...", JEOL 25, 70¹³.

¹⁸¹ If a sign should be read after apiz, though the photograph provides no manifest reason, then -pát is the only possibility.

¹⁸⁸ The only words suitable as restorations are ^{DUG}pulla and ^{DUG}pulluriva, but they seldom occur. Moreover, since the determinative DUG is lacking in this text, I have given no restoration.

¹⁸³ The reading pár-kán in A. Götze, "Die Pestgebete...", Kl. F. 1, 191. Maš-kán, as preferred by E. Laroche apud HW, 138 and E. von Schuler, "Hethitische Königserlässe als Quellen der Rechtsfindung und ihr Verhältnis zum kodifizierten Recht", in: Fs. Friedrich 1959, 435-472 (p. 448). Both lahha and palši could possibly be the Hittite renderings of the Sumerogram KASKAL. The Hittite complements of KASKAL, for example in nom. sg. KASKAL-aš and KASKAL-iš, are indicative of such an interpretation.

¹⁸⁴ A remnant of the last sign of column i can be distinguished to the left of line 20.

¹⁸⁵ The restoration is not based on parallel passages. Collation makes -iz- a possible reading.

¹⁸⁶ The restoration as in HW², 105.

¹⁸⁷ Column iii contains many scribal errors (inter alia in lines 11, 14, 16, 19, 22) and the writing is more irregular and careless. Moreover the surface of the tablet is (now?) in worse condition than the obverse. The two columns were probably written by different scribes. The only passage in HW, 49 in which the 2nd sg. pr. halzivaši occurs, KUB 26.12 iii 23, also has the restoration hal-. Cf. N. Oettinger, Die Stammbildung des hethitischen Verbums, 1979, 69-72 and 464.

¹⁸⁹ The many scribal errors on this tablet could account for the omission of a -ni, even though in line 8' (with certainly KUR URU) and line 21' Kummanni is written with -man- and not with -ma-an-. H. Otten, Eine althethitische Erzählung um die Stadt Zalpa, StBoT 17, 1973, 40 gives ^{URU}Kum-ma-an. RGTC 6, 220 s. v. Kuma: "oder eher URU Kum-ma-an<-ni> zu lesen?".

¹⁹⁰ Could huganni be an orthographical alternative for hutanni (cf. hupiga/tawant)? The most plausible explanation is, however, a scribal error.

¹⁹¹ The text is inaccurately recorded. One would expect ^DUTU-ŠI, which is difficult to understand, to be preceded by a verb like DÙ-mi, pihhi. Perhaps the (adjectival?) GUŠKIN in line 18' refers to a subst. at the end of line 17'. Although in line 18' k[a- is difficult to read on the photograph as well, a UD-[ni-li] pi-[ih-hi] after piran DÙ-mi also gives an impossible meaning.

¹⁹² The way BAL is written is rather peculiar, perhaps influenced by HI.

1'	[y]ou shall cal[l
2'	[] the country of Kumman[ni
3'	[for the god]dess, my lady, 1 [
4'	[] of unspecified weight [

²⁰³ A possible alternative for "to set up" is "to install", "to place" (for example persons).

¹⁹⁴ The queen probably made a vow for the sake of the king's life.

¹⁹⁷ IŠ-TU É.GAL-LIM: In A. Archi, "Fêtes de printemps et d'automne et réintégration rituelle d'images de culte dans l'Anatolie hittite", UF 5, 1973, 7-27 (p. 16) "sur ordre du palais". J. Friedrich, Die hethitischen Gesetze, 59 § 39a-29-30: ma-a-na-an-kán IŠ-TU É.GAL-LIM a-ra-wa-ah-hi: "Wenn man ihn vom Palaste aus befreit ...". My preference is "(Someone) from the palace" etc., based on a possibly intentional contrast between palace staff and temple staff in lines 10 and 11.

¹⁹⁸ There is no question of a "Gelübde an Allani im Tempel des Wettergottes von M.", as postulated by RGTC 6, 363.

¹⁹⁹ For "yearly" cf. KUB 15.3 i 11.

²⁰⁰ For kinun = "up till the present day", see HAB, 146. Comparable to this is in line 15 UL kuwapi = "not ever as yet".

²⁰¹ I agree with A. Götze, "Die Pestgebete...", Kl. F. 1, 191²: "Genauer Sinn ist mir unklar".

²⁰² Up = to the palace on the citadel in Hattuša. The end of the line is not clear. Dapianza could refer to the campaign, with the second dapianza to reinforce the first one.

²⁰⁵ Much of the text of the Obv. is written over the edge of this very round tablet, e.g. line 10' ends on the Rev.

 $^{^{204}\,\}mbox{The}$ proper name at the end of the paragraph (also in 7') is remarkable.

The form i-ya-un occurs in addition to that of i-ya-nu-un, consequently it is not necessary to insert -nu-.

The three signs of URUDU GUŠKIN are squeezed into two.
 RGTC 6, 230 does not mentioned this occurrence of Kuššara.

²¹⁵ The repetition of the text could be a scribal error.

²¹⁶ A gloss sign could have stood in the damaged space before šanduriša. Although a (damaged) sign TA has been written, ŠA could be read on the grounds of line 20.

²¹⁷ Column 2 is most seriously damaged. Consequently the text is extremely uncertain: Cf. F. Sommer, review of KUB 31, OLZ 44, 1941, 58-61 (p. 58).

The Oriental Institute
The University of Chicago

²¹⁸ Traces at the end of the line suggest MUNUS.LUGAL, but this reading is grammatically unlikely.

If HAR is the correct reading (ŠE is not impossible), the restoration [pi-]ra-an could produce the meaning 'to hold before'. One would have expected 'to hold back'.

The first sign could be either GIŠ or GAD. GAD is preferable, because the element hup- frequently occurs in woven objects and because it is more plausible that the queen made woven rather than wooden objects.

²²¹ Cf. W. Riedel, Bemerkungen zu den hethitischen Keilschrifttafeln aus Boğazköy, 1949, 15 and A. Kammenhuber, "Die hethitische Göttin Inar", ZA 66, 1976, 68-88 (p. 76).

For a possible me[miškizzi see note to translation.

²²³ The reading -ik- and -an- are uncertain.

²²⁶ The rendering of ma-a-an is inspired by that of H.G. Güterbock apud Dreams, 204: "In a dream something like my father has risen again, alive, ...". This indefinite mān is a correction of Güterbock's former opinion that here, as so often, mān should be translated as "how" (H.G. Güterbock, Kumarbi. Mythen vom Churritischen Kronos aus den hethitischen Fragmenten zusammengestellt, übersetzt und erklärt, 1946, 59). See also CHD L-N, 146.

²²⁷ There is absolutely no certainty as to the meaning of ušarunta/i- (source). In cursive letters plus question mark in H. Otten, Puduhepa..., 13.

²²⁹ "Die Bedeutung seiner Worte im Traum bleibt unklar" (H. Otten, Puduhepa..., l.c.).

²³⁰ I have not found šanduriša, with or without gloss sign, in any dictionary or list of words. In line 20 the text would seem to suggest a meaning like "unconscious", "half-alive".

²³¹ In this second column too, mān occurs remarkably often: lines 3, 9, 12, 16 and 20. To indicate that, in my opinion, mān here in most cases also "renders indefinite", I have translated it in most cases as "in some way or another". There are too many damages to the text to admit of any certainty regarding the translation.

As from this line, the entire column is in direct speech.

²⁵² Possibly NA₄ is not a determinative, but a substantive. Mušhuwan-could be part of a verbal form.

²⁴² In the index of persons in the text copy, MUNUS is not read in front of Ammi. The context, however, makes this MUNUS inevitable.

²⁴³ Since it is often not clear who is speaking in this text, he can probably often be replaced by she or it.

²⁴⁴ At the beginning of this line there was probably a substantive.

As form, duwarna cannot be explained, unless we assume a nether plural form of an adjective duwarna-which does not occur elsewhere and which is assumed in theory by H. Eichner, "Die Vorgeschichte des hethitischen Verbalsystems: Flexion und Wortbildung", in: Akten der V. Fachtagung der Indogermanischen Gesellschaft, 1975, 71-103 (p. 98). Objections to this are expressed inter alia in N. Oettinger, Die Stammbildung..., 51³⁶. The verb duwarnai-= Hurr. hub = "to break", on which DUGhupuwai is formed. ²⁴⁷ For the meaning of GUB-ri = artari, cf. E. Neu, Interpretation..., StBoT 5, 6.

²⁴⁸ This connotation of hanza hark- is to be found in H.A. Hoffner, "An English...", RHA 80, 72¹⁴⁶.

Although the restoration Ù-TUM would be desirable because of parallelism with, for example, KUB 15.1 ii 2 ff., there is not enough space for it here. A single stroke of Ù can be seen on the copy.

²⁵⁰ For a possible, though abbreviated, restoration at the end of the lines 3' and 4', see KUB 15.1 i 2-4.

²⁵¹ The traces after KAN are too few to read A[-NA or MUN[US.LUGAL. For kuwapi anda see note KUB 15.1 i 3. Certainly not as given in R. Lebrun, Šamuha..., 216: "Lorsque".

²⁵⁸ See note to transliteration. The translation could therefore run: "with a stone mušnuwan-".

²⁶² Both verbs are conceived of as occurring in a conditional clause.

²⁵³ The reading GÙB is in no way certain and consequently is left out of the translation.

There could have been signs at the end which could have produced the form, e.g. \acute{u} -da-ah-hi or \acute{u} -da-a-i.

²⁵⁷ The ^DPirinkir mentioned in line 6' could have occurred at the end of the line. The traces do not indicate IŠTAR.

²⁵⁹ Azzinna women also occur in KUB 15.5+ iii 16.

²⁶⁰ See note to transliteration.

²⁶¹ For GUR-ZI-IP see H.M. Kümmel, Ersatzrituale..., StBoT 3, 105 ff. Gurzipi as Hurrian word in HW, 322 "Halsberge". Gurbiši in E. Laroche, "Glossaire... I", RHA 34, 155. I do not know why "necklace" is given as translation in R. Lebrun, Šamuha..., 216. Lines 16'-18' were probably spoken by the queen. Ù-it in 15' would then have to mean "appeared in a dream", which could be followed by "... and the queen spoke:". Since parallels are lacking, I have not inserted this restoration in the text.

²⁶³ "Lion statue": see note to KBo 8.61:3'.

²⁶⁴ Huppiyalla ="scalp", "top of the head", providing identical with (UZU) hupalla (Cf. DLL, 48 with lit., where hupiyalla is not mentioned). Both spellings possibly occur in the oracle text KBo 2.2 i 41 ff.: nu-kán DUTU-ŠI hup?-al-la-za-ma ku-e-da-aš UD.KAM.HI.A wa-al-ah-ha-an-zi: "and in the days that they hit His Majesty on the top of his head" and in line 53 where ŠA UD.KAM hup-pi-al-la-aš-kán "in the day(s) of the top of the head" the deity perhaps descerns that the king has fever. In view of the possible dating of KBo 2.2 and KUB 48.126 in the reign of Hattušili III and the extremely rare occurrence of hupiyalla, it is plausibly the same incidence of illness that is mentioned here and that KBo 2.2 refers to the oracular inquiries about the illness of the king, on whose behalf a vow is made in KUB 48.126.

²⁶⁵ The most likely restoration would be to form Manuzziya or another city name. ZI-YA does not occur in votive texts.

²⁶⁷ It is not clear whether -numarra is the ending of a place name, a personal name or the name of a god.

²⁶⁸ The copy erroneously allows for an extra line 5' after line 4'. It is certain that no text follows after karu in that paragraph. Consequently my numbering is from there on lower than on the copy.

²⁷⁴ Since this text bears little resemblance to other texts, it is difficult to conceive what its contents are.

²⁷⁵ If this reading is correct, the dream of a god could be described here.

²⁷⁶ MUNUS entanni = "priestess". Cf. KUB 15.5+ ii 10' and note.

²⁷⁷ Although the traces of the signs do not positively indicate -di, I-DI is nevertheless expected because of line 9'.

The second sign in the divine name could be LI. E. Laroche, "Recherches...", RHA 46, contains no name which could be appropriate.

²⁷⁹ The traces are slightly different from that of a normal PÍ.

²⁸⁴ Arha šarnink- (without meaning) in HW² s.v. arha, 279. Probably the verb seldom occurs. L. Zuntz, Die hethitischen Ortsadverbien..., 38 mentions only KUB 14.4 iii 26 f.

²⁸⁸ Text of C. Kühne/H. Otten, Der Šaušgamuwa-Vertrag, StBoT 16, 28. On the copy there is a great deal of space before IŠ-TU and very little before -ru- in kururaizzi. GS II, 213⁺¹¹⁸ reads: na-aš-ma-za-at [IŠ-T]U GlS TUKUL tar-ah-mi na-aš-ma-mu ták-šu-la-a?-iz-zi. The copy does not support the reading of the last word based on the context. Nevertheless H. Klengel asserts that unsharp photograph of the original does not gainsay this reading. The remnants of the signs at the beginning of line 9' most closely resemble na-aš-ma-za-kán. The reading kururaizzi unfortunately does not make the context any clearer.

²⁸⁹ Before I-DI (restored on the grounds of KBo 8.63 i 3') a further specification of memian could possibly be filled in, as e.g. in KBo 8.63 i 9'.

²⁹⁰ The last sign could be NE or GIBIL.

²⁹¹ It is not certain whether the form :warpašatt[a] (KUB 35.130 ii; H.G. Güterbock, "Notes...", Or. 25, 125) should be filled in here. Grammatically this 3rd sg. praet. of a verb ending in -ša- is possible here. Cf. DLL, 107 f. and J.J.S. Weitenberg, "Hethitisch (anda) warpa- und warpa*", Hethitica 2, 1977, 47-52 (p. 50).

³⁰⁰ The beginning of the sentence resembles KBo 8.63 i 3' and 9'.

²⁹³ Reading as in H. Otten, Materialien..., StBoT 15, 10.

²⁹⁴ The reading Ù-az is uncertain.

²⁹⁵ Restoration to form memiškizzi or memišta is plausible.

²⁹⁶: gaštarhaiyada: with question mark and without translation in both DLL, 54 and HW Erg. 2, 44.

²⁹⁷ Ku-ru-ra-iz-zi must be a derivative of kururai- = "to be hostile", while kururiya probably means "to make" hostility" (HW, 119 = "to be hostile").

²⁹⁸ Where the main clause begins is not clear. Moreover it must be assumed that somewhere there is a second subordinate clause with našma "or", either at the beginning of line 9' (see note transliteration) or at the ²⁹⁹ In most of the votive texts, nawi indicates that the promised object has not yet been given.

³⁰¹ Here it is not possible to assume a form of warp-= "wash", because this frequently occurring verb is not elsewhere indicated by a gloss sign. The idea of a "post-parturitive ritual treatment of a child" by the patilipriest posited by G.M. Beckman, Hittite Birth rituals, 1979, 294 is thereby invalidated.

³⁰³ Could be restored to form : huwahhurtalla? Cf. KUB 15.23:15' 304 Is this a 'fancy' spelling for sius? Cf. E. Neu, Der Anitta-Text, StBoT 18, 122²⁹¹. A nominative here is extremely problematical. Possibly a prefereable reading is A-NA DINGIR-LIM-<uš>.

³⁰⁵ The trace excludes -at. ³⁰⁶ A form of weda- 'to build' could be restored.

³⁰⁷ There is more space than is needed for the restoration ...-aš-]ma-aš EGIR-pa p[u-nu-uš-ša-an-]zi.

There is no space for an expected pu-nu-uš-ša-an-zi (Cf. Obv. 10', 12').

As in H. Gonnet, "Les montagnes d'Asie Mineure d'après les textes hittites", RHA 83, 1968, 91-171 (p. 98 no.183), the beginning of a proper name with lim- or LIM could be considered. It is more likely, however, that the reference is to the mountain Tapašunuwa.

³¹⁰ The juridical meaning of arawahh- is the manumission of persons who are serfs. What the implication here is, is uncertain. This is one of the few passages in which there is no question of freeing someone from luzzi or šahhan (HW², 257).

At the end of the line a verbal form like "plead", "intervene" could be filled in.

312 What remains of the sign makes it impossible to fill in LÚKÚR (=enemy) at the beginning of the line.

³¹⁸ Dahanga impossible because of plene writing.

³¹⁵ Restoration based on the occurrence of the verb tamenk- with mouth and eyes. See, too, note to translation. 316 On copy ŠA.

It is conspicuous that after SUM-hi the text continues even though $kar\bar{u}$ or nawi do not seem possible.

For haštari in the Ištar cult, see I. Wegner, Gestalt..., AOAT 36, 107 f. Prior to this text, this type of Ištar was unknown.

³²⁰ I have opted for this reading despite the fact that in HEG T, D₁, 79, E. Neu says it only occurs in inedita in the third person singular. For the verb damenk- + eyes cf. KBo 9.125 + i 6'. Although the expression probably means healing, the sticking together of the eyes seems more likely to be unfavourable, unless reference is made to the retina!

³²¹ For the axe in the Ištar-cult see I. Wegner, Gestalt..., AOAT 36, 53, 99 and 208.

³²² Female temple personnel?

This would seem to mean a characteristic of a golden article (?). "Warm" seems impossible.

³³⁰ For this Stormgod see I. Singer, Muwatalli's Prayer to the Assembly of Gods through the Storm-God of Lightning (CTH 381), 1996, 185-189.

³³² A restoration to form the name of this goddess would seem grounded in view of her occurring in Hittite texts in this writing. Cf. too V. Haas, "Substratgottheiten des westhurrischen Pantheons", RHA 36, 1978, 59-

^{69 (}p. 67 ff.).

333 It would seem more likely that the scribe forgot -ba- than that he wrote a deliberately shortened form: amši or am would then have sufficed. But HW², 66 gives another example in KBo 8.57 Obv. 4, Rev. 10: am-ašši-in. Reading GU₄ uncertain because before am-aš-ši (in intercolumnium) there is one vertical wedge visible.

³³⁴ A vertical stroke which cannot represent ANA, 1 or m.
335 No KÙ.BABBAR or GUŠKIN possible.

³³⁶ BAL is written with a relatively old sign.

³³⁷ Other forms are also possible.

⁽p. 106 f.). It is more likely that the LÚA.ZU of 1506/u was a priest rather than a doctor. If it was the same doctor, then the specification "from Babylon" was expected there as well.

After -]inzi (a Luwian plural?) is one line more possible.

Remnant renders kiš-an an impossible reading.

³⁴⁵ This is most likely the doctor who died later in Hattuša, thus rendering possible a fairly accurate dating during the reign of Hattušili III. A previous doctor had come from Babylon at the request of Muwatalli. It is possible that Hattušili made the vow in KBo 53.112 on behalf of the sick doctor. For Mesopotamians at Hattuša see G.M. Beckman, "Mesopotamians and Mesopotamian Learning at Hattuša", JCS 35, 1983, 97-114

³⁴⁶ It is possible that the restoration given does not take up all the available space on the tablet (cf. following note). The name of a god is certainly to be expected here, but which one is not certain. The only possible name that fits in with E. Laroche, Recherches..., RHA 46 and S. Košak, Odzadni Slovar Hetitskih Imen, 1974 is ^DAllani which, however, is always spelt with one n, e.g. in KUB 15.11 ii 5.

Collation confirms what the copy indicates, namely that -ra-an instead of [y]a-an is not a likely reading. Otherwise with the aid of KUB 15.1 i 5-6 line 2 could very well be restored to read DUTU-ŠI TI-nu-an har-ti HUL-u-i-wa-rla-an pa-ra-a etc.

³⁴⁸ In any case GUŠKIN cannot be read before DÙ-mi.

³⁴⁹ Possibly ŠI can be read in erasure before ma-a-an-wa.

³⁵⁰ Har-ti is the most likely restoration, since TI-an in line 4' is not followed by -za.

³⁵¹ GIS TUKUL.HI.]A with J. Friedrich "Zu den kleinasiatischen Personennamen mit dem Element muwa", Kl. F. 1, 1930, 359-378 (p. 376³) and H.G. Güterbock, "Die Elemente muwa und ziti in den hethitischen Hieroglyphen", Ar. Or. 18, 1950, 208-238 (p. 216³⁶). Cf. KUB 15.9 ii 2'. Friedrich's reference to KUB 15.8 i 4' is incorrect, since there is a question of Za-mu-u-wa-[at-ti.

³⁵⁴ Judging by the photograph, -ša would seem preferable to -ta as in the copy, but no greater clarity is thus achieved

For the weapons of Ištar, Cf. KUB 15.1 iii 37' and my article "A Hittite Tablet...", JEOL 25, 73⁺³⁰.

³⁵⁵ The reading IGI.HI.A is probably correct. It is perhaps possible to discern remnants of KÁN before IGI. To the best of my knowledge, "making eyes live" occurs nowhere else. Not in C. Burde, Hethitische medizinische Texte, StBoT 19, 1974.

³⁵⁶ Restoration suggested by A. Götze, "Die Pestgebete...", Kl. F. 1, 200⁵. DUG haršiyalli- is mentioned by O.R. Gurney, Hittite Prayers..., AAA 27, 122.

The photograph likewise is too vague to enable positive identification of the sign. According to C. F. Justus, "Semantic and Syntactic Aspects of 'Knowing in One's Heart'", Or. 52, 1983, 107-115 (p. 112²⁴): ŠÀ.

³⁶⁹ In the copy it has erroneously been assumed that there is not a line of text after 12' and above the paragraph divider. Line 13' and 14' should be 14' and 15' respectively.

 $^{^{368}}$ See H. Otten/J. Siegelová, "Die hethitischen Gulš-Gottheiten und die Erschaffung der Menschen", AfO 23, 1970, 32-38 (p. 33-36) for a treatment of (:)ušantar(a)i. A. Goetze (The Hittite Ritual of Tunnawi, 1938, 75 erroneously with \dot{u} as first sign) considers a 3rd sg. pres. of a verb a possibility for this place. H. Otten/J. Siegelová, "Die hethitischen...", AfO 23, 1.c.: "Man wird nunmehr, aufgrund von 1167/z auch hierbei eher an das Adjektiv ušantari- denken." "Pregnant" would not seem a tenable meaning for all the texts cited by H. Otten/J. Siegelová. A study of the relationship with the verb haššik (+za), with which ušantari twice occurs in the votive texts (KUB 15.9 ii 3'f. and KUB 31.77 iii 13') could give the meaning "filled", "full" for ušantari-.

The position of :arrahhan[i at the beginning of the sentence probably means that it must be restored to form a subst. and not a verbal form of arrahhaniya- or of arrahhanišk-. The form ar-ra-ah-ha-ni[-ik-ti (according to KBo 13.50:9') proposed by A. Ünal (Hattušili III, TdH 3, 104⁵⁵) should run ar-ra-ah-ha-ni-it-ti. Moreover it is preceded by piran, hence a comparison is difficult. As subst., arrahhani occurs inter alia in KUB 8.70 i 13: [a]r-ra-ah-ha-ni-ya-za. "Fluch bestimmter Art" (A. Ünal 1.c.). According to H. Otten, Zur grammatikalischen und lexikalischen Bestimmung des luvischen, 1953, 95*166, arrahhani could possibly be compared with Luwian hirutani.

³⁷¹ Although not listed by NH, the personal name Urazi seems a good possibility here.

he/she m]ade a vow:

there will] be a lunar eclipse³⁷⁶

376 Literally: "the Moon-god shall die".

³⁷² The meaning of arrahhani is unknown. P. Meriggi, "Testi luvili", Athenaeum 35, 1957, 56-77 (p. 58) gives "curse", "calomny". According to EHS, 561, arrahhan[i is either a subst. = "curse" or part of a verb. H. Hoffner, "An English-Hittite Glossary", RHA 80, 33 s. v. "to curse" = arrahhaniya.

³⁷⁴ I have interpreted the form išhaššarueš as nom. pl, of the adj. išhaššaru- with a subject that could be latent in the 3rd pl. verb form ending in -ir. HW, 86 takes išhaššarueš- to be a verb: "freundlich werden"(?), (beschädigt)". The meaning given by H. Freydank, "Eine hethitische Fassung des Vertrages zwischen dem Hethiterkönig Suppiluliuma und Aziru von Amurru", MIO 7, 1960, 356-381 (p. 376) for išhaššaruešš- is "to care for the welfare", "to satisfy".

 $^{^{375}}$ The meaning ascribed to kuwarayalla is based on HW Erg. 3, 21 (s.v. kuwayaralla).

³⁷⁷ Although there certainly are similarities between KUB 15.14 and KUB 15.21 as regards vocabulary, these two texts differ too much structurally to assume, as does E. Laroche CTH 590, a join without direct connexion or to be able to give incontestable restorations.

³⁷⁸ HW², 172, gives as possibilities a-pi-e-ni-iš-ša-an or a form of apeniššuwant-. In view of the many scribal errors, an inserted $\langle da \rangle$ is quite justifiable.

Although a sign for IŠ is written close to it, nevertheless a dir. obj. "festivals" with tai + part. seems highly feasible. EZEN₄.MEŠ tehhi is certain in KUB 15.21:2 and restored in KUB 15.14:2'.

³⁸⁰ The bull-man is probably a temple official who takes part in rituals, just like the dog-man, the lion-man etc.

381 The sign after -kán looks like Ù.

³⁸² Šeššuwar in HW, 191.

³⁸³ Although ŠE has been erased, there is no reason to leave it out of the text. A GU₄ ŠE is also mentioned in KUB 15.11 ii 22. In the great majority of cases, an ordinary ox is promised. GU₄ is the reading of H. Ertem (Boğazköy... faunası, 49³).

³⁹³ If the sign after A-NA is a wedge representing a person, then -ir could form part of še-ir: "For the sake of', reinforcing A-NA = "for". If, however, it was the name of a god in the fragment broken off, the A-NA must mean "to".

There is possibly not enough space for the restoration of ha-an-da[-it-ta-ri]. Two signs could fit in, e.g. ha-an-da[-an-za]. Since the last sign does not seem to be -za, I have inserted no restoration in the text. L. Zuntz (Die hethitischen Ortsadverbien..., 79): "Ob das Verbum, das Nomen oder das Adjektiv vorliegt ist ... noth zu erkennen...".

³⁹⁰ In the photograph, the sign before $-\dot{s}i$ somewhat resembles $-i\dot{s}$.

For restoration compare, for example, KUB 15.1 iii 17'.

The restoration of A. Ünal, Hattušili III, TdH 3, 218: [MUNUS.LU]GAL etc. is less plausible in my opinion. On the other hand his restoration for line 15 (wrongly numbered 16 by him) does remain possible: [ar-ku-wa-ar kiš-an e-eš-še-eš-ta]. Cf. KUB 15.1 ii 46 f. Nevertheless there is a good possibility that the content of the vow stood in lines 15 and 16.

³⁹⁴ It is not clear what (pian) arha šallanu- means. Probably arha gives the verb the opposite meaning (L. Zuntz, Die hethitischen Ortsadverbien..., 39 and HAB, 73). If pian should not be linked with arha šallanu (not in L. Zuntz, Die hethitischen Ortsadverbien..., 50-54), then it would be translated as: "at the front".

³⁹⁵ According to A. Kammenhuber, Orakelpraxis..., TdH 7, 28, this is MUŠEN oracle terminology. In

L. Zuntz, Die hethitischen Ortsadverbien..., 103: "in das ... kamen sie von der günstigen Seite nach vorne". A. Archi, "L'ornitomanzia ittita", SMEA 16, 160 f. translates SIG₅-za as: "(con volo) bello, bene".

³⁹⁶ -ši could be the remnant of a verbal form (2nd. sg. pr.) A. Kammenhuber, "Sporadische...", in: Fs Güterbock, 155 places a question mark at this place and states that in any case the asyndeton "forwards and back again" is not meant.

³⁹⁷ As introduction, the beginning of this line could conceivable do without A-NA. In this long line of text, the scribe could have made a mistake and have omitted the name of the deity after A-NA later on, perhaps because he thought he had just written I-NA, after which the place name would be in its proper place. In KBo 16.98 ii 5, the king journeys to Kaittana and the queen makes her offering "from afar" and from this it can be inferred that in our text the queen makes her offering in Hattuša ("from afar"). This could imply that the two texts are closely related and refer to the same journey. According to RGTC 6, 161, Kaittana occurs only in these two passages in Hittite texts.

³⁹⁸ The sentence could possibly begin with ma-a-an-mu. Since it would be a very tight fit, I have not put it in the text.

³⁹⁹ The restorations are based on KUB 15.1 ii 45-48, where the same text occurs with a different name for place and god and A-NA before ^DUTU-ŠI.

⁴⁰⁰ -za arkuwar iya- or ešša- ="to pay". Arkuwar tai- (sometimes with -za) = "to address a prayer" (for example KUB 15.22:3'). Cf. HW², 311 ff.

⁴⁰¹ H. Ertem, Boğazköy...coğrafya adları dizini, 20, has Aškuršunipa instead of Mušunipa.

⁴⁰² The available space also admits of A-NA U[D.KA]M.HI.A. In view of the similarity with the sign EZEN₄ in 11' and the lack of any further specification, EZEN₄ is preferable.

 $^{^{407}}$ \acute{U} -UL has been restored in order to produce the meaning that is (probably) appropriate.

For GAM ar = "to stand beside . . . ", see HW², 202.

⁴⁰⁵ SILIM-li (= aššuli) means: "for the welfare of the king". Cf. E. Neu, Interpretation..., StBoT 5, 6 f.

The meaning of awan šarā DŪ is uncertain. A. Kammenhuber, "Sporadische...", in: Fs. Güterbock, 155¹⁶: "Goetzes einziger Beleg für awan šarā [Madduwattaš, MVAeG 32/1, 135 sub c. mit Anm. 19 (20)] ist semantisch unklar...". I agree with O.R. Gurney, Hittite Prayers..., AAA 27, 96 that it could be identical with šer iya-= "to exalt", "to celebrate" (cf. Gloss., 184). Less plausible is the literal meaning of the translation of HW, 80: "in die Höhe kommen lassen" = to cause to come up (to the temple). For a comparable šarla-= šarā dā-= "enlever", "soulever", see E. Laroche, "L'adjectif sarli- 'supérieur' dans les langues asianiques", in: Fs. Friedrich, 291-298 (p. 292). Moreover, I cannot find grounds in the text for the inference that here the issue is: "eine Herstellung von zerbrochenem Kultgerät" (A. Kammenhuber "Sporadische...", in: Fs. Güterbock, l.c.).

⁴⁰⁸ For the reading ^DWa-an-za, see KUB 15.22:4'. In both texts she occurs in relationship with KÁ.

Some verbs which have UDU as direct object are: penna-, unna- and nanna-. Since the remnant of the sign at the end of the damaged part most resembles -an, nannanzi is given in the text.

⁴¹⁰ MÈ = zahhiyaš also occurs as epithet qualifying ^DLAMMA: Cf. A. Archi, "Divinità tutelari e Sondergötter ittiti", SMEA 16, 1975, 89-117 (p. 99).

⁴¹¹ The remnant preceding ŠAR is reproduced correctly in the copy.

⁴¹² CHD L-N, 47: "Hurrian offering term, perhaps to be restored in KUB 15.20 iii 5."

⁴¹⁵ An argument against a possible join with KUB 15.14 is the difference in style of the writing: KUB 15.21 is written in a wild, artistic manner, totally different from that KUB 15.14. KUB 15.21 looks like a sort of summarizing tablet containing almost identical vows and consequently the lines supplement each other for the major part.

⁴¹³ Although A. Kammenhuber (Orakelpraxis..., TdH 7, 28) discerns a (SU) oracle here, another possibility would seem to be that 'gate' should be taken in its literal sense. In KUB 15.22:11', a silver gate is promised to this same goddess Wanza.

⁴¹⁴ In H.M. Kümmel (Ersatzrituale..., StBoT 3, 49⁺¹⁴), šaraššiya- is termed a Hittite dative (plus question mark). Most recently, E. Laroche, Glossaire de la langue hourrite II, RHA 35, 1977, 216: "šarašši = royauté, šaraššiya = dat. loc. kiz.", reference being made to H.M. Kümmel (Ersatzrituale..., StBoT 3).

⁴¹⁶ One more direct object probably preceded NAM.RA. S. Alp, "Die soziale Klasse der NAM.RA-Leute und ihre hethitische Bezeichnung", JKF 1, 1950, 113-135 (p. 117) assumes only [nu], which seems unlikely in view of the position of -ya-at-ta. In line 8' the remnant of the sign preceding NAM.RA makes ALAM DINGIR-LIM a possibility. In line 6' this possibility is precluded by the suggested restoration of ALAM.HI.]A TIM in line 5'.

⁴¹⁷ The restoration in line 7' is based on line 4'.

⁴¹⁸ Although ma-a-an would seem to be the obvious restoration in line 9' and 12', the position of -za later on in both sentences renders it unlikely.

⁴¹⁹ An interrogative sentence, however unsatisfactory, would seem to be the only possibility, since the position of -za before tar-ah-mi indicates the beginning of a new sentence.

420 Another possible translation: "to make good again" = "to have repaired" is less probable in view of the absence of EGIR-an in line 16.

This line forms the rather strange conclusion to the abridged version of a vow formerly made.

⁴²² Owing to the many ideograms and the width of the tablet, it is not possible to indicate accurately the space available for restorations.

⁴²³ For the reading ^DWanza, Cf. E. Laroche, "Recherches...", RHA 46, 91: "... Wanzaš GAŠAN-YA, qui pose un problème de lecture...".

⁴²⁴ Something like -kán, though damaged, is written instead of -TI in URU HAT-TI. In A. Archi, "L'organizzazione...", Or. Ant. 12, 212 Hatti lands (KUR.KUR URU PA) without mention of a complement. 425 The line probably ended with *hattulanna*š or -az. The remnant of the sign precludes a dat. ending in -ni.

⁴²⁶ The trace following KAM could possibly be E[ZEN₄: "On the second day of the ... festival". Cf. V. Haas, Der Kult von Nerik, 65⁴ for deer and festival (with Akkadian reading for LÚ-LIM). The Sumerian reading LÚ.LI.IM in O.R. Gurney, Hittite Prayers..., AAA 27, 60 note 1 and LÚ.LIM = "deer" in HW, 282.

⁴²⁸ For arkuwar tai-, see note on KUB 15.1 ii 46 and KUB 15.19 Obv. 12'. It is not likely that the infinitive in this line is governed by IKRUB, as assumed by Prière hittite, 19 and, with some reservation, by HW², 313, who wrongly renders IKRUB as a first person. There is a considerable amount of space for supplementary text. H. Th. Bossert, Asia, 1946, 84 likewise does not assume dependence on IKRUB.

⁴²⁹ The most plausible construction is a conditional clause. For example: "Wanza, my mistress, [if in the matter of ... you] indulge". The translation of H.Th. Bossert, Asia, 86: "Sie, meine göttlich Herrin (war) eine zu Willen seiende" seems less apt to me. Now that KAR in for example kitkar (adv. "at the head") has been identified as a subst. meaning "head" (most recently in HEG K, 496), kari tiya- could perhaps be translated as "post oneself at someone's head" > assist". The meaning "indulge" was first suggested by J. Friedrich, Staatsverträge... II, MVAeG 34/1, 1930, 28⁺².

⁴³⁰ For the difference between É.GAL = "court" and É.LUGAL = "palace", see A. Archi, "L'organizzazione...", Or. Ant. 12, 211 f.

⁴³¹ All the line 4' to 10' would seem to contain conditional clauses, after which the main clause follows in line 10'.

⁴³² In B. Landsberger, Die Fauna des alten Mesopotamien nach der 14. Tafel der Serie HAR.RA = hubullu, 1934, 98, this passage is mentioned as a deer sacrifice.

⁴³³ For MUNUS.MES hazqayaraz, compare Rev. 4-5'. It is of course uncertain whether the same form occurred here too. For diverse forms of the word, see HEG H, 234 and F. Pecchioli Daddi, Mestieri..., 386.

⁴³⁵ In A. Goetze, review of HW, JAOS 74, 1954, 186-190 (p. 189) the form ending in -az is an ablative. H.C. Melchert, Ablative..., 410: "I see nothing about its use to suggest that it is an ablative". According to HEG H, 234 this form is a nom. that has many shapes. The women in question could possibly be temple maidens who make preparations for the festivals. This form is not in F. Pecchioli Daddi, Mestieri..., 386.

⁴³⁸ Instead of ku-u-un in A. Archi, "L'ornitomanzia...", SMEA 16, 164: GUN.

⁴³⁹ Arwiwi can be identified with the Hurrian gen. sg. awariwa < awari = LÍL "field", "steppe" (E. Laroche, "Glossaire... I", RHA 34, 65). Hittite gimra or possibly kuera: H.A. Hoffner, "Propaganda and Political Justification in Hittite Historiography", in: H. Goedicke/J. J. M. Roberts (ed.), Unity and Diversity, 1975, 49-62 (p. 62⁶¹).

The meaning of iparwašha- (= iparwašši-?) is still unknown, despite the supposition that it is a sort of bird (moreover not one occurrence with the determinative MUŠEN). Cf. H. Ertem, Boğazköy ... faunası, 215 f. ⁴⁴¹ It is probable that line 8' originally ended with a negative, thus giving peššiya a favourable meaning.

⁴⁴² Although DLL, 52 gives a nom. sg. for iparwašhaš, I believe it must be an acc. pl., because it is followed by "1 silver and 1 golden".

⁴⁴³ Another possible restoration is A-NA KUŠ kur-š]a-aš. Most recent comments on kurša- in M. Popko, Kultobjekte in der hethitischen Religion, 1978, 108-115.

⁴⁴⁴ The reading TU-UT-TU MUŠEN in H.A. Hoffner, "An English...", RHA 80, 1967, 23⁺¹⁶ does not seem correct because of the personal wedge before Tuttu. As proper name in NH no 1390, Tuttu occurs in 534/u (in R. Lebrun, Šamuha..., 214), likewise in an vow and in connexion with a silver statue. How the line ended is not clear. Although HU is written in rasure and U is also uncertain in the photograph, an expected DÙ-mi is impossible.

⁴⁴⁵ Like A. Goetze (review of HW, JAOS 74, 188), HEG H, 126 assumes it is certain that halai- means "in Bewegung setzen".

446 I-NA URU HAT-TI is not the dat. loc. of the place to which a person is called, as stated by F. Ose,

The estimation of available space in column ii is based on column iii. There is more space available than is suggested by the restoration in lines 6', 7' and 10' made by R. Lebrun, Samuha..., 191. IBoT 3.125 begins with line 10', whereas KUB 15.28 runs on to include line 14'. Although KUB 48.123 contains a vow which probably refers to the same disease of the king in Zithara, the two texts have too little in common to support indubious restorations. Although H. Otten/C. Rüster, "Textanschlüsse und Duplikate von Boğazköy-Tafeln (61-70), ZA 68, 1978, 150-159 (p. 156) said that in their opinion KUB 48.123 could be joined with KUB 15.28 and IBoT 3.125 to form a single tablet, it seemed unlikely to me that KUB 48.123 would form an entity with the two other texts. The collation of the original (KUB 48.123) in Berlin together with Prof. Klengel proved definitely that the join is impossible. For KUB 48.123 (Bo 2753) i 8'-11' see C. Burde, Hethitische medizinische..., StBoT 19, 5 where there is more space for text at the beginning of the lines than is suggested by the author's transliteration.

Trace of sign before ALAM looks like TI. Hence IŠTAR, -LIM, -YA etc. are not possible.

⁴⁵⁰ The scribe was undecided as to whether - $\check{S}U$, as in 1506/u, or $\check{S}U$ -NU should be written here.

⁴⁵¹ Pí-ih-hi probably was written in the space under line 10'.

⁴⁵² As in line 6', HA is written here as ZA.
453 To be compareed with KUB 15.8 i 5'.

The restoration is extremely uncertain. Although grammatically possible, I consider a restoration [ku-it-ma]-an in relation with kuitman in line 9': as long as ... until" unlikely.

⁴⁵⁵ Restoration based on KUB 15.1 ii 32.

⁴⁵⁶ It is evident from KUB 48.123 i 8 ff. that the theme is some part of the king's body: in Zithara his auli became sick. Here the medical meaning of hantaittari- could be :"becomes healthy/recovers". This term does not, however, occur in the medical texts of C. Burde, Hethitische medizinische..., StBoT 19, which have SIG_5 -ri = lazziyattari with the same meaning. A different interpretation in C. Kühne, "Hethitisch auli- und einige Aspekte altanatolischer Opferpraxis", ZA 76, 1986, 85-117 (p. 10885): auli- = sacrificial animal.

^{457 &}quot;Give" probably was written in the space below line 10'.

The sequence of the words in line 12' indicates that $\check{S}A$ DUTU- $\check{S}I$ belongs to annalliš. The precise implication of annalli- with a goddess is not as yet clear. Cf. HW², 75.

⁴⁶² The meaning of duddu(šk)- as in N. Oettinger, Die Stammbildung..., 230. See also F. Imparati, "Una concessione...", RHA 32, 96-101.

⁴⁶³ A similar ending occurs nowhere else in the votive texts.

⁴⁶⁴ If huwaza- is the correct reading, it is an unknown word. MUŠEN as reading instead of HU likewise does not produce a solution. Since the promise is to give a period and a city, one might expect something like "(and) he safely/quickly ... reaches the city, then I shall...

⁴⁶⁵ The photograph of the text clearly shows that IR can be the sign in the proper name. Consequently MUNUS ^DU as mentioned by A. Kammenhuber, review of KBo 16, Or. 39, 1970, 547-567 (p. 558) must be rejected. This could be the second text in which MUNUS ^DU-IR occurs with ^fKilušhepa. The sign after IR resembles URU; thereafter follows one more sign before TE. In HAB, 121 LÚ □E-MU with question mark. The traces on the photograph would seem to render LÚ implausible.

⁴⁶⁶ Judging from the photograph, harnašalla would seem to be preceded by NU rather than GIŠ.

⁴⁶⁷ Reading is by Th.P.J. van den Hout.

⁴⁶⁸ Unlike in R. Lebrun, Šamuha..., 193 and so cited by H. Klengel, "Die Hethiter und Babylonien", Ar. Or. 47, 1979, 83-90 (p. 90³⁸): nu-wa-za-x[.

⁴⁶⁹ According to R. Werner, Hethitische Gerichtsprotokolle, StBoT 4, 42, the meaning of UDDALU, which seldom occurs, is unknown. AHw III, 1401 gives "ein Metallgefass".

⁴⁷⁰ For harnašalla = "a small box or pyxis", see H.G. Güterbock, "Ivory...", Anadolu 15, 6.

⁴⁷⁵ Only P. Meriggi has suggested a meaning for huwanaššari, i.e. "masks" in "Über einige hethitische Fragmente historischen Inhaltes", WZKM 58, 1962, 66-110 (p. 106); "Da Brillen doch wohl anachronistisch wären, so bleibt nur (Halb)masken übrig, die im Ritus kaum überraschen können."

⁴⁷⁶ This verb could, of course, be in a subordinate clause, as could the verbs in the following lines.

⁴⁷⁷ Unless otherwise specified, the transliteration is that of H. Otten, Puduhepa..., 13²². Line 7' not in Otten, Puduhepa..., l.c. The beginning of line 4', ma-a-an is not given by H. Otten in the text, though it is in the translation. The end of the line is a restoration by the author.

⁴⁷⁸ The beginning of the line is my restoration. cf. KUB 15.23:9' and KUB 48.126:21'.

⁴⁷⁹ A. Goetze. "Hittite Dress", in: Cor. Ling., 48-62 (p. 51) and J. Danmanville, "Iconographie d'Ištar-Šaušga en Anatolie ancienne". RA 56, 1962, 9-30 (p. 23) have: [MUNUS-aš-š]a-za. At the end of the line H. Otten, Puduhepa..., l.c. has NÍ.TE-x[.

⁴⁸⁰ -LUM is written as MI.

⁴⁸¹ A. Kammenhuber, "Studien zum hethitischen Infinitivsystem IV", MIO 3, 1955, 31-57 (p. 40) reads -ś]uwa-u-wa-an etc. "vielleicht verschrieben nach den beiden Supina(?)".

⁴⁸² The reading ME is dubious.

⁴⁸³ Collation could indicate GIG. No other sign resembles the copied sign more closely.

⁴⁸⁴ If nawi is the correct restoration, a third promised object must have stood in line 8' in addition to the two mentioned because of karū.

⁴⁸⁵ One would expect: "[and do not put it on like a woman". It would hardly be possible, however, to restore U-UL at the beginning of the line. There is a good parallel for the clothing of an enemy in women's garments in KBo 6.34 ii 50 where in the first military oath (N. Oettinger, Die militärischen Eide der Hethiter, StBoT 1976, 10) the armies of those who break the oath are threatened with being clad in women's garments.

⁴⁸⁶ I have taken piran as postposition belonging to A-NA DUTU-ŠI. L. Zuntz, Die hethitischen Ortsadverbien..., 99 gives for piran eš-/aš- the military meaning: "occupy openly, before all eyes". A close meaning of piran would also fit well with walh-, for that matter. A. Goetze, "Hittite Dress", in: Cor. Ling., 51: "in front of his Majesty".

⁴⁸⁷ I have no explanation for the reading EN ^{GIŠ}TUKUL-LIM. Neither Hittite hatantiyali = LÚ ^{GIŠ}TUKUL nor acc. KAKKU = ^{GIŠ}TUKUL can produce the complements -ši, LIM or -li.

⁴⁸⁸ An official, without LÚ, MUNUS, EN etc. could have stood in the text before MUNUS.

⁴⁸⁹ DUMU could possibly be filled in before MUNUS.

⁴⁹³ Trace of -aln is not clear. Nevertheless this is a plausible restoration. The index of place names in KUB 48 gives UD-ru-na.

⁴⁹⁴ For arka peda-="to bring home" (of a god), cf. L. Zuntz. Die hethitischen Ortsadverbien.... 21 and HW², ⁴⁹⁰ For other texts with ^(LÚ)BEL (EN) ^(LÚ) GISTUKUL, see H.Otten, Sprachliche Stellung und Datierung des Madduwatta-Textes, StBoT 11, 1969, 17 (no further explanation given). A mention of LUGISTUKUL ("=vielleicht hatantiyalis, Handwerker, der zumindest in den erwähnten Schenkungs- und Gelübde-Urkunden glebae adscriptus war") is in H.G. Güterbock, "Bemerkungen zu den Ausdrücken ellum, wardum und asīrum in hethitischen Texten", in: 18e Rencontre Assyriologique Internationale, 1972, 93-97 (p. 95). EN or BEL LUGISTUKUL could be an indication of rank, as is proposed by HAB, 128. A plausible translation would then be "upper-craftsman" or "overseer of artisants", comparable to a GAL ... in other areas. Possibly a clear distinction must be made between an EN (BEL) LÜGIS TUKUL and an EN (BEL) GIS TUKUL which could be compared with an Akkadian BEL KAKKI = "artisan", "he who carries with him the symbol of his craft" (CAD K, 57). The passage 2 BoTU 12 B Obv. 9 needs not be at variance with this. ⁴⁹¹ -zuzuwa is probably part of a proper name.

⁴⁹² H. Otten, Die Überlieferung des Telipinu..., 41³ restores [ki-nu]-na-mu.

⁴⁹⁵ The exclamation mark in front of dahanga on the copy probably refers to the lack of the determinative GIŠ or NA₄, but it is often lacking.

⁴⁹⁶At the beginning of the line there is more space than needed for the sign KAR, which is restored by G.F. del Monte, "Utruna...", Or. Ant 17, 179. Moreover on the copy there is manifestly a space between A and PÍ. which renders karpianzi as one word less probable.

⁴⁹⁷ A good parallel for the eye disease cataract is KUB 24.13 ii 6: IGI.HI.A-wa-aš-ma-ták-kán kam-ma-ra-an ar-ha da-an-du "Den Star (der Augen Wolke) sollen Sie dir wegnehmen": V. Haas/H.J. Thiel, Die Beschwörungsrituale der Allaiturah(h)i und verwandte Texte, AOAT 31, 1978, 105. A genitive. of the eves. is not likely here.

⁴⁹⁸ The position at the end of a sentence of the place name Partaparta, which occurs nowhere else, is remarkable. Cf. the position of a proper name in KUB 15.11 iii 5' and 7'. The name is listed in the index to KUB 48 with a question mark.

All that can be seen of a possible a | n-da is the head of the vertical wedge of AN.

⁵⁰⁰ G.F. del Monte, "Utruna...", Or. Ant. 17, 180 also has ÚŠ-an.

Restoration of G.F.del Monte, "Utruna...", Or. Ant. 17, 180.

Restoration nam-m]a is uncertain. From kue it can be inferred that KARAŠ is in the plural. The singular uizzi in 12 and 13 indicates that the subject KARAŠ must be taken as N. pl. In W. Drohla, Die Kongruenz zwischen Nomen und Attribut sowie zwischen Subjekt und Prädikat im Hethitischen, 1934, 17 ff. we find other passages which show that KARAŠ covers another subst. (N.) as well as tuzzi (C.) and lahha (C.).

⁵⁰³ As acc., EZEN₄ purulliyan is remarkable. Usually EZEN₄ purulliyaš. In V. Haas, Der Kult von Nerik, 441, Hakmiš should be added to the places where the purulli festival is celebrated.

504 A main clause begins already in line 10 with nu-. Differing view: G.F. del Monte, "Utruna...", Or. Ant.

⁵⁰⁵ For dahanga see V. Haas, Der Kult von Nerik, 90 and 168 f.
506 For kammara- as eye disease see H. Otten, Die Überlieferung des Telipinu..., 413 f.
507 Does the place name at the end of the paragraph indicate where the offering is made? Such a positioning occurs too seldom to provide an answer.

Here DÛ (iya-) has possibly the same pregnant connotation as in Hatt. iv 61: "to do evil, to undertake (something hostile)": Cf. Hatt., 37 and J. Friedrich, Staatsverträge... I, MVAeG 31/1, 159. AU, 125 ff. has objections to such a rendering. Another possibility is that the armies are the subject of DÙ-an-zi, which gives as translation: "even if they have no success whatever" (with DÙ in the positive pregnant connotation "to have success"). A major objection to this rendering lies in the 3rd pl., because "the armies" occurs twice in the same sentence with a singular personal form uizzi. Nonetheless the combination mān ... -ya (as in J. Friedrich, Staatsverträge... I, MVAeG 31/1, 32 f.) lends some support to the rendering "even though", which does not accord with the first translation. Ú-UL ku-it-ki comes after the verb in order to place great emphasis on it.

As partitive apposition, kuieš does not have to take on the gender of the nearest subst. (KARAŠ N.). Hence "... the armies, which (persons are part of them)..." (W. Drohla, Kongruenz..., 10 f.). For the anaphoric enclitic pers. pron. 3rd pl. C. in nom. = -at see W. Drohla o.c. 55ff. and particularly 61.

On the analogy of takšan arha pai- = "to fly home halfway", in ornithomancy (thus F.Sommer apud L. Zuntz, Die hethitischen Ortsadverbien..., 18 and likewise A. Archi, "L'ornitomanzia...", SMEA 16, 153: "andare via a mezz'aria" and takšan arha nai- = "rivolgere via a mezz'aria"), the translation here could be "to split up halfway". The announcement "in two equal parts" would seem, however, to make more sense here than the announcement that the armies split up "halfway". For a comment on takšan see E.Neu, Endungsloser lokative..., 13-15, where E. Laroche's explanation of takšan as a neuter used adverbially (adj. or part.) = "égal" is cited. Takšan šarra- (subst.) = "demi-part".

A passive form of ariya- cannot be restored here. According to E. Neu (Interpretation..., StBoT 5, 13) there are only passive forms of the -šk- formation of ariya-. In any case EŠ or IŠ must have stood after RI. The 1st pl. praet. act. is one of the possible restorations.

⁵¹⁹ Konkordanz suggests a join of this text with KUB 15.28 + IBoT 3.125.

There was probably another line of text between lines 2' and 3'. This line has not been numbered in order to preserve correspondence with the numbering on the copy. The size of the tablet admits of a considerable amount of text at the beginning of the lines. Hence, for example, DUTU-ŠI or more could be assumed to have stood before the restored kuwapi in line 8' (only given by C. Burde, Hethitische medizinische..., StBoT 19, 5).

CORPUS OF TEXTS

⁵³⁸ In view of its position at the end of a sentence, huw]alpanzinam[i is very likely a 1st pr. sing. of a verb huwalpanzinai- not yet encountered elsewhere. Although an adj./part. huwalpant occurs in KBo 13.34 iv 4' (K.K. Riemschneider, Babylonische Geburtsomina in hethitischer Übersetzung, StBoT 9, 1970, 28 and 35), the surmised meaning, an indication of a physical deformity, excludes the possibility of our verb being based on it. More plausible is the identification huwalpanzinai- = 'to stitch with', 'to ornament' (cf. HEG H, 281 with lit.) or 'provide(d) with an ornamental button' (K.K. Riemschneider, Babylonische..., StBoT 9, 79-81). For -uwa- instead of -u-, reference can be made to E. Neu, Der Anitta-Text, StBoT 18, 44. In our line, GUŠKIN-it can plausibly be filled in before huwalpanzinami.

⁵⁴⁰ Meaning given for minu- in A. Goetze, The Hittite Ritual of Tunnawi, 71⁺²⁶⁰. ⁵⁴¹ Probably "1 silver hand" should be restored at the beginning of this line.

The meaning assumed for anda damenk- is based on compounds comprising damenk-. 546 Appan išgar-: rendered as "to pierce", as in H.M. Kümmel (Ersatzrituale, StBoT 3, 1661 and 138) and S.R. Bin-Nun (The Tawananna..., TdH 5, 199⁺¹⁶⁹). This piercing of the rear side is only possible with hollow objects, perhaps in order to attach a ring at the back.

⁵⁴⁷ Restoration based on Rev. 13'.

⁵⁴⁸ PAP-nu is followed by the sign DA (instead of IT?). Both readings produce an incomprehensible form,

⁵⁴⁹ Although A-NA is a possible reading at the beginning of the line, I have opted for a numeral, since the sort of women is not further specified. 2 would be possible instead of 11, since the sign 10 (or 1) is too damaged

⁵⁵⁰ It is possible to read pa-aš-šu[- after I-MUR.

A restoration to form "Piyamaradu(s) could be considered, though with caution, since that is the only name handed down so far which would fit. The mention of the name of an opponent without the context clearly being hostile would be remarkable.

 $^{^{553}}$ A-aš-šu-la-ni = a-aš-šu-la-an-ni[?]

⁵⁵⁴ A form of PAP-nu = pahšanu- (= "to protect") is the obvious assumption, but no existing form can be deduced from what is written.

⁵⁵⁵ Is this unknown part. or adj. related to kariulli "headdress"?

The meaning "to weave" for šara- is uncertain. In KUB 42.38 ii 22 "to plait " would be possible: a golden wreath "plaited" of gold (cf. H. Klengel, "Die Hethiter...", Ar. Or. 47, 89⁵²).

⁵⁶⁰ I have marked the end of the lines, because the end of the tablet is marked on the copy.

For ^DZawalli see A. Archi, "Il dio Zawalli…", AoF 6, inter alia 94.

In the translation, aššulani is assumed to be the dative of aššulatar = "well-being" (cf. E. Neu, Endungsloser lokativ, 15²⁹).

⁵⁵⁹ Although "dream" at the beginning of a line and followed by another substantive or personal name is always rendered as "dream of ...", in the few cases in which a verb directly follows on the second substantive, the latter is taken to be subject of the verb.

 $^{^{561}}$ Ammel = predicative: "of me". Its position after the substantive makes it difficult to translate it as "my". 562 For EGIR UGU uwa- (+ -kan), often in oracles, see HW², 157. It is remarkable that the substantive behind which the mouse ascends is not mentioned there. Many substantives are mentioned in HW², 159.

⁵⁶³ Instead of IT, DU is possible. The spelling of all forms of uwa- and uda- with U constitutes a problem here.

This restoration is based on KUB 15.22:10', in which the shield is meant to be a protection against evil (abl.).

⁵⁷⁰ It may be assumed that these vows were made by the queen on behalf of the king (cf. lines 11' and 15').

571 The scribe probably omitted by accident a horizontal stroke after SI. A comparable passage in Rev. 23'

⁵⁶⁶ The unknown officials who are probably concerned with an upati (= loan?). In F. Pecchioli Daddi, Mestieri..., 562 f.

567 It would not seem that this necessarily is column ii, as designated by O. Carruba, Das Beschwörungsritual für die Göttin Wišurijanza, StBoT 2, 1966, 31.

568 This is probably the second part of a proper name ending in -šarruma.

569 Collation supports the probability of a single stroke here.

contains ^DSIN instead of ^DUTU-ŠI.

⁵⁷² Another possibility is tehhi.
573 Collation renders KÁN more likely than AN.
574 The number 20, for example, is also possible.

⁵⁷⁵ Cf. Rev. 24'.

⁵⁷⁶ It is not certain that a gloss sign is intended here, since the same word in line 9' is possibly accompanied by a numeral.
577 Collation shows that DU is another possibility.

⁵⁷⁸ A trace is discernible on the tablet.

⁵⁷⁹ This divine name has been restored on the analogy of KBo 4.10+ and KBo 9.98+.

⁵⁸⁰ Probably a participle belonging to NINDA.HI.A. I can form no appropriate verb from the text remains. Pár-ši-an-te-eš seems difficult.

⁵⁸¹ Other restorations are possible, since the amount of space available is uncertain.

⁵⁸² The space available prompted me to opt for one sign, hence for a 3. pl.

⁵⁸³ Cf. Obv. 18'.

⁵⁸⁴ This possibly neuter participle could be used to indicate that the object is made in a "Hurrian" fashion. It is also possible that the object is made of gold (and) lapis lazuli, which is hurlaimant.

The ending of uppiyas makes dependence on pihhi problematical to explain. See, however, note on transliteration of line 18'.

⁵⁸⁶ Since it is highly likely that the queen makes these vows, "sie", not "er" occurs in O. Carruba, Das Beschwörungsritual..., StBoT 2, 31.

6.14 (teration [[[[[[Bo 1607) x[]

⁵⁸⁷ The verb would seem to be missing.

⁵⁸⁸ It is questionable whether there is any question of a-ši-iš-ši :up-pi-ya-aš here, since in "Anaphore et deixis en Anatolien", in: Hethitisch und Indogermanisch, 1979, 147-152 (p. 148), E. Laroche calls the hapax ašiš in KUB 3.99 ii 18 "une fabrication artificielle, sans valeur linguistique". Moreover uppiyaš constitutes a problem, as it does in line 9'.

⁵⁸⁹ Cf. KUB 15.1 iii 32'.

The extent of the damage to the text of lines 4'-6' gives rise to many problems, particularly because of the uncertainty as to where the verbal forms are. In line 5', for example, an ostensibly appropriate SUM-hi is impossible. In line 4', pi-e-da is also possible. In line 6' išhaššarwanti is most likely, but what does it qualify?

⁵⁹¹ Lack of space renders the expected nu-wa impossible.
⁵⁹² For this logogram, see H.A. Hoffner, "Birth...", JNES 27, 199 ff. and most recently G.M. Beckman, Hittite Birth Rituals, StBoT 29, 1983, 48 f.

The vocabulary of this text as a whole closely resembles the "protokollartig" text KUB 31.77 (ušantari, unh. mān EGIR-pa TI-an-za, šallanu, Neriq), though lacking any direct connection with it.

595 The same form occurs in KUB 38.120 i 43 for the first time: H.G. Güterbock, Kumarbi..., 36.

⁶⁰¹ After photo collation by S. Košak, without the last horizontal stroke.

⁵⁹⁷ CHD L-N, 56: "weed-grown". Evidently the roof had to be cleaned and repaired after a hard winter. Cf. H.A. Hoffner, "Studies in Hittite Vocabulary, Syntax, and Style", JCS 29, 1977, 151-156 (p. 152⁺⁶).

⁶⁰⁰ The content of lines 6 to 14 closely resembles, also in use of words, KUB 21.19+ iii 16'-25': Cf. D. Sürenhagen, "Zwei Gebete...", AoF 8, 1981, 94 f. For the neglect of Nerik by earlier kings, see KUB 21.27+ i 16 ff. I have deliberately rendered EGIR-pa ep- differently in 11 and 14. "To take into use" is based on the meaning "to take (as residence)" in KUB 1.1 ii 53 (cf. HED A-I, 276).

⁶⁰² The most plausible reading is MA.

⁶⁰³ Although A-MA is written instead of ÍD like in KUB 36.83 iv 11.

Although the signs in the copy look more like BANŠUR, ma-al- is possible.

⁶⁰⁵ These gods are only closely coupled together in Hitt.-Hurr, texts and are in accordance with the West-Hurr. conception of Hepat, instead of Istar, as spouse of the Stormgod (I. Wegner, Gestalt..., AOAT 36, 44). 606 Cf. KUB 15.11 iii 13' ff. and 19' ff.

⁶⁰⁷ Although kunk- occurs with AŠ-RU "to erect at a place" (N. Oettinger, Die Stammbildung..., 179), it is difficult to link these two together in this passage if a main clause begins with [nu] in 12, unless we assume that the place itself "is filled with oil". In that case line 12 would run: "(on which) for the goddess, my lady, \dots (is) erected \dots ". 608 City in Kizzuwatna, as evidenced by KUB 40.2 Obv. 27 where [ya] can be restored (C. Kühne, [&]quot;Bemerkungen...", ZA 62, 241). It is likely that from roughly this place Piyamaradu left Asia Minor by sea.

⁶⁰⁹ Also possible as adv. = "really"; hantan is not necessarily a predicate.

⁶¹⁰ Before Kummanni a divine name could be considered.

A silver period is promised in KUB 15.29:7'.

⁶¹² A copy of the Oby. is according to the edition "nicht lohnend".

⁶¹³ Unuwai- is, preceded by the unexplainable hutla, also in KUB 56.21 line 3' and possibly in line 9'.

⁶¹⁴ The combination of hutla and a form of unuwai- also occurs in KUB 56.21:3'. Instead of "decorated", "one shall decorate" is, for example, another possibility.

⁶¹⁵ Although tethi/eššar is often rendered with "thunder", it is better to distinguish, where possible, between thunder (hašihaši), lightning (wantema-) and thunderstorm (tethima-/tetheššar). Thunder and lightning are the weapons of the Stormgod. The fact that tethima can be heard (KUB 17.35 ii 12) need not mean that it must be translated as thunder. What makes the translation of these words difficult is that often the words thunderstorm, Gewitter, donnern, thunder, etc. are inaccurately used in the spoken language.

⁶¹⁶ In the texts dealt with here, Arzawa also occurs in KUB 15.6 ii 12' (fr.), KUB 31.69 Obv.? 3' and 7'.

A large part of the Obv. of the tablet consists of extracts from more extensive vows containing promises of the celebration of various special, non-canonical festivals, some of which, to the best of my knowledge, have hitherto been unknown. Basically column i contains mainly extracts from earlier vows wherein, primarily, special festivals are promised. Column ii is "protokollartig". Since the surface is seriously damaged as a whole, the damage is given only where significant.

⁶²⁰ The transliteration of lines 17 and 18 is very uncertain as regards the end and beginning respectively. Although the sign after -YA most resembles UN, UN-an is grammatically impossible if the beginning of line 18 has -at as direct object of the verbal form ending in -iš-ši.

621 Probably -wa-iš-ši is possible instead of -ši-iš-ši. The first signs of the verb would seem to be U and NU.

But unuwai- never occurs with anda.

⁶²² How far the name of the river continues is not clear.

⁶²³ If SUD is the correct reading, the following -ra is incomprehensible.

⁶²⁴ Reading uncertain.

⁶²⁵ This construction is comparable to KUB 6.45+ i 27 f.: nu-za A-WA-TE.MEŠ ku-e A-NA DINGIR.MEŠ EN.MEŠ ar-ku-wa-ar DÙ-mi.

 $^{^{626}}$ The form ending in -ma-an-zi renders iš- impossible. 627 No a-aš discernible.

ho d-ds discernible.

628 Is this an exceptional acc. complement of NAPIŠTU?
629 As to KUB 56.19 in G.M. Beckman, Hittite Birth Rituals, StBoT 29, 256 ff., which contains a transliteration, translation and commentary on line 1-16. The text of column ii seems to be completely different from that of column i.

⁶³⁰ Beckman: $e^{-ku^{3}}$ -zi. The meaning of u-iz-zi fits better.

⁶³¹ Beckman: *a-pi-e*²-[*ya*².
632 Not in Beckman. The construction is comparable to the well-known ki-i ku-it.

⁶⁴³ Could a form of allalla be read here (Cf. HW², 54 f.)?

⁶⁴⁴ Or: think poorly of.

⁶⁴⁵ Muwattalahitašši- could be an adjective of Luwian muwattalahit- (cf. DLL, 72).

⁶⁴⁶ Is this the abl. of the Part. pr. of nakuššiya-?

⁶⁴⁸ Gen. sg. is possible in such a construction according to E. Neu, "Studie über den Gebrauch von Genetivformen auf -waš des hethitischen Verbalsubstantivs -war, in: Gs. Kronasser, 1982, 116-148 (p. 143). ⁶⁴⁹ Reading and translation absolutely uncertain.

⁶⁵⁰ It is not necessary to assume any confusion here with harnau-, as Beckman does.

⁶⁵¹ The reading mizzi gives the daughter as subject of pai-. In Beckman the mother is the subject.

⁶⁵² For literature on this temple-like building, see Beckman, Hittite Birth Rituals, StBoT 29, 113. In addition:

P. Gentili, "L'edificio šinapši nei rituali Ittiti", La Columbaria 47, 1982, 3-37. If DÙ is used to express literally "to make", the reference here is to a model of a šinapši (Beckman: "treat").

⁶⁵³ To the best of my knowledge a city hitherto not attested in the texts.

⁶⁵⁴ Like -aš in 5 and 6, -an must refer to šinapši, which is taken to be genus C.

⁶⁵⁵ A name which does not occur in NH.

⁶⁵⁸ My translation is based on the assumption that a problem arose as to which god the daughter was to serve. From 27 it appears that, if no solution is found, the father would then install a hierodule for the Stormgod. 659 Reading very uncertain.

⁶⁶⁰ Cf. CHD L-N, 200 s.v. maršešš-. Of all cases which occur, only here is tapri- preceded by GIS (see F. Pecchioli Daddi, Mestieri.... 398).

⁶⁶⁸ Although little space is available, this is the most plausible restoration.

⁶⁷³ If the restoration at the beginning of this line is correct and if neither INA nor $\check{S}A$ should be restored (for which there is little space) because of [zi] in line 5'), then it would constitute a highly remarkable vow. The change of person (he, me) is based on the -wa-mu restoration.

⁶⁷⁴ For this extraordinary vow, see note to transliteration.

⁶⁷⁵ Only the worst damages are indicated.

⁶⁷⁶ The direct object is probably Ù-an, which would have to be restored somewhere in this line.

⁶⁷⁷ The choice of <URU> is prompted by the limited amount of space available.

Although the sign TA on the copy, grammatically $e\check{s}ir$ is required here, if a form of $e\check{s}$ - = "to be" is intended.

⁶⁷⁹ The ending -mi is remarkable. Cf. N. Oettinger, Die Stammbildung..., 455¹³¹.

⁶⁸⁰ The reading is obscure because of serious damage.

GA]M a-ri-ya-u-en nu-mu k[i-

3' p]i?-an-na SI x SÁ-at ar-ku-wa-[ar?

⁶⁸¹ The place name accords with the index to KUB 56. Another possibility is URU-LIM-ya-at-ta.

⁶⁸² The last sign is not -i or -in.

⁶⁸³ This goddess also occurs in a prayer of Muwatalli: KUB 6.45+ ii 30.

⁶⁸⁴ As far as I can ascertain, the verb iknu- does not occur in any of the published texts, hence the meaning attributed to it here is based purely on affiliation with the stem of ekan- = ice.

⁶⁸⁵ The text contains "was", not the proper grammatical form "were".

⁶⁸⁶ The text at the beginning of this line is incomprehensible.

⁶⁸⁷ If correctly translated, this is the rather rare phonetic spelling. The position of ^{GIS}kurakki after DÙ-mi is strange if a new sentence begins with na-at-ta meaning "and for you ...".

⁶⁸⁸ The structure of the entire passage is obscure. The interrogative sentences could equally be confirmative sentences.

⁶⁸⁹ The translation of the text as indicated in note to the transliteration would read: "and for the city [I] will for you", etc.

⁶⁹⁴ The literal translation of this form given in N. Oettinger, Die Stammbildung..., 136⁵: "es wird gehängt" would be unsuitable here. Passive forms of gank- do not occur in E. Neu, Interpretation..., StBoT 5.

⁶⁹⁵ From Tarhuntašša to Hattuša? The meaning "to carry off as booty" would seem less appropriate here.

⁶⁹⁶ This could be followed by: "and we questioned him".
697 For this meaning see H.G. Güterbock, "Noch einmal die Formel parnaššea šuwaizzi", Or. 52, 1983, 73-80 (p. 78 ff.). ⁶⁹⁸ This city is not mentioned in RGTC 6.

⁶⁹⁹ This rhyton is mentioned in S. Alp, Beiträge zur Erforschung des hethitischen Tempels. Kultanlagen im Lichte der Keilschrifttexte, neue Deutungen, 1983, 125¹⁵⁸. Must be removed as place name from the index to KUB 56, p. X. No such rhyton in O. Carruba, "Rhyta...", Kadmos 6, 88 ff.

⁷⁰⁰ The stem of this unidentified object resembles the Luwian verbal form tiwatanišša.

⁷⁰¹ For a join of this text with KUB 60.118, see D. Groddek, Hethitische Texte in Transkription. KUB 60, DBH 20, 2006, 115-117.

⁷⁰² Although unusual before Arušna, the space between DINGIR and URU admits of a specific divine name and not merely DINGIR-LIM or -LUM. Cf. RGTC 6, 41.

⁷⁰³ A restoration based on comparable passages gives rise to problems. Since here the queen probably makes a vow on behalf of the king (cf. line 4'), any restoration like kiš-an IK-RU-UB ma-a-an-wa-mu DINGIR-

LUM E]N-YA TI-nu- $\dot{s}i$ (KUB 15.1 ii 2 f.) is impossible. In analogous vows made by the queen on behalf of the king (KUB 15.1 i 5 and 21) the object of TI-nu (= D UTU- $\dot{S}I$) is placed directly in front.

⁷²⁵ This line and line 12' contain many readable signs, but their interrelationship escapes me.

⁷²⁶ This form is not given in N. Oettinger, Die Stammbildung....

⁷²⁷ With S. Košak, review of KUB 56, ZA 78, 1988, 145-149 (p. 146).

The transliteration and translation of 17'-20' are given in I. Wegner, Gestalt..., AOAT 36, 96. Instead of Hepat, she reads Ištar.

⁷²⁹ In Wegner, the text of this line ends here.

⁷³⁰ Wegner: TUKUL^{MEŠ}.

⁷⁴⁵ The only link with KUB 15.29 is the (extremely likely) occurrence of the same proper name Šaušgaziti. No distinction is made by column numbers on the copy. The numbers of the lines of the left-hand and the right-hand column do not agree.

746 According to the copy, the trace after HI is not A. Nevertheless A is most plausible.

747 The sign UZU at the end of the line is probable. In the right-hand column a form of parā handandatar is possible.

 $^{^{748}}$ A form of handandatar 'divine justice' is to be expected here. 749 This is possibly the beginning of the main clause after the relative clause in 8.

⁷⁵⁰ This text was published previously in J. de Roos, "A Hittite Tablet...", JEOL 25, 67ff. I have made alterations to line 4', 9' and 11' based on the valuable suggestions made by Prof. H.G. Güterbock, to whom I express my warm thanks.

⁷⁵¹ Line 10' could end with kiš-an IK-RU-UB.

The restoration $h\acute{e}$ -[e-e \acute{e} -ti is extremely tentative, for up till the present no 2nd pr. sing. of he \acute{e} - has been found in extant texts (letter from Prof. Güterbock of 17-8-1979).

⁷⁵⁴ As compared with the aforementioned article in JEOL, certain alterations to the translation had to be made, because the original Dutch translation contains ambiguities that have led to an incorrect rendering of the text in English.

⁷⁵⁵ No translation is given for harnai. According to H.G. Güterbock: "a (liquid) substance, perhaps some kind of ointment?" (see, however, note to KUB 15.1 i 26 ff.).

⁷⁶¹ In view of the remains, a construction composed of a part. ending in -an + tehhi = "I am going to ..." is improbable.

762 For an expected "to" (the Sun-god) see note to transliteration.

763 IR-TUM possible for example? Human karu is then the result. Cf. 366/v 3'.

⁷⁷¹ In view of the impossibly large amount of 60x50 litres for one pithos, either the first part of this line does not belong with 1 DUG harši-[as I presume or the Hittite measure parisu denotes a different volume than the Mesopotamian 50 litres, as suggested as a possibility by Th.P.J. van den Hout (RlA 7, 524).

⁷⁷² It is remarkable that this word does not occur in C. Burde, Hethitische medizinische..., StBoT 19. Adj. hadduliš inter alia in KUB 48.119 Rev? 8. If this 3rd singular as subject refers to the king, then the vow could have been made by the queen.

⁷⁷³ In 6' (IŠTAR) 1309/u links up with 543/u. H. Otten wrote very kindly in a personal letter that 1506/u could also belong to this tablet. A direct join with these two fragments seems to me however impossible.

This is one of the very rare vows with A-NA + personal name in the first line. Cf. KUB 15.1 iii 48' and 15.18 ii 7'.

⁷⁷⁵ In erasure the signs ŠI+AŠ.

 $^{^{776}}$ An-da in erasure.

Construction as in KUB 48.123 iv 16-18? The verb KAR (KUB 15.28 iii 11) goes without -kán.

⁷⁷⁸ -za makes a restoration DÙ-mi or iyami impossible, tehhi is possible.

The only subst. ending with -witi in J. Jie, A Complete Retrograde Glossary of the Hittite Language, PIHANS 71, 1994, is awiti. According to HW², however, never with this plene i writing.

⁷⁸⁰ Though problematic, the complement -it is easily legible.

⁻MA implies a preceding UMMA. But -ma can also be part of a personal name such as Ari-LUGAL-ma.

⁷⁸² KASKAL-az is impossible.

Remnants make a join with KBo 41.60 impossible. Moreover the tablets are from different find spots. For the reverse sequence arha SIG₅-in see inter alia KUB 48.119 Rev. 12 and KBo 41.59 ii 8'.

⁷⁸⁴ For awiti as "winged lion monster" see a.o. RIA 8, 237 and 244. It seems strange that the queen would "have" one.

According to Th.P.J. van den Hout, "Tuthalija IV. und die Ikonographie hethitischen Grosskönige des 13. Jhs", BiOr 52, 1995, 545-573 (p. 565 ff.), kurutauwanza (in 12') could mean "wearing a pointed crown". kurutanza was not yet attested at that time. In this instance it would have been worn by the queen. I have assumed that both words although with a different suffix (-uwant- and -nt-), have the same meaning. An argument against the idea that kurutanza would belong to a promised article as object accompanying IKRUB is the fact that the following lines (10'-12') seem to be the content of the promise in 9' with the direct speech particle -wa in 11'. For IKRUB with an object see e.g. KUB 15.11:114.

 $^{^{786}}$ Remnants do not resemble DÙ.

⁷⁸⁷ In erasure.

⁷⁸⁸ Or, less probable before KÙ.BABBAR, 10 GÍN.

⁷⁸⁹ Lines 4' to 8' are almost literally identical to KUB 15.28+ ii 6'-10'. Although here in line 6' there is a verbal form in the first personal plural as compared with first singular in KUB 15.28+ ii 9' I have let the queen alone make the vow, because there are no texts in which the king and the queen make a vow together.

⁷⁹⁰ At the beginning of the line is a bit more space than is needed for the proposed restoration, if the restoration in line 4' is correct. Restoration -za here, because king and queen are supposedly subject of TI-ante-eš.

⁷⁹¹ Expected: ŠUNU as in KUB 15.28+ ii 9'.

The surprising last sentence of the text could be related to KUB 15.28 ii 10' which lacks a verb. Assuming the statues have not yet been delivered, the priest could know more about this. This is the only vow that concludes like this. See also note to KBo 53.112.

⁷⁹³ As regards the use of words, 367/u fits perfectly with KUB 57.109. It is about people who begrudge Hattušili the kingship. It is not inconceivable that 367/u:1' is the ending of KUB 57.109:7', in which case an inf. of iya- would have to be restored.

⁸⁰⁷ For the translation of this line, see note to the translation of KUB 48.124 Rev. 13'.

⁸⁰⁸ Since arkuwar must be acc., a form such as tiyauwaš must have followed in the gen. on INIM.

⁸⁰⁹ In RGTC 6, 470 Utima is mentioned as city with the writing ^{URU}U.

⁸¹⁰ If LI is correct, then a restoration hat-tu]-li-eš-zi seems possible.

⁸¹³ Sign remnant after DA is very unclear. This same writing occurs sometimes in later texts according to CHD P, 345.

 $^{^{816}}$ Sign remnant indicates TAR or NU. Certainly not IK.

⁸¹⁷ This is the first occurrence of this country in a text. KUR without URU as in KUR Mukiš, KUR Mizri, etc.

in a vow see KUB 15.10 i? 6'.

Although a city occurs in KUB 60.126:8' which begins with Alhu, the reading Alhuttiya proposed by

Although many readings are possible (including ZABAR), I prefer a form of UD with the preceding genit. dependent on a subst. of it. UD could be preceded by maltannaš (= of the promised), but then one would be inclined to expect maltešnaš (= of the vow).

⁸²³ Written, admittedly, as GU.

⁸²⁴ In erasure.

Most probable restoration: 3rd pres. pl. dependent on a possible mān earlier in the line. I have restored the form nu-un-tar-r[i-ya-an-zi, although according to CHD L-N, 473 this has so far not occurred in any text.

⁸²⁶ GUŠKIN is the most likely restoration.

⁸²⁷ I cannot explain this form of the verbal noun ašešuwar. In stead of š[a a reading SISKUR is impossible.

⁸²⁸ From line 12 the text runs remarkably parallel with KUB 48.126:7'-9'. Because of the same matter of an eagle, an identical vow is evidently made and the same gift is promised to another goddess. For another eagle

The translation is based on a presumed preceding: "When in a dream".

This is the third passage in texts where this stone has not been completely preserved and where the reading is uncertain. Cf. CHD L-N, 334 and H. Otten, "Tiergefässe im Kult der späten hethitischen Grossreichszeit", in: K. Emre et al. (ed.), Anatolia and the Ancient Near East. Studies in Honor of Tahsin Özgüc, 1989, 365-368 (p. 366 ff.).

⁸³¹ Transliteration in S. Alp, Beiträge zur Erforschung des hethitischen Tempels..., 15. In the review of this book by H. Freydank, OLZ 80, 1985, 249-252 (p. 251), alterations are suggested. Dr. C. Karasu (Ankara University) has very kindly collated the original tablet for me and has written in a personal letter that here is a ŠI readable. So I did not follow H. Freydank. The other lines of the tablet are of no interest for a better understanding of the text.
